Faculty Tenders Surprise Banquet to Doctor McVey

Dinner at Patterson Hall Celebrates Tenth Anniversary as President of the University

A surprise banquet celebrating the tenth anniversary of the administration of Dr. Frank L. McVey, president of the University of Kentucky, was given last night, at 8:30 o'clock in the banquet room of Boyd hall, by faculty of the university. Guests present, besides Dr. and Mrs. McVey, included university faculty members and their wives, county agriculture agents and wives, home demonstration agents and wives, Robert McGary, president of the men's student council, and Anna Crawford, vice president of the senior class, representing the student body. The occasion was featured by speeches of various faculty members lauding the work and character of President McVey, and by the presentation of gifts from the faculty and student body. Dean Boyd Presides. Dr. Paul P. Boyd, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, who presided over ceremonies of the evening, delivered the introductory address. Dr. George Roberts, of the College of Agriculture, next discussed the early history of the university and recounted, step by step, its growth and improvement since the founding. Dean Paul Anderson, of the College of Engineering, continued the program with an address. The president and the dean.

BLUE BLOOD

(By COTTON NOE)

(Written for and delivered at Faculty Testimonial Dinner to Doctor McVey, October 28, 1927) She came from old Virginia, oh, so many years ago. When I was just a little child her hair was white as snow. She must have been of royal blood, she talked of kings and queens. Of chivalry and tournaments, of castles and domains. Of plantations back at home, of slaves and banquet halls. Of powdered wigs and cavaliers, of mansions and of balls. Sometimes of blooded horse and hunt and woods in the chase. (Grandmother wore great jewels and a cap of filmy lace.) She read large tomes of poetry, of love and strange romance. (She said she came of Norman blood that traced clean back to France.) She owned a thousand acres of rich rolling, prosperous land, A knob of finest timber that the eye has ever scanned. She boasted of Kentucky's wealth in minerals and soil (And this was many years before we had discovered oil.) She gloried in her far-fung line of ancient ancestry. Their cattle on a thousand hills in lands beyond the sea. We loved dear old grandmother for she lived in fairy land. And sometimes she would tell us how granddaddy won her hand. He knew Gladstone at Eton, and had often heard him speak (Granddaddy was a classic shark, read Homer in the Greek.) And once there was a Greek contest in which he won a prize. When grandmother referred to this she'd all but rhapsodize. For granddaddy's opponent was the young Lord, Earl of Scotch. The next of blood and sometime heir to erstwhile Scottish throne. And I infer granddaddy killed two birds with this one stone: For here granddaddy always went and took a volume down. Demosthenes, she said it was, in vellum old and brown, And smoothed its wrinkled pages out, "And here's the precious prize." And then we'd read the other in grandmother's swimming eyes.

WILDCATS ARRIVE IN NASHVILLE FOR VANDY GAME

Blue and White Eleven Meets Powerful Commodore Saturday; Many First String Men Are on Bench

THIRD CONFERENCE GAME

Vanderbilt, Led by Spears, Is Favored to Win by a Heavy Score

By KENNETH GREGORY (Sports Editor of The Kernel) Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 28.—Twenty-five more or less crippled Wildcats arrived here this morning where tomorrow the Kentucky eleven engages Vanderbilt in their third conference contest. Amid the roars of the student body and the notes of Elmer Sulzer's 8-piece band the Wildcats and their managers left Lexington yesterday afternoon at 2:55 o'clock, spending the evening in Louisville, the guests of WHAS radio station and The Courier-Journal.

Not a single man on the trip is in good physical condition and an entirely new line-up will face the Commodore in tomorrow's encounter. There are fourteen regulars nursing injuries and none of these is likely to start. Those on the alling list are Belt, Scott, Porter, Lyons, Mohney, Jenkins, Drury, Lileman, Stone, Phipps, Bickel, Gibb, Miller and Dees.

Kentucky seems to have a first half team, and if they ever lift their stride in the second half the opposition had better look out for heavy fire. The Commodore have not been pointing for the Kentucky game and it is at these times that a team usually does the unexpected. The Vandy eleven, with Spears as their main cog, appeared at four or five touchdowns better than the Wildcats, but the Blue and White is about due for a reversal of fortune.

Kentucky's probable line-up will be: Walters and Covington, ends; Van Meter and Drury, tackles; Captain Wertz and Summers, guards; Pence, center; Porterwood, fullback; Jenkins and Griffith, halfbacks and Gibb, quarterback.

President McVey Has Gained Considerable Fame As Painter

Landscape Painting Wins Honorable Mention Southern Society of Artists Contest; Is Praised Highly HAS THIRTY PAINTINGS (By Prof. Carl M. Sax) When the jury of the Southern Society of Artists, in 1925, awarded honorable mention to the painter and certain landscape they had no idea that the much-sought honor was being bestowed on a college president. When the art critics of Louisville's principal papers devoted paragraphs to praising the work they failed to associate the name they mentioned with the president of the University of Kentucky. Even had they realized it, it would have been hard to connect them that Prof. Frank L. McVey had taken up the difficult art only five years before. Few people not connected with the world of art realize that President McVey, in addition to his many other brilliant qualities is a painter of marked ability. Contrary to the President's own opinion, he is not accorded his eminence because of his position with the university. A few years ago, in reply to genuinely enthusiastic remarks made by some of his guests, proposes one of his canvases. Doctor McVey quoted Dr. Johnson's comparison of a woman orator to a dog walking on its hind legs. That the remarkable thing was not that it was done well, but that it was done at all.

McVEY TELLS OF TEACHING CAREER

Began Career as Educator in Iowa High School While Taking Undergraduate Work in College NOTED AS AN ECONOMIST

Dr. Frank L. McVey, who closes the tenth year of his leadership at the university this week, and to whom this issue of The Kernel is dedicated, began his career as an educator in the high school at Orient, Iowa, between his sophomore and junior years in college. In the June 12, 1920 issue of "School and Society" an article entitled "Teaching As a Calling" by Doctor McVey was published. In this article he tells his own story of the events that have been most outstanding in his career as a teacher. He says: "Between my sophomore and junior years in the early nineties, I undertook to conduct the destinies of a small school in a western state. A salary of $45 a month. My enthusiasm for the work that I was doing was such that I felt then that if this payment were taken from me, I should still continue to teach. And when I returned to college and listened to Doctor Clopp's lectures on labor problems in the United States, I felt that I had solved two questions: one, as to my calling, and the other as to the specific thing that I should undertake to teach. After graduation...

TRIBUTES

Board of Trustees, Alumni, Faculty and Student Body Express Appreciation of Doctor McVey's Work

Dr. Frank L. McVey was selected President of the University ten years ago. I was honored by being chairman of the committee which recommended him to the Board of Trustees, who unanimously elected him as the head of the university. This was the greatest public service that I have ever performed or ever will perform. We have only to remember back ten years to realize what Doctor McVey has done for the University. Under him it has grown greatly in numbers; its equipment has been increased, and a million dollars has been expended in new buildings; but better than all that, Doctor McVey, realizing that after all, a teacher makes a university, has surrounded himself with an able faculty, and as a result the instruction given by our university is the equal of that given in any university anywhere. I know of no man who is his superior, and few who are his equal. Kentucky is indeed fortunate in having Doctor McVey as the head of its great university. RICHARD C. STOLL ALUMNI The University of Kentucky yesterday observed the tenth anniversary of Pres. Frank L. McVey's administration. Today the University of Kentucky looks back on ten years of unprecedented advancement and growth under the capable leadership of our president. The alumni of the University of Kentucky have come to look upon President McVey as a tower of strength in the advancement of their Alma Mater, a man who has denied himself monetary advancement in order that he might complete the work that he set out to do when he arrived on the campus ten years ago. To much cannot be said to voice the appreciation and respect that the alumni hold for President McVey. The undivided support and cooperation of the alumni, which has been evidenced and which will continue. The alumni know that so long as President McVey is at the head of the university, their Alma Mater will continue to grow and will each year assume new importance in the education of the nation. We have but the hope to express and that hope is that he remain with the University of Kentucky many more years. RAYMOND KIRK FACULTY A durable president is an American university is a joy forever. Pres. McVey is one of these. (Continued on Page Eight)

KICK-OFF IS AT 2:30 P. M.

The Kentucky Kitten after a long period of protracted training, will leave by bus for Georgetown on Monday, to fill their first football engagement of the season with their ancient rival, the Georgetown Cubs. On Hinton field at 2:30 o'clock. The game is a question of much interest and, as usual, the Kittens are favored to win, but the outcome is doubtful. Osborne, Johnson, and Hayes, very capable players, are crippled and suffering from injuries, but may be able to enter the combat. An unusual number of the players are suffering from shoulder injuries received in (Continued on Page Eight)

TRY-OUTS WILL BE NOVEMBER 7-12

Three Best Plays to Be Given on Amateur Night at Men's Gym; Much Interest in Shows in Strollers

ADD NEW PLAY TO LIST

The date of the Stroller try-outs has been postponed until November 7-12 according to a decision reached at a Stroller meeting last Tuesday. The prize for trying out has been increased from $1 to $5. Those who desire to try out are asked to file the following information before the try-outs: name, address, telephone number, and a time that will be most convenient in afternoon or night for a try-out. The committee will endeavor, if possible, to call the cast at this time. A new play "Heart" has been added to the list, and this play is for an all-night cast. This play together with the other try-outs may be obtained at the reading room, where there are two copies of each play. The committee to judge plays is composed of Addison Yestman, Hunter Moore, Mary Virginia Hall, Minnie Haggerty, Harry McSheehy, and Fred Davidson. Additional information relative to try-outs may be obtained from any member of this committee. The three best plays will be chosen from the group presented and will be given on Amateur Night. The date for this has not been set but will be reversed after the completion of the try-outs.

Anecdotes Show Doctor McVey is "Human" Despite Dignity And Scholarly Achievements

He's human—this august president of the University of Kentucky! At first sight, this tall gray-haired, erect man, his face austere set in deep lines, his eyebrows bending, his chin stiff, does not seem very prepossessing. Yet a more likeable, friendly, and entertaining person can rarely be found. Invariably, the stranger, after an interview, goes away saying to himself, "Why don't look it up, but his human after all." Of course he's human! Behind his forbidding and grim countenance, there is a great, fine comradely spirit as likeable and entertaining as any man's. Kindness is one of President McVey's chief characteristics. Ever since his first year as executive, he has been working to get an allowance (on retired faculty members. His interest in the faculty and in their families manifests itself in his willingness to grant leaves of absence for study, lectures, and meetings. A noted lecturer himself, Doctor McVey can sympathize with those professors who are called upon to deliver their lectures, and in their families manifests itself in his willingness to grant leaves of absence for study, lectures, and meetings. A noted lecturer himself, Doctor McVey can sympathize with those professors who are called upon to deliver their lectures, and in their families manifests itself in his willingness to grant leaves of absence for study, lectures, and meetings.

"Hurrah for him!" a member of his audience exclaimed. "Now he's beginning to speak like a Kentuckian." A more versatile man than this very human college president is seldom seen. His literary, educational, and economic activities are nationally known, but few people are aware of his ability to sketch, paint, and carve. On the mantel in the library of his Lexington home, the visitor may behold a beautiful little three-mast ship, carved from wood. This boat was made by President McVey while he was visiting up in Michigan one summer. During the last ten year, Doctor McVey has taken up painting, although he never practiced it before. On a bright sunny afternoon one may see the distinguished educator sketching amid the quaint scenery of Old Skaketown. Like other people, President McVey has his hobbies. He is an ardent automobilist. His friends often tease him about the number of cars he has bought, saying that he is getting poorer and poorer, since he started with a Cadillac and now drives a Dodge. The noted college executive is quite a fisherman and his friends boast that (Continued on Page Eight)

"To Want to Know" is Ideal Actuating Doctor McVey's Writings, Interviewer Learn

(By Kady Elveto) "Guiding a University from a troubled, small beginning, to a flourishing, progressive, and ten-year-old, is an accomplishment that ought to satisfy any man. But our president is not a noted lecturer, a scholarly author, a renowned economist—such a man is slow speaking to," I thought as I waited for the secretary to announce "please ten years." "So seeing my notebook, I entered the inner office, a large room, lined all around with bookshelves. At the farther end, his eyes beam kindly behind thick-rimmed glasses, sat the president of the University of Kentucky. "Doctor McVey, I'm very much interested in hearing of your literary achievements," I began as an opening. "Well, I've written some books, five or six—not very recent ones though," he answered, brushing his hand across his forehead. "Modern Internationalism," published in 1904 and republished in 1924; "History and Government of the 'Panic' of 1907," published in 1914; and "Making of the Town," published in 1916, are some of them. "I think," he said, "the 'Panic of 1907,' and 'The Populist Movement,' written in 1908. Of course there have been a great many papers and magazine articles written, but they are mostly in the shipping industry, the tin plate industry, educational matters, and so on." He continued, seemingly unaware of my astonishment at the variety of subjects upon which he has so skillfully written. "And, oh yes," he casually observed, "I edited the 'National Social Science Series,' twenty-five volumes written by well-known men and women. "That was a difficult task, wasn't it," I asked. "Yes it was. There is a great deal of work to be done in editing. I had to read hundreds of manuscripts before I selected the topics and the authors, because I must always bear in mind whether each particular work fits into the idea of the series." "I wonder what I'll ask him next," I thought anxiously, though I couldn't help smiling at the idea of my asking questions of a college president. I glanced up to find President McVey smiling at me. "He knows how to feel," I thought, and, encouraged by his smile, I said, "Which of your books do you like best?" (Continued on Page Eight)

Gridgraph Will Give Vandy Game Results

The gridgraph will be in operation tomorrow for the Vanderbilt-Kentucky game, and the student body will have an opportunity of following the game play by play as given over the gridgraph starting at 2 o'clock in the Men's gymnasium. News of the game will be brought the grid-graph by a special leased wire running direct from the press box at the football field in Nashville. An admission of 25 cents will be charged.

Doctor J. F. Shotwell Addresses Students

Dr. James Shotwell, noted authority on international affairs and professor of history at Columbia University, addressed the students and faculty of the University of Kentucky at a special convocation held in the men's gymnasium Monday morning, at the third hour. Following the invocation by the Reverend D. K. Kappa and the singing of Alma Mater by the men's glee club, Dr. Frank L. McVey introduced the speaker. Dr. Shotwell, whose subject was, "The American Locust," discussed the subject of international peace and stressed the fact that it was up to each and every American citizen should have a vital interest. Dr. Andrews pronounced the benediction. While in Lexington Dr. Shotwell was the guest of President and Mrs. McVey. O. D. K. TO MEET Omicron Delta Kappa will meet next Tuesday night, November 1, at 7 o'clock in the president's office. All members are urged to be present.

OUR PRESIDENT

President Frank L. McVey yesterday completed ten years as president of the University of Kentucky.

To those who have been closely in touch with the University of Kentucky little more could be said in praise of a man who has been not only responsible for the advancement and growth of the University but the very spirit of that growth and advancement.

President McVey came to the University in 1917 when our school, like other universities, was going through a dangerous period, caused by the war. In addition to this there was a certain amount of internal disorder that was making itself felt. In truth the University of Kentucky was on the verge of a decline. President McVey, seeing all this, set himself to the task and at the close of his first year this difficulty had been cleared up. Next year came the government control of the men students which in itself was to a certain degree demoralizing to the collegiate standards of the schools of the country as a whole. This difficulty had to be met and worked out. In the fall of 1919 came the largest enrollment in the history of the University of Kentucky. The university was hard put to find class room to take care of the students. Every available foot of space was called on and many classes were forced to meet in basements. Since that day there has been a rapid increase in the enrollment of students at the University until now the number has more than doubled itself since President McVey began his administration.

Our University has not only increased in enrollment but its service to the state has increased an equal amount. The scholastic standing has been raised until now the instruction at the University is on a par with any school in the South.

At the outset the president set himself to the task of making the University of Kentucky the foremost in the South. Hampered by a lack of funds he has been forced to use every available means to carry on the work of expanding the University and its services to the citizens of Kentucky. He has received flattering offers from other Universities but his task was not completed and he stayed. He undertook a task, and a Herculean task, and he is carrying through in a manner truly as great as the task. In many instances he has been almost alone in his efforts for the advancement of our Alma Mater, but never once has he faltered in his march toward the goal of perfection.

We Alumni have given him our support all the way through. We realize the great service that he has done for the University of Kentucky. We are anxious that he carry on with the work and that he remain with the University from now on. Still we have failed him in some ways. We have not given ourselves to the job in the same ratio that he has. We have failed to obtain for the University of Kentucky enough financial assistance from the State. Think what the present would be if a man of President McVey's vision and ability, had the funds necessary for proper expansion and growth. Think! Let us show our appreciation at the coming meeting of the General Assembly.

ALUMNUS DROWNS DURING VOYAGE

Oscar Petty '20, Lost Overboard in Unaccountable Way; Was En Route Home From Europe

FALLS FROM DECK; LOST

Oscar Petty, who was graduated from the University of Kentucky with the class of 1920, with a degree of Bachelor of Arts, on August 26 was drowned at sea while returning to the United States from Europe. He was returning with his sister, Mrs. S. A. Boles on the French liner Paris when the fatal accident occurred. According to Mrs. Boles he fell from the deck of the ship in some unaccountable way.

Press dispatches stated that he was walking on the sundeck of the vessel with his sister. While they were leaning over a rail watching the wash created by the propellers, he suddenly fell overboard. The liner came to a stop and for more than an hour circled around the spot where he was thought to have gone down. The officers of the ship stated that the fall was at least 60 feet and would have stunned him.

After leaving the university Mr. Petty taught in Hopkinsville High school, later going to the Tennessee Military Institute, at Sweetwater, Tenn., where he taught for some time. He later went to Columbia winning his master of arts degree. He went to France some time ago and study and he was met this summer in Paris by his sister, Mrs. Boles. On his return to New York he was to have been in charge of French in the department of Romance languages at Columbia University.

Besides his widow he is survived by his mother, Mrs. W. O. Petty of Louisville, Va.; three sisters, Mrs. S. A. Boles, of Lexington; Mrs. L. L. Fournelle, of Jackson, Tennessee, and Miss Marie Petty of Louisville, Va.

two children, Elsie J., 6, and Vize Theo., 4.

Marion Hulbert Crowder, B. A. in Bacteriology, 1927, is beginning as an alumnus in the right way. He sends in his check for dues for this year. He tells us that he is with the sales department of the R. F. Goodrich Company, in Akron, Ohio. His address is 197 East Archwood avenue.

Leonora Risque Donovan, B. A. in History 1927, is another of the class of '27 that is beginning in the right way. In sending in her dues for the year she informs us that she has a position as assistant registrar at Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute in Brooklyn, N. Y. Her address is 304 Garfield place.

Elizabeth Davenport, B. S. in Home Economics, 1926, has sent in her check for dues this year. This is another of the class for the class of '26. Miss Davenport is teaching home economics in the Mayfield Consolidated School, at Mayslick, Ky. This is her second year in that position.

Olive Rose Williams, B. A. in Education 1926, has gone to Florida where she is teaching in the high school at Kissimmee, Fla. She tells us that her address is Box 614, and also that she is anxious to get The Kernel each week.

William Homer Rice, B. S. in C. E. 1926, is located in Hazard, Ky., where he holds the position of commercial salesman for the Goodman Manufacturing Company. He was married to Miss Virginia Heizer, a member of the class of 1927, last Christmas. Before going to Hazard he was in Chicago, returning to Kentucky last January. His address is Box 291, Hazard, Ky.

Ruth N. Prewitt, B. S. in Home Economics, 1925, is beginning her third year as an active alumnae, in three years out of school. She has been located in Grrosse Ile, Mich., since her graduation. Last year and year before she taught in the high school there. This year she is doing nutrition research for the Merrill-Palmer School of Detroit. Her address still is Grrosse Ile, Mich.

William L. Williams, Jr., B. S. 1924, tells us that he is teaching in the Henderson High School, where he is head of the science department. He was married to Miss Gracie V. Martin, ex-'26, soon after graduation. Last year he was manager of a flower mill near Georgetown, Ky. Members of the class of 1924 will remember "Bill" as the official photographer for the campus, Kernel, Kentuckian and any other thing that happened to need one.

John W. Cooper, B. M. E. 1918, has been an active member of the alumni association ever since his graduation. He also has been with the Buffalo Forge Company the same length of time. He is now the St. Louis representative for the Buffalo Forge Company. His address is 515 Chemical Building.

Thomas B. Gordon, B. S. in Agriculture 1917, has been helping the state of Oklahoma solve its agricultural problems for the past seven years. After leaving the University of Kentucky he accepted a fellowship at the Massachusetts Agricultural College. ## W. C. WILSON LEADS IN CITY ELECTION

Alumnus - Candidate for Commissioner of Public Works of Lexington Gets Most Votes

OTHER ALUMNI IN RACE

William C. Wilson, A. B. 1913, former secretary and treasurer of the alumni association, again this year led the ticket in the city elections of Lexington in his candidacy for reelection as commissioner of public works of the city. He received a total of 6,225 votes, a majority of more than 4,000 over his nearest opponent in the race for commissioner of public works.

In the past several municipal elections Mr. Wilson has led the ticket each time, proving that he is one of the most popular commissioners in the city. He received a total of almost 1,000 votes more than J. O'Brien, candidate for mayor the second man in the order of voting.

He was elected to this post the first time in November, 1923. The same time he became secretary and treasurer of the alumni association after resignation of Herbert Graham. Mr. Wilson was one of the most outstanding figures in the Greater Kentucky Campaign, being at the time president of the Lexington alumni club and chairman of the drive in Fayette county. He and his teams were responsible for the largest group of contributions.

Two other graduates of the university who were candidates for city offices failed to qualify for election. They were, W. F. Clark, 1916, candidate for finance commissioner, and Harry B. Miller, 1914, candidate for commissioner of public safety.

time. His address is 7780 Dampf avenue, Chicago. He is another who has a prominent place on our Roll of Honor.

Dr. H. C. Matlack, ex-'83, is a dentist in Cincinnati and has his offices at 19 West Seventh street. Dr. Matlack sent us in his check for dues last week and tells us that he still is in his old location. He became an interested alumnus about eight years ago, and has been active ever since.

Homer Puckett, B. C. E. 1904, C. E. 1908, is a real estate dealer and is located in Louisville, Ky. He has offices at 208 Citizens building and lives at 2027 Murray avenue. Mr. Puckett has been an active member of the association for so many years that he has a prominent place on our Roll of Honor.

Harold R. McGregor, A. B. 1919, B. S. in Agriculture 1922, has just sent in a check for his dues for this year and next also. That is one way to get this matter of being active settled for some time. Mr. McGregor has been active for the last five years and from his check this year he expects to always be an active member. He was married to Miss Mammie Calico, of Richmond, Ky., in 1923.

Jean Miller, ex-'18, is another former student who did not graduate but who is putting to shame far too many of the graduates. An almost perfect record is being made in this instance. The address is 187 Market street, Lexington, Ky.

Engagements

Engagement Announced
Mrs. J. Roland Madison, of Bowling Green, Ky., has announced the engagement of her daughter, Ruth, to Mr. J. L. Watkins Darnaby, of this city. The engagement is the culmination of a romance which started when both were students at the university. Miss Madison was a member of the girls' glee club, of Phi Beta, honorary musical sorority and of the Delta Zeta social sorority. She was graduated from the university in the class of '24.

Mr. Darnaby was graduated last June. While in school here Mr. Darnaby achieved distinction in the military department, holding the rank of major. He is a member of Scabbard and Blade honorary military fraternity and Sigma Alpha Epsilon social fraternity and is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Darnaby, of 109 East Third street. Until recently he has been associated with his father who is secretary of the Blue Grass Fair Association. At present he is at South Bend, Ind., in the Studebaker Training school.

Council Tea

The Women's Administrative Council entertained with an afternoon tea Tuesday from 3:30 until 6 o'clock at Patterson hall in honor of the new girls and the freshman girls at the university.

This council is composed of representatives from each organization on the campus and the purpose of the tea was to interest the new girls in the various activities of campus life. Miss Elandine, dean of women, Miss Lucille Short, president, Miss Josephine Skain, Miss Lydia Roberts and Miss Virginia Sharp received the guests. During the afternoon, the representatives made short talks concerning their organizations and recommending their organizations and recommending tea and wafers were served.

Suk's Dance

Suk's circle of the university entertained with the first dance of the season Saturday evening in the men's gymnasium from 8:30 until 11:45 o'clock. Music was furnished by Toy Sandifor's orchestra and the Original Kentucky Masquerade orchestra. The members of the Washington and Lee and Kentucky teams were guests of honor for the occasion.

Chaperones for the affair were Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Horlacher, Dean Sarah Blanding, Miss Marguerite McLaughlin, Mr. and Mrs. Birkett Lee, Mrs. Eda Giles, Mr. and Mrs. Maury Crutcher, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gamage.

Several hundred guests were present at the dance.

Pan-Hellenic Banquet

The Phoenix hotel ballroom was the scene of one of the most brilliant and colorful affairs of the season, Thursday evening, when the Women's Pan-Hellenic Council entertained with their annual Pan-Hellenic banquet.

The decorative effect produced was that of a flower garden and each sorority flower was represented in the bouquets which adorned the tables. Music was furnished by the Phoenix hotel orchestra during the evening.

Miss Joy Fride, president of the council, presided as toastmistress, and the following interesting toasts were given:

The Yellow Rose of Alpha Gamma Delta, by Miss Rankin Harris.

The Sweet Pea of Alpha Delta Theta, by Miss Margaret Gooch.

The Pink Rose of Alpha Xi Delta, by Miss Geraldine Cosby.

The Killarney Rose of Beta Sigma Omicron, by Miss Allie May Heath.

The White Rose of Kappa Delta, by Miss Dorothy Sellars.

The Fleur de Lis of Kappa Kappa Gamma, by Miss Belle Nelson.

The traditional "Goat Parade" was the closing feature of the banquet.

International Relations

The class in international relations conducted by the Woman's Club of the University of Kentucky, will hold its initial meeting for the year on Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock in Patterson hall. Mrs. J. C. Jones will lead the discussion on "The Foreign Debt Settlement."

The class is open to members of the Woman's Club of the university, to the members of the faculty and to a limited number of township people. Last year the class proved to be extremely interesting and the present term promises to be even more worth while.

Anniversary Dinner

Thursday evening, Pres. and Mrs. Frank L. McVey were honor guests at a dinner at Patterson hall, commemorating the tenth anniversary of Doctor McVey as president of the University of Kentucky. Added pleasure was given by the fact that the dinner was arranged without the knowledge of Doctor McVey by the members of the faculty as a token of their esteem and appreciation of the untiring service of the president during his stay here.

The room was a mass of autumn foliage and the speaker's table at which Doctor McVey was seated, was artistically decorated with chrysanthemums and autumn leaves. Music

RURAL SCHOOLS WILL CONVENE

The rural school section of the Kentucky Interscholastic League will hold its third annual session Saturday, October 29, at the university under the auspices of the university extension department.

Participation in the meet is limited strictly to rural schools which will be selected by the superintendents of each county. Pupils from the fifth to the eighth grades are eligible for competition if they are under 15 years of age. The county superintendents of each county will choose the pupils who will represent their county, and there will be a limit of 12 pupils from each county. Every county in the state is eligible to compete.

The contests will be divided into three departments, scholarship, declamation, and track and field events. A cup will be awarded to the county winning the most points in athletics. Another cup will be given to the county winning the most points in scholarship and declamation, and the third cup will be awarded the county winning the most points in both departments.

OUR CHIEF

"The great man is to be the servant of mankind, not they of him."—Theodore Parker.

Ten years of unselfish devotion, of heroic effort against odds that would have balked a less courageous man, of gradual triumph—and so ends the first decade of service to this institution and to the Commonwealth of Kentucky by him to whom this issue of The Kernel is respectfully and affectionately dedicated.

On Thursday evening at Patterson Hall faculty members tendered to President McVey a dinner as a testimonial of their appreciation of his work at the university. On this occasion also both the faculty and student body presented to the chief executive tangible expressions of their devotion and good will. This issue of The Kernel is dedicated to Doctor McVey not only as a tribute to him from the student body and the faculty of the university, but also as a personal expression of appreciation from the staff of the paper itself for the invaluable assistance he has uniformly given to, and for the lively interest he has always manifested in The Kernel.

On other pages of this issue are various tributes to our chief. The authors of these messages express the affection, the admiration, and the gratitude which every alumnus, every faculty member, and every student feels toward him as a scholar of the first order, as an educator without peer, as a man, a gentleman, and a friend who never hesitated when he could be of assistance to his comrades or his charges.

But even more than by any written words—tributes are paid to President McVey by his work not only at the University of Kentucky but also in economic research and various other tasks of public service. And so The Kernel believes

"Nothing can cover his high fame but heaven;
"No pyramids set off his memories,
"But the eternal substance of his greatness
"To which I leave him."

SMOKING IN BUILDINGS

At the University of Illinois and many other large educational institutions, students are not allowed to smoke anywhere on the university grounds—and this rule, it is reported, is rigidly enforced.

At the University of Kentucky there is no such rule. University students are at liberty to smoke on the campus as much as they desire. However, on account of the danger of fire, involving a serious peril to life and property, university authorities have prohibited smoking in the various buildings on the campus.

There can be no doubt of either the necessity or the justice of the university rule. There is no question of personal freedom or attempt at moral dictatorship involved. Consequently The Kernel feels that students violate this rule as frequently as they do for the most part thoughtlessly.

A slight fire scare was given spectators at the slowing of the grid-graph of the Florida-Kentucky game in the men's gymnasium several weeks ago. The first in that particular case was extinguished, but what was in that instance merely a scare might easily develop into grim reality in which Death would claim its ghastly tribute.

Is not a little self-denial better than risking the property of the university and the lives of our fellow students?

ON OTHER CAMPUSES

BEGINNING

When asked to give his chief objection to college graduates who applied to him for work after leaving school, a successful employer replied, "College men usually want to begin at the top."

The man referred to hire a college man whenever he found one who could do his work efficiently. He had many college men working for him already.

But the men he employed were not reluctant to begin where the rest of the men began. They were willing to learn his business from the ground up.

His position is easy to see. The success of his business depends upon the men who produce his commodity and upon the men who offer it to the public. His perspicacity in choosing men then accounts largely for his own success in business.

College men, according to this employer's experience, often wished to occupy executive positions with out having learned the basic phases of the business through actual work.

It may be that, once in a decade or two, a college man appears who is big enough to handle a job without having acquired beginning experience. However, these men are the exception and often prove costly experiments to the employer in spite of their college training.

To the average college man, the getting and holding of a first job on graduation is of vital importance. The first year or two may message the business life of the man. Thus, it is of far greater importance to the employed man to grow substantially than to the employer to take a chance on a promising graduate.

The man who begins too high may suffer a severe setback. The repulse will be painful—but it will be beneficial, too. The sooner the lesson can be effectually learned the better for the prospect.

College men, records show, rise quickly once they are adjusted to their work. Their novitiate in the lower grades of business competition is short.

Then comes the steady rise to eminence and success. When is the time spent in learning from the ground up is amply rewarded. —Oklahoma Daily.

WAILS OF THE WEEK

After watching Gamage away the student body at the pep meeting last Friday, we "sorter" hope he never tells us to go jump in Clifton Pond 'cause we believe we'd give a whoop and holler and hit the water in spite of ourselves.

One student at least has found a way to get the best of the English department. He ran over one of the professors with a motorcycle.—But we all haven't motorcycles.

They may wallop "us" again and again, Wildcats, but every blessed student is for us. We're to blame for your misfortunes—the disgrace is ours, 33 out of 2,400.

NOCTURNE

Down the long street I heard her footsteps slow
As she walked, strangely poised, inscrutable,
Serenely exquisite, and proud. . .
Her face in that dark street
An ivory mask whose jewel eyes
Were unaware of me, whose tears and mockery
Burned on me so that all the night
Slow footsteps fell upon my heart, memorably musical and proud. . . —F. D.

GOD'S VOICES

When I awake in the morning
And answer the bird's early call,
I list to the voices of Nature
And know there's a God in it all.

Then I go forth to my day's work,
And face all my tasks with a zest;
I work for the joy of the working,
And glory in doing my best.

When I come home in the evening,
After the day's work is ended,
I turn my eyes toward the sunset,
And see the colors there blended.

I know that God in His wisdom
To make our lives worth the living,
Gave us the glories of nature
And gave of Himself in the giving.
—Margaret Austin"

HEARTSEASE

As I wandered in far off lands,
An Eutopia I found.
A haven, a land of eternal bliss,
Whither all the world is bound.
There, no clarion call to war
Disturbed the blessedness of peace
And man labored with man
And their handiworks became a masterpiece.
No strife, I found there, for wealth or fame
But love for fellow kind,
Radiant, shining from every Countenance, in
This land of Eutopia, I found
Whither all the world is bound. —E. B. Cummins.

INFERIORITY COMPLEX

(A Satire)

All my life I've wanted to be a traffic cop
And get out in the streets and run things;
Talk roughly and watch men shrink,
And women smile beseechingly,
I'd like to rave and cuss and swear
At the mob;
And watch their blood congeal into gelatin.
Just give me a chance.
God!
All my life I've wanted to be a traffic cop.

KENTUCKY THEATER

SHANGHAI BOUND
Riots and bloodshed, piracy and hand-to-hand fighting, adventure and romance are ingredients of Richard Dix' newest Paramount starring picture "Shanghai Bound" which comes to the Kentucky Theater Sunday for four days. It's laid along the Yangtze river; the section that has kept China on the front pages of the nation's newspapers for many months. Dix as captain of a river steamer, with Mary Brian playing the American heiress he brings down the river to safety. Luther Reed directed.

NO PLACE TO GO
"No Place to Go," a First National picture, starring Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes will be the feature at the Kentucky Theater the latter part of next week.

"WINNING OF BARBARA WORTH"

During the hot summer nights in the Nevada desert where "The Winning of Barbara Worth," the picture at the Ben Ali Theater, Sunday, was made, Sam Blum, the comedian who is "Blanton" in the film, exercised his hobby, magic. He instructed Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky how to break a pencil with a $5 bill. He showed the cowboys how to deal four royal flushes in poker at the same time. He showed Clyde Cook, another player in "The Winning of Barbara Worth," how to make two jack rabbits grow where none grew before. And when Blum told Cook that his ambition was to be a billiard player, the Zigfield comedian replied: "Then all you have to do is lie down and roll."

An added feature will be the House of David Band, which comes here directly from Benton Harbor, Mich.

"CALIFORNIA"
The story of how the United States beat a number of nations in its seizure of California in 1846 is shown in "California," Tim McCoy's latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer historical Western drama, coming to the Ben Ali Theater Monday. American forces, by sea and land, converged on that rich ter-

"THE COLLEGIANS"

Lively, wholesome and exhilarating is the two-reel Junior Jewel Production, "The Collegians," which is now showing at the Strand Theater. Brilliant and flashing with the light cares and joys of the students in a co-educational college, the picture makes the oldsters tingle with memories and the youngsters with hopeful bias.

This picture is one of a series but it is not a serial, for each story is complete in itself. If the others are anything like this one, the bright comedy-dramas of "The Collegians" series have been properly named. Junior Jewel Productions, for nothing has been spared in making them equal in every way to the best feature length picture.

RELIGIOUS DISCUSSION

RELIGION A NATIVE ENDOWMENT
(By Hayes Farish, Pastor of Woodland Christian Church)

Perhaps no element of the human constitution is so little understood, misunderstood, and abused as that of intelligence. Because of this lack of intelligence concerning religion an effort is here made to suggest some lines of thought, it is hoped to stimulate an interest and spirit of inquiry that will lead to a clearer understanding of this universal native endowment.

1.—The older psychologist inconsistently argued that there were all sorts of human instincts except religious instinct. Theologians accepted this inconsistent presentation without personal investigation. Modern psychology says there are no instincts at all. This gave a knock out blow to the fallacy of older psychology regarding religion. But says modern psychology there is a native tendency. No scientist or philosopher would say, then, that there is no native tendency. This tendency is most pronounced.

2.—Antiquated theology argued that one gets religion or loses religion. This destroys the fact of religion as a native endowment. Countless generations have been deluded by sensational, ill founded evangelism that has fattened on the practice of mistaking certain elements of emotionalism and misrepresenting them as religion. We do not get religion or lose religion. It is that native tendency which must be developed as it responds to the stimuli found in situations thrown about the individual or group in the world. In his own image, breathed into him the breath of life and he became a living soul.

3.—Another thing of confusion is that the truth of the unity and universality of religion has never found its proper place in our system of thought and theology. We speak of a Hindu religion, a Confucianist religion, a Jewish religion, a Christian religion. The terminology is bad. There are no religions. There is one religion. This one religion is the endowment of the human soul by the Creator and Father who made of one blood all who dwell upon the earth. What we have confusingly called religions are truly termed systems of religion which offer the means of stimuli necessary to develop our native religious tendency and produce expression of the one religion given of the Father by virtue of creation with which all alike are endowed.

4.—In recognition of the truth of religion as a native endowment expressed through native tendencies, religious educators are beginning at the task of reconstructing our thought in the field of religion and bringing us back to the proper starting point in religious development. The rise to prominence of the modern religious educator is having a pronounced effect in modifying, even rebuilding theology.

5.—This recognition of the truth of religion as native endowment is leading us to the essential method of making religious development constructive rather than reconstructive. Older evangelism tried to save people out of the world. Modern evangelism based upon the principles of education seeks to construct both the thought, attitude, habit, practice of individuals and the world in which we live, as well, along lines that lift individuals and systems to higher planes of soul culture and social good.

6.—Now, this all too readily discovered and admitted fact of religion as a unity and a native endowment carries with it one definite condition: If religious development is shown in one's cultural advancement, religion cannot be parked on some shelf until the one has finished college, made his fortune, established one's self in business or had a fling of life in riotous living. We are told that the development of the radio has shown that the air has "dead spots" in it which cause much interference. So has the life that shelves religion and leaves it undeveloped for any period of time.

Development of religion must be continuous with daily experience. Religion is not something apart from life but is life itself. No life can be full bred and well cultured unless it is religiously stabilized. The great stimulating force and stabilizing power is Christianity. The one definite channel of Christian expression is the Church. The Church becomes the laboratory for religious experiment.

Here and There

By J. W. D.

Although the Wildcats were buried under an avalanche of points by the Blue and White of Washington and Lee, no one could deny that they fought to the last. There was no letting up during the entire game for the regulars, as there was no capable and uninjured substitutes on the side-lines.

After all is said and done, down deep in our hearts there is but one game that every Wildcat follower desires to win, and they desire that with all their heart. We'll give you one guess as to which game that is. Let's all pep up, and go over on the Nineteenth of November, and trounce 'em good. Remember last year!

A Pathe news cameraman shot the band as it paraded between the halves, and also several plays during the game. The band was especially applauded and formed the W. and L. and U. K. letters with perfect execution. They then played the Washington and Lee swing, and Kentucky's alma mater song. Both sections stood during these selections, and also during the rendering of "My Old Kentucky Home." The cadets of the E.O.T.C. lent their vociferous cheering strength to the game, seated in a unit, as in the previous home games this season.

Tomorrow, the Wildcats battle Vandy's Commodores at Nashville. This is the first football engagement between the two institutions since 1922, when "Wild Bill" Juneau was head coach. Vandy emerged triumphant 9 to 0. Vanderbilt has the reputation of being one of the most formidable teams in the South, and Bill Spears, quarterback of national fame, will have to be stopped in order for the Gamagamen to be returned the winners.

A number of students and Wildcat fans will journey with the team. A special rate will hold forth on the L. and N. Our band, of eighty-four musicians, of which we are mighty proud, will also make the trip, and will undoubtedly be one of the bright spots of the excursion.

With the cross-country meet looming in the horizon, we see many thinly clad ladders romping forth upon the cinder track around Stoll field. Some of our less sophisticated "airmen" have been greatly shocked upon meeting one of these embryonic Nurnin's galloping up Euclid avenue.

We are approaching the close of football sooner than we can realize. Coach Johnny Mauer, basketball mentor, has started his charges through their paces already, in preparation for the coming season. And just a little tip, with the material from last year's varsity and frosh teams, the Blue and White should have a fairly good basketball season. And, the southern championship, which the Wildcats won not so many years back, is again our goal.

FOREIGN CLUB GIVES BANQUET

Speeches on Native Countries Are Heard by Members of Cosmopolitan Club; Bureau Gives Talk

WILL MEET EVERY MONTH

The foreign members of the Cosmopolitan Club of the University of Kentucky spoke on matters relating to their countries at a banquet given at the university cafeteria last week. Mr. Stanatf discussing the church conditions in Bulgaria; and Mr. Westendorf, Mr. Chen, and Mr. Brant giving short talks on their respective countries. Professor Bureau gave an interesting talk on the history and aim of the club.

Other members attending were Doctor and Mrs. Kopius, Mrs. Bureau, Mr. and Mrs. Perry, Misses Frances and Lydia Roberts, Elise Bureau, Cara Polk, Margaret Lewis, Vaden Pate, Betty Bush, May Flora, Frances Kai, Messrs. Kingsbury, Rex, and Gordon.

Mr. Chen is a native of China, and has been in America only a few weeks. He speaks English fluently, having studied the language abroad. He is attending Transylvania College. Miss Kai is also a native of China; she is attending Hamilton College.

Mr. Bart Peak, who did much to organize the club here, was out of town, and his absence from the meeting was regretted by all the members.

Officers of the club are: James Perry, president; Carl Rex, vice president; and Miss Frances Roberts, secretary and treasurer. The club will continue its month meetings this year. The next meeting will be held at Professor Bureau's home.

Resists Corrosion

THIS picture, taken in the salt marshes near Keeney, N. J., shows two lines of 30-inch Cast Iron Pipe replacing pipe made of other material. The alternate exposure to the action of salt water and air is a severe test.

While the pipe shown in the picture is subjected to unusual corrosive influences, all underground pipe must be able to withstand corrosion to a greater or less degree. Cast Iron Pipe has this quality. It does not depend on its coating to resist rust; the material itself is rust-resisting. The first Cast Iron Pipe ever laid in service today at Versailles, France, after two hundred and sixty years' service.

Crippled Kentucky Eleven Defeated by Washington and Lee, 25 to 0

PORTWOOD STARS IN CONFERENCE GAME FOR 'CATS

(By John W. Dundon, Jr.)
Washington and Lee's Generals marched through and outflanked Kentucky's Wildcats last Saturday afternoon on Stoll field, drubbing them by a 25 to 0 score. This was the fifth game between the eleven representing the two institutions and the 'Cats have been victorious in all encounters. The first half ended 6 to 0 in favor of Washington and Lee. Kentucky had several chances to score, but seemed to be unable to puncture the Virginia line at the critical moments. The 'Cats gained considerable more yardage and first downs in the first half than their opponents.

but were unable to gain much within the 20-yard line. Washington and Lee made its first score in the second quarter, as the result of a sustained 60-yard drive down the field. White, Howe and Barclay, stellar backs, featuring by their gains. In the first quarter Kentucky carried the ball to the Generals' 20-yard line, chiefly through the gains of Al Fortwood and Paul Jenkins. In the second quarter Kentucky got within the 20-yard line, only to be held for downs. A drive at the end of the half found the Blue and White of Kentucky in possession of the ball on their opponents' 23-yard stripe. Thus the Wildcats received quite a few bad breaks, coupled with the inability to gain within scoring distance.

MAUER CONTINUES TO WORK MEN ON FUNDAMENTALS

The "Wildcat" basketball candidates, having completed one week of preliminary practice for the coming year, are showing improvement during the short time that they have been out.

Coch J. W. Mauer is working his men hard in order that he can have a team that can play the game and know it from "A to Z." The men have shown a willingness to work and are trying hard to perfect their faults and learn the new system that Coach Mauer is teaching. Fundamentals of the game are being stressed as the coach believes that each man should know the principles first, then the other will come easier.

As far as actual scrimmage is concerned there will not be any until later in the year, except perhaps to demonstrate a few plays, showing how they should work. Coach Mauer realizes that he must choose a team for the first game with Clemson, December 16, from the men that are now out for practice. The team will be greatly strengthened after football season by additional men, but Coach Mauer knows that these men will not be in condition to play as they would require some rest before the first game.

The sixteen men who reported Monday evening, continued to work on the fundamentals, such as the bounce pass, two man offense, dribbling, pivoting, criss-cross and the double pass. The men also spent some time on the art of long and short shots. Coach Mauer has one particular method of shooting these shots and the men are trying hard to follow the example that he has offered.

Because the Men's gymnasium has been put to some other use on practice nights of this week, the men are somewhat handicapped by having to use the girls gymnasium, which is much smaller and hinders their style of play. After this week they will return to their own court.

Coch Mauer wishes to announce that all men who expect to play basketball and try out for the team will have to report to the preliminary practices. He will not have time to devote to new-comers when the season opens. Therefore all men wishing to try out for the team must report immediately. Uniforms will be issued to all letters and numeral men, but the others will have to furnish their own equipment.

The schedule has not been fully completed yet as there has been some difficulty and delay in the other schools replying to Kentucky's open dates. Coach Mauer expects to play about sixteen games during the season, with eight at home and eight abroad.

The schedule so far is as follows:
Dec. 4—Open.
Dec. 16—Clemson here.
Dec. 20—Open.
Jan. 14—Vanderbilt here.
Jan. 16—Virginia there.
Jan. 18—Maryland there.
Jan. 19—Navy there.

Examinations, Jan. 21-26.
Jan. 29—Tennessee here.
Feb. 3—W. and L. here.
Feb. 4—Indiana there.
Feb. 8—Open.
Feb. 11—Georgia Tech here.
Feb. 12—Tennessee there.
Feb. 14—University of Georgia there.
Feb. 15—Georgia Tech there.
Feb. 25—Southern Conference Tournament.

INTRA-MURAL SPOTLIGHTS

(By G. W. K.)
Intra-mural golf and tennis is well under way, having entered its third and fourth rounds.

In the golf meet, Craddy, Drake, and Hoffman are in the third round and Hill is in the fourth. The other results have not been reported but most of the favorites are still in the play.

All of the favorites in the tennis singles are still in running with the exception of J. W. Dundon, who was defeated in the first round. The players who have been reported in the third round are England, Koo, Farmer, Caulkins, Young, Rogers, and Whitehead. J. Todd, junior champion of Cincinnati, is on his way to the semi-finals.

Most of the doubles matches have not been played and the Whitehead-Rogers combination is the only one to be reported in the third round. The track meet and cross-country runs will begin next week and variety letters and trophies will be given to the winners of these events. Some of these matches will take place between the halves of the freshman game on November 4. The interfraternity meets will take place later on and trophies will be given to the first and second place winners. The trophies for the intra-mural events have been ordered and will be placed on display at The "K" Shop. The attitude shown toward these events has been fine and it is hoped that the students will not lose interest.

Ice cream, the most delicate, the most delicious of foods, now becomes, through Heathization, one of the safest and purest.

Through this scientific discovery which forces ordinary air out of the ice cream freezers and replaces it with an absolutely sterile atmosphere we now insure the purity and goodness of our ice cream.

This means that the ice cream you, or your children, buy at one of our agencies is scientifically safeguarded. That it is finer in tasting qualities than ordinary ice cream—due to the intensifying of flavors through Heathization. In short, that it is an ice cream of surpassing purity and goodness.

Ours is the only Heathized Ice Cream made in this city. It is sold exclusively through our agencies.

Frank L. McVey, of the University of Kentucky, is one of them. Usually when a president of a university begins his regime he endeavors to put all of his ideas into process at once. President McVey introduces his academic policies gradually. Since he came to the University of Kentucky ten years ago he has transformed the institution into one where academic methods are comparable to the best modern practices of the recognized effective universities of America.

There has never been in the history of the University of Kentucky a finer spirit of harmony, a greater scope and variety of curricula; such state-wide respect and affection for the university. All these are largely due to President McVey.

Manifesting a sense of justice to faculty and students at all times and under all circumstances President McVey has greatly endeared himself to the entire university community. President McVey has been fearless in announcing to Kentucky the needs of the university and the part the university will eventually play in upbuilding of the state if given adequate financial support by the legislative division of the commonwealth's affairs.

President McVey has been very wise in preserving the worthy traditions and memories of the early years of our university. He has succeeded in erecting on the splendid foundation of the old State College a notable educational structure—the University of Kentucky.

Long live President McVey!

F. PAUL ANDERSON.

STUDENTS

It would be difficult to express in a few words the admiration, respect and affection which the student body of the university feels toward its chief executive. There are some feelings which can not be expressed by the written word, and this feeling of Kentucky students is one such sentiment.

Recognized as an educator without peer and as one of the foremost authorities in this country in the field of economics, the president of the University of Kentucky has gained national reputation for himself. The student body reveres him for such achievement, but more especially does it love him for his affection toward and admirable service to it.

PRESIDENT McVEY GAINS MUCH FAME AS PAINTER

though he has forced himself away from repetitions of any traditional manner, his paintings are designed with exquisite appreciation of pattern, and his drawing is firm and sure. But it is as a colorist, whose pure tints produce new harmonies in rendering the age-old beauty of nature, that he achieves his greatest distinction.

So faithfully does the President paint into his pictures the delightful and reverent emotions that nature calls forth, that the paintings evoke the same mood in the spectator. He has given much to art, and art has given him much.

President McVey is a great believer in the value of a hobby: The more absorbing a man's hobby becomes the more necessary it is for him to have some secondary interest in which to completely lose himself. And the President's favorite method of recuperating from the fatigue and strain of heavy executive duties is to work hard at something else so absorbing that it gives him recreation in the true sense of the word.

Many a farmer, passing through his fields on an October day has come across a man in a blue shirt, khaki trousers and leggings, forgetting the whole world in his pleasure at matching the exquisite colors of the sky and applying them with a dexterous brush to canvas. That painter is a college president in pursuit of a hobby.

In the last eight years President McVey has completed about thirty paintings aside from numerous sketches. A small number, one may think, yet it is sufficient to establish his reputation as a painter of ability, charm and interest.

EARLY CAREER OF DOCTOR McVEY AS TEACHER TOLD

I went away to a university for advanced work, and I found my field and my opportunity. After completing this work, I entered as an instructor in the Teachers' College at Columbia for a brief period, and secured a viewpoint of professional training that would not have been possible in any other way. So that I had, as a consequence of this personal experience, first, the determination upon the calling; second, the necessary preparation for it; third, some experience in teaching, and fourth, professional training in the field of education. And with this background, I have continued in the educational field, purposely refraining from giving it up or entering other occupations, because it seemed to me to possess the greatest opportunities for usefulness, contentment and real happiness.

written by himself especially for the occasion and dedicated to President McVey.

Prof. Enoch Grehan, head of the Journalism department, delivered an address in presentation of a gift from the faculty, a handsome gold watch to President McVey. Professor Grehan congratulated President McVey on his efforts and accomplishments during the past ten years.

The next speaker of the evening, Robert McGary, gave a short talk on "The President and the Student." Mr. McGary and Miss Anne Carvill presented Mr. and Mrs. McVey with a gold watch chain and a lady's and gentleman's traveling bag, gifts from the student body, and said a few words in behalf of the student body to President McVey in appreciation of his past administration.

THE KENTUCKY KERNEL

ANECDOTES SHOW DOCTOR McVEY IS "JUST HUMAN"

he can tell as good a fish story as anyone. He is also fond of "roughing it" in the great open spaces and has taken many canoe trips up in northern Minnesota. Whenever the president goes on a camping expedition, he always plays "cook." On one occasion, another faculty member of the University of Kentucky and Doctor McVey were on such a trip and Doctor McVey volunteered to act as cook. After devouring nine of the light savory flapjacks, the president's companion exclaimed, "What are we going to have for lunch?" This was too much even for a college president, and Doctor McVey fell back in amazement. Today he is fond of telling this story to illustrate the enormous appetite of at least one of the university's teaching staff.

At the University of Minnesota where President McVey was professor of economics, he was one of the most popular "prof" on the campus. It was common among the faculty and the popular students, "Take a course under McVey!" Although his classes were among the largest in the university, he always found time to get in personal touch with his students, to invite them to his home, and to discuss college matters with them. Many of these students have become prominent men in the business and economic world.

Throughout his career, President McVey has been zealous in aiding students through college. By promoting the student loan fund, by always being ready to listen and to give justice to the worried or misguided, he has established a firm friendship among his student body.

Yet although he is widely-read and widely-gifted, Doctor McVey can not do everything. Even his closest friends have to admit he cannot sing! At Rotary meetings and the like where voices are raised in song, his voice is silent. But who cares? Who wants a perfect individual? The students and the faculty of the University of Kentucky like their president because he has his faults, and because he's human! —Kady Elvove.

"TO WANT TO KNOW" IS IDEAL OF DOCTOR McVEY

most. I mean which did you enjoy writing most?"

His face became serious again and he spoke with conviction.

"I never looked at my books in that way. The reason I wrote them was because I was interested in them all. When once they are done, they are done and that's the end of it."

"Do you remember everything you've written in your books," I inquired, for I had a long-established belief that authors could quote page after page from their own books.

"No," the gray-haired executive of Kentucky's highest school of learning replied. "I doubt if I know how many of my books open, with the exception of one. But I do know the outlines of each one."

"How do you find time to do all this writing, when there are so many other duties to perform," I questioned, as I glanced at the papers, bills, reports and documents piled on his desk.

"Speech-making, reports, and magazine articles take up a lot of time and do not leave much for consecutive work," he answered and there was no regret in his voice, though I knew that he must long for quiet leisurely hours of writing in which the scholars delight. "However, I have a book or two in mind. You know books of economics and history are so different from other kinds of books. There are no characters to actually visualize. You're dealing with persons and facts, and the skill of clothing your ideas and facts in plain English is a very important factor."

"Do you ever intend to write a novel?" I questioned mischievously.

"No," the answer came slowly. "I don't think I could."

"Well, don't you prefer to read novels to books on economics?" I asked, thinking of my own fondness for the former and dislike for the latter.

"No, I don't think so. You read books somewhat according to the mood you're in. Of course I like to read a novel now and then. But if one is a student, he ought to have a special field and he should read in that field because he wants to know."

"To want to know! That is the ideal which this fifty-eight year old president of one of the largest universities in the South has practiced throughout a successful and useful career. "To want to know" is the magnet that has led Frank L. McVey, a real student, to recognition among other real students.

"Well," I exclaimed, as I wished him goodbye, "I'm not a very good interviewer, but I hope I can do you justice." And as I left the office, the last I saw of him was, as he picked up a yellow business paper, and with a smile still upon his lips, become absorbed in his executive duties.

practice, but these are not serious. Coach Major reports that on the defense against the varsity his proteges are rather poor, while on the offense they are fair. However, these two forms of play should be somewhat balanced to obtain the best playing results. The backfield, in fulfilling their duty as ball carriers, are not flashy but are rather of the plunging variety, which, employed with consistency, is a good quality. At any rate, no brilliant stras have developed and from indications all play a rather uniform game as far as efficiency is concerned.

The Georgetown Cubs are also playing their first game of the season, which makes it impossible to estimate their real worth. However, since they have held the state title the last two consecutive years, their prospects for winning look very favorable, but from recent reports, injuries, indisciplinability, and the like, weigh heavily against them. The latter may be only hearsay, which makes it more evident that the Kittens must exert every effort to be victorious.
