Budget request hints at tuition hike

Revenue increases based on estimates from council

UK's biennial budget request for 1994-1996 may provide some clues about the tuition increase the Coun-cil on Higher Education is expected to announce Nov. 8.

According to the request, which was released last month, UK's Planning and Budget Office anticipates a 22.5 percent increase in tuition revenue from the University System for the 1994-95 academic year and a 12.3 percent increase for the 1995-96 academic year.

The expected increase in tuition revenue does not mean, however, that UK anticipates an increase in student enrollment, said Joan McCauley, associate vice president

HE spokesman Norm Snyder denied the council staff provided any specific rate hike estimates to UK. He said the CHE's staff told UK the tuition increase would be between 5 and 14 percent.

what (the CHE) was estimating the increase to be," he said.

Carter said UK received a memo from the council labeled "not for release to the public," and that the memo contained estimates of an increase more specific than the 5-14 percent range described by Snyder.

Carter said many different factors.

Carter said many different factors go into the Planning and Budget Office's estimate of tuition revenue. "The problem is that there are in-state rates, out-of-state rates, under-

According to the biennial request, the expected tuition revenue for the University system during 1993-94 is $54,218,800. In 1994-95, it would increase to $66,435,000, and climb to to $74,628,500 by 1995-

Forewoman says jurors followed law

Speaker: Travel abroad helps personal growth

By Heather Reister Staff Writer

Travel abroad can have a tremendous impact on how people view the world and how they desclop personally, a UK professor said yesterday.

Angene Wilson, an education professor and associate director of international affairs at UK, asid the cross-cultural experiences gained from travel often challenge prejudicies, making people think in new ways that can lead to increased understanding and personal growth.

Wilson, who spoke at a conference of the Association of International Educators, also described a model for understanding the impact of international experiences.

Her model consists of two main categories with two subcategories under each.

The first category deals with gaining a global perspective, and its subcategories are "substantive knowledge" and "perceptual understanding."

Knowledge of the customs, traditions, social structure, lauguege and history of a host country all are benefits of international experience that Wilson lists under substantive knowledge.

Under perceptual understanding, Wilson refers to benefits such as open-mindedness and non-chanvinism that can be derived from an international experience.

Developing oneself and one's relationships is the second part of Wilson's model. Under this title come the subcategories personal

Now, as UK again prepares to meet the Bulldogs, this time at Starkville's Scott Field, the record is the same and a fairy tale year cer-tainly is in the making. So, if there's any motivational tool that Wildcat coach Bill Curry likely would use, it seems vindication would work best.

"It might help some in preparation, but once the game starts, it doesn't help at all because it's this year's team playing against this year's opponent. Its a totally different feeling," he said at yesterday's press luncheon.
"You can't get caught up in thinking about either the past or the future. You look at right here, now. There are a lot of folks who aren't present for their own lives for that very reason — because they are hung up on some terrible thing that happened when they were 6 years old."

Curry said the keys to success are simple: late game execution and holding on to the football.

"We are a team who gets into the fourth quarter with everybody with a chance to win," Curry said. "If we hang on to the ball, we win.

"If we give the other team the ball, then we are not quite strong enough to overcome that yet. Hopefully, we will continue to progress so that if we do err, as human beings will, we will be able to overcome that a vast majority of the time.

"So what we have done in the last four weeks? We've put our-selves in a position to win. We've managed to do it three times, but the last time we didn't quite have enough to overcome what we did to ourselves."

Curry said the Cats need to get back to basics and forget about last week's case of butterfingers and a burning by Georgia quarterback Eric Zeier, who lit up the Wildcat defense for John Elway-like stats.

As for vindication against Mississippi State, Curry thinks it will take care of itself.

Pinball's origins can be traced to the popular 19th century game bagatelle, in which players scored by hitting pins with balls. Technological advances helped bagatelle evolve into the digital pinball games of today.

Video games advance with technology

By Randy Yarger Contributing Writer

Fifteen years ago, there was Pong. Then came Space Invaders, and, of course, Pac-Man.

Now, more than a decade after Mr. and Ms. Pac Man chomped their way across America, arcade video games are bigger than ever. Street Fighter II, NBA Jam, Mortal Kombat — the list goes on.

Arcade games are cheap, fun and require little to no attention span. What more could a starving UK student ask for?

Not much, it seems, based upon the popularity of arcades around campus.

Steven Smith, supervisor at the Student Center Game Room, said that even though the game room offers billiards, ice hockey and foosball, "about one-fourth of the students come here solely to play the arcade games."

Some students almost live at the arcade, going there five or six days week.

Most students, however, like history sophomore Delmar Watkins, prefer to go once or twice a week to relieve stress.

Example set by Denny, King stands as reminder of true human goodness

Justice, like a chameleon, comes in many shades. This was especially and poignantly true last week in Los Angeles, where another long chapter in the Rodney King beating saga drew to a close. The two men accused of assaulting ruck driver Reginald Denny during a 1991 riot in South Central Los Angeles were acquitted of most felony charges associated with the incident. What makes this tragic case so touching is the fortitude and decency of the two victims, King and Denny, neither of whom offered words of hate or flying fists. All they asked for was unity. Their grace was enough to make the rest of us feel shameful and downright selfish.

Perhaps personal trauma helps place life in its proper perspec-tive. Since when did beating someone senseless or stealing a color television set become a substitute for due process?

Justice in the two Los Angeles beating trials should be defined not by verdicits, sentences or the successful execution of vendettas. It must be determined as a matter of conscience. If two people who are made victims of the most bitter civil rights infringements can find it in themselves to learn, forgive and reach out, there certainly must be hope for those of us who, at present, cannot.

In the past, the article said, Liberty had maintained a good standing with local civil rights officials. Apparently, the problem was conceived entirely by implementors of dederal standards, not by the black community itself.

Our nation, "newbodosical characteristics and the properties of the property of the properties of th community itself.

Our nation's psychological obsession with total equality has manifested itself in affirmative action programs that an increasing number of blacks are realizing don't help them at all.

Not only that, a Time survey found that 13 percent of blacks agree that government efforts go too far.
When government efforts go too far in the name of equity, a red flag goes up in my mind — and stamped in gold on the upper-left corner is a subtle but striking hammer and sickle.

vocates often are found among the legislative and educational elite, who follow a widely accepted and acclaimed Marxist tradition, calling for equalized benefits with sustained democratic rights. But actions like the penalizing of Liberty National Bank reveal that the force behind affirmative action is less than democratic. Egalitarian politics in America today are both disturbingly stimular to the politics of Soviet communism and blatantly socialist in practice.

When government efforts go too far in the name of equity, a red flag goes up in my mind - and stamped in gold on the upper-left corner is a subtle but striking hammer and sickle.

Now before some lame leftist screams "McCarthy," let me ex-plain in full the suggestions I'm making.

screams McCaulty, let the expensions I'm making.

Charts comparing the average incomes and employment of dirferent socioeconomic groups are published in the name of equity, but all they do is breed class envy and pin a label of defeat and benedence on lower groups.

The new mentality is being applied in every mode of our national life, giving its proponents the power of a full-scale regime, with the people of America's work-frorce to be moved around in specific numbers like pawns on a cheesboard.

Affirmative action's fiercest adtralization of power in a system that was intended to distribute it because the functional responsibil-ities of the system inevitably had to be turned over to the state to en-sure efficient implementation and compliance.

The natural result was that federal power soon exceeded — and diminished — the power of the working class.

Does this sound foreign to our modern American system? One need only to recognize such words as "centralization," "functional" and "efficient implementation and compliance" to realize what is being inflicted upon the American student and worker — black, white, male and female alike.

Another recognizable sign of the approaching red dawn is that major industries are feeling threatened by industries are feeling threatened by a tide of political groups demanding nothing less than total numerical redistribution of wealth.

A recent article in U.S. News & World Report tells about a New 8 & World Report tells about a Nike because, "Since blacks was many sneakers, they should proportionally share, as a group, in Nike profits."

Recent embryo cloning raises ethical concerns

By Paul Recer Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The cloning of human embryos by scientists at George Washington University raises ethical questions about genetic manipulation that neither science nor the government is ready to answer.

"The fact that there is a total mo-ral vacuum in this whole area is now finally being realized," Cyn-thia Cohen, head of the National Advisory Board on Ethics and Re-production, said yesterday.

Jeremy Rifkin, president of a biotechnology watchdog group, said the human cloning "represents a permicious form of eugenics."

Cohen and other experts said there now are no clear, specific guidelines to control research on what some believe is a slippery slope on the edge of human experi-mentation.

Some experts called for a moratorium on further human embryo research until clear limits can be set. The George Washington University researchers removed cells from a group of flawed human embryos and grew these cells into new embryos. Though this technique has been used in animal research, the experiment is thought to be the first using human embryos.

Though the cloning at George Washington did not involve embryos that could develop into a fully-realized human. Cohen said the whole idea raises the "chilling" possibility of mass-produced humans, or identical twins created at will for spare parts.

"Does this mean that our whole picture of what it is means to be a human being is going to change into something that is manufactured?" she asked.

A commentary in a Vatican newspaper described the human embryo research as "perverse" and periments.

Rifkin's group, the Foundation on Economic Trends, threatened to file lawsuits if the National Institutes of Health did not stop all federal sponsorship of human embryo research.

"No such experiments should be allowed in the United States or funded by the U.S. government," said Rifkin.

Officials at the American Fertility Society said the George Washington University research by a team did not breech general voluntary guidelines on human embryo

"There are very significant ethi-cal concerns involved," said AFS president Dr. Robert Visscher. "We would strongly suggest that there be an ethical review before further re-search is done."

search is done."

The ethics and reproduction panel, an independent board created by AFS and other biomedical organizations two years ago to consider such ethical questions, was caught off-guard by the announcement over the weekend that human embryos had been cloned.

"We were surprised," said Co-hen, the NABER director. "We had been assured that this sort of experi-ment wouldn't be done in this coun-try. We haven't discussed this issue at all."

Ray Moseley, director of the Medical Humanities Program at the University of Florida College of Medicine, said that the concern is not about the specific achievement of Hall and his team, but where it wight lead.

"In itself, it is not a whole lot dif-ferent from what has been happen-ing generally in in vitro fertiliza-tion," said Moseley.

CHE staff will make a recommen che staff will make a recommendation for tutition rates to the council then, and that the CHE probably will set the final rates that day.

He said student protests could have an effect on the decision of the council.

use its own judgement to determine the rates, he said.

"I think you can say the council members have paid attention to what the students said many times," Snyder said.

"The students should not think of this as an empty gesture because it is literally true that the council members and the council staff have not come to any firm decision."

If students are to have an impact, they must overcome the problem of student apathy that has plagued protest efforts in the past, student leaders say.

The students are trying to compile a small part of their project so they can give a presentation at the MacBeth National Conference at Bethany College next semester.

This conference will exam how Macintosh computer applications can be used in the humanities ocial sciences and science fields.

Although Wilson said her model is the outcome of research, she said it also may be used to assist educators in creating more beneficial study abroad programs.

"We need to think about designing study abroad so as to increase the impact," Wilson said.

Yesterday's conference, held at the Radisson Plaza Hotel, was de-signed to promote international ed-ucation, said Syham Manns, con-ference chairwoman and a UK immigration specialist.

again.

Prosecutors said they were prepared to present oral arguments on the two issues, but the judge said he wanted them in writing.

Last week, a jury acquitted Henry Watson and Damian Williams of the most serious charges stemming from the April 1992 rioting — attempted murder of Denny.

The prosecution must decide whether it wants to pursue one count of assault with a deadly weapon against Watson, 29, in the beating of truck driver Larry Tarvin. Jurors deadlocked on that count.

Watson was convicted of one count of misdemeanor assault on Denny and was released on his own recognizance.

Williams, 20, was convicted of committing mayhem on Denny and misdemeanor assaults on four other people.

He remains jailed and is seeking reduction of his bail from $580,000 to $35,000.

Watson's attorney, Earl Broady, has conceded that a man seen on videotape beating Tarvin is Watson, but has said that the attack amounted to only misdemeanor assault.

Both men had been jailed since their arrest in May 1992.

CANTERBURY, N.H. — The prospect of turning 40 was so depressing that Bev Tonkin knew she had to do something special.

So she talked about a dozen friends into dressing up as cowboys and robbing a train.

"I go through these periods and do something crazy, I guess," Ton-kin said yesterday.

Dressed up like cowboys, Ton-kin and her gang of desperados ter-rorized lovers of autumn leaves out for a weekend railroad jaunt.

The train owner gave permission, and preserved the surprise. Riders and crew got no advance warning. "The horses were all painted with Indian markings, and they were wearing cowboy hats and bandanas," passenger Catherine Goff said.
