UK ESTABLISHES NEW RADIO POST

Extension Department Sponsors Listening Center for Benefit of Rural Folk;
Parkville Is Latest Site

Under the auspices of the University Extension Department, a new radio listening post has been established at Parkville. This is in accordance with the work of the University, the object being to locate these listening posts in the more isolated places in Kentucky so that the people of these places can receive entertainment and a cultural advantage by tuning in on the programs broadcast regularly from the extension studios of WHAS in Lexington.

P. Pittman, in charge of the Golden Deed Community Center, will be in charge of the post,
and will supervise several programs which will include the aforementioned broadcasts.

This installation at Parkville is the 14th of a series of listening posts that have been established mainly through the efforts of the students and through the cooperation of citizens of Lexington, many of whom have turned over old radio sets for the purpose of furnishing organizations and citizens have contributed money to be used for the purchase of new sets.

Women's Building Is Typical Of University's Greatest Need

By JAMES RATLIFF
The Women's building on the campus serves, on a small scale for women, the need of a Student Union building," said Mrs. P. K.
Holmes, assistant dean of women,
in an interview Saturday morning.

The Women's building was the home of former President Patterson. Following his death the house was occupied for 10 years
by his brother, Walter Patterson.
The building became vacant
years ago.

In August, 1932, Dean Sarah Blending gained permission from President McVey to use the building for the rehabilitation of the building. Money for furnishing was obtained through a loan from the Women's club of the University. The loan was subsequently repaid in an alumnae campaign sponsored by the Women's club and directed by Mrs. Holmes.

Many of the furnishings for the building were secured from Smith Hall. The building is now completed and ready for occupancy.
Furnishings were contributed by and by individuals. A number of

Guignol Scores Triumph In Prize Mystery Drama

By WOODSON KNIGHT

Once again the Guignol players, under the capable direction of Frank Fowler have proved their ability to produce plays in a pleasing manner by adding another stellar performance to their long list of successes. This year's prize play, "What the Gulls Knew," opened last night at the University theater for weekly runs.

The play, a mystery melodrama, is an excellent example of the characteristic type of drama, a type that often is difficult to effectively enact. But the cast, in this instance, has done exceedingly well in capturing and portraying
the personalities of the characters, and in gaining and putting across
the atmosphere of the piece.

A single room, in the tower of an island lighthouse, furnishes the locale for the play. G. L. Crutcher, reasonable that the opponents of this amendment will have a very hard time trying to answer her arguments.

She began her address by saying that everyone has a right to his own opinion, but that no one has a right to issue misleading, reckless, and irresponsible statements. Miss Perkins certainly knew whereof she spoke when she made that statement, because if reckless and irresponsible statements were ever made they certainly have been made in connection with this law in Kentucky. The Secretary of Labor took the argument that this legislation led to Communism, Socialism, and the like by saying that if we, as a nation, care for our children in the proper manner we need have no fear of any radical change in government. If the children receive education, live in healthy conditions, and have the proper sort of social conditions, there need be no fear of Socialism or Communism. Miss Perkins also asked why children should continue to work to sell papers, when adults well able to do so are walking the streets in an effort to find work.

In regard to the proposed law taking the children out of the home and preventing them from working there the Secretary of Labor declared that such a belief was entirely untrue. She said that she favored boys and girls doing chores around the home the same as everyone else, and to prevent such things is not the purpose of the amendment. She characterized such statements as "fantastic, reckless and irresponsible." The action, under the various state laws proves that no such thing would occur under national regulation, so long as the American people retain their senses. And as further proof Miss Perkins cited the fact that the states have always had the power to regulate child labor. She said she abused the power. And there is every reason to believe that Congress will act in the same manner. That state legislation was inadequate was also proved by the Secretary, due to the fact that legislation in the different states was not uniform. She said it might be to the disadvantage of one state to enforce its laws against another state. And these inequalities would be wiped out by a national law which would apply to all the states alike.

Miss Perkins also disposed of the argument that the Federal Government would attempt to control all the actions under the law through Federal inspectors and thus take from the state its rightful power. To meet this she cited the case of the N.R.A. which had imposed its regulations of labor in various states to supervise the labor provisions under the various codes. Such has been the case in this state. Miss Perkins said she felt sure that this would be the same procedure under the Child Labor Amendment. Thus the Secretary of Labor disposed of every valid argument that the opponents of this law have brought forth. All the arguments—preventing children from doing chores, the taking over of a state function, and all the rest were taken care of in a most intelligent manner. The real trouble back of all this is simply the human selfishness of a few individuals. Most everyone is against child labor, but there are always those individuals who will sell their souls for a few extra dollars, who had rather see their children under 12 years of age sell papers at 11 o'clock at night, than to see them at home in bed, and who had rather gain materially than to see humanity gain in the welfare of little children. Miss Perkins made an excellent and very intelligent speech, and we sincerely hope that in the future the opponents of this piece of vital social legislation will refrain from making misleading, reckless, and irresponsible statements concerning this Amendment, but we are very much afraid that this is too much even to hope for.

DEATH ON THE HIGHWAYS

Early in 1933, there were fewer automobile accidents than during the same period in 1932. During the last half of 1933, however, the trend changed. In the year, 30,500 persons were killed—a 3 1/2 per cent advance over 1932.

The automobile accident toll follows the amount of gasoline used in the country with almost loving exactitude. During the first half of 1933, for example, when gas consumption was 3 per cent below the same period in 1932, there were fewer accidents. During the last half gas use was 2.5 per cent above—and the accident record soared accordingly. The dangerous driver seems to have learned little from the ghastly experience of the past. He still disregards the safety factors of better cars and roads. He still cuts in and out of traffic, still passes on blind curves and hills, still takes a chance to save a second. And he leaves behind him a shambles of deaths and injuries and needlessly ruined property.

Everything that mechanical and road engineers can do to make motoring safer, is being done—an extremely small percentage of accidents can be blamed on car failure or poor roads. The accident problem is purely an individual one—resting with each auto owner, and with the authorities who make and enforce traffic ordinances.

A WARNING

During these days when snow and sleet covers the ground and it is extremely difficult to be out doors and enjoy it, it would not be amiss to suggest that students hibernate and use this valuable time to good advantage by studying.

The majority of students are afflicted with the forgivable human frailty of putting off until tomorrow what could be accomplished today. They rationalize this attitude by saying to their inner selves that they will crack down on the books in a few weeks or just before examination week. Such a rationalization will only result disastrously for many reasons. In the first place, it is common knowledge among upperclassmen that if a student turns in assignments regularly during the semester and in general "keeps up" with his class, it will make it much easier to review the course before the examination than to be forced to "cram" into his memory all of the year's work within a short space of time.

Continuing the reasons, we might say that if the student waits for a few weeks to do the necessary studying of his collegiate career, the spring days will be here and—lo! during these balmy days when the sun shines down upon the most attractive campus in the South and the feathered creatures upon budding limbs, start to warble sweet trills, it will merely be a case of loaf, bread, a jug of wine, and a loaf of Books, term papers and classroom assignments will take on the hazy aspect of dreams as the average student will center his attention upon the co-eds and other equally pleasant thoughts.

And the third important reason for studying during this disagreeable weather is that soon many activities will be inaugurated which no one, who is not suited to the winter months. Tennis requests will come out of the bottom of trunks, baseball gloves and related equipment for the national pastime will be much in evidence. Swimming pools, in and about Lexington, will be open and all in all, it will be a case of the great outdoors calling to the spirit in man which causes him to seek recreation and pleasure in physical sport.

Doubtless there are good arguments and should be thought by students before they reach their consciences by giving the aged excuse of "I'll do it tomorrow."

Test Among Us

Some of these persons who pride themselves on being age-focused have recently been given ample opportunity to prove their ability in that respect.

At last Florida has been able to convince the world that she can grow something besides luscious oranges and grapefruit.

for the loss of some $2,000,000 from the government remains to be seen. There is just one thing certain and that is if Postmaster General Farley does not have sufficiently definite proof to bring about a conviction, the administration is in for a tough ride!

Everything that mechanical and road engineers can do to make motoring safer, is being done—an extremely small percentage of accidents can be blamed on car failure or poor roads. The accident problem is purely an individual one—resting with each auto owner, and with the authorities who make and enforce traffic ordinances.

THE AIR MAIL

Some days ago President Roosevelt with a stroke of the pen, cancelled all air mail contracts which had been let during the Hoover administration, thereby throwing the entire commercial airline system into a turmoil.

This sweeping action was in keeping with his experimental policies, and as such he has not yet decided. At any rate this act has brought more unfavorable comment on the administration than any other action to date.

Some feel that the President has been too hasty in throwing a monkey wrench into the airline system in such a way as to cause innocent persons to suffer for the corruption of the higher officials, while others believe it was exactly the thing that should have been done. At the present time it is impossible to arrive at any conclusions, for even those men directly involved are in a quandary as to the outcome. However, it would be well to summarize the situation as it stands today.

In the first place this investigation is, or should be, of interest to college students because it is so real that it affects our system of airlines for the future. We are all more or less interested in the aeronautics, and the boys in the R. O. T. C. especially in the army fliers. We are after all the ones who will be affected in the future by the outcome of this case.

There is one thing that seems to be definitely settled which is that the administration is eager to return the air-mail operations to private companies as soon as honest contracts are obtainable. Chairman Mead of the House Postoffice committee has indicated that such is true, and is now primarily interested in the passage of a bill to authorize the army to carry the air mails for one year.

When the contracts, which were awarded by former Postmaster General Farley, are cancelled, the air transport operators with postoffice department officials in May, 1930, were cancelled on the grounds that the awards were made through collusion and fraud without competitive bidding, the Pan-American Airways contract, which was cancelled because of the many difficulties involved.

Admiral Standley, chief of Naval operations, said recently that the navy could fly the Pan-American routes if necessary, but added that the navy was anxious to get out of the job. In connection with the flying of the routes by the army, there has been a tremendous amount of criticism due to the endangering of the lives of the fliers who are unfamiliar with the routes. In this regard the newspapers have added fuel to the flames with stories of army fliers being killed in crashes, while as a matter of fact the majority of them were not carrying the mail.

What is America Reading? Literary charts are made every week by leading magazines in order to tell book lovers what books are the most popular among American readers. This week the unexpected happened: Sinclair Lewis' "Work of Art" deposed "Anthony Adverse" from first place, a position Hervey Allen's book has held unchallenged for quite a time.

First places given on the chart this week are: "The State Versus Elinor Norton" by "A Modern Tragedy," "The Native's Return," "The Barbarian," "Josephine, Wife of Napoleon," and "Stephen Foster: America's Troubadour."

The State Versus Elinor Norton MARY ROBERTS RHINEHART The first romantic novel written by Mrs. Rhinehart since "This Strange Adventure." It is the story of a pretty, confident girl who deliberately commits a murder but is acquitted. How? Psychology is the answer. The vivid interest in the story is not in the heroine but in what happens to her.

The Well of Days IVAN BUNIN A charming, pleasant story of a Russian youth and a beautiful Indian. The novel's characters make this picture of old Russia a real one. It is a story of a young man who is called a "velled autobiography."

Work of Art SINCLAIR LEWIS Tansy Lewis was her name; Ora Wozna was his; she was beautiful and smart but an extrovert chambermaid in the swampland of the Florida Keys. The story is laid in Florida. The novel's characters make this picture of old Florida a real one. It is a story of a young man who is called a "velled autobiography."

Shake Hands with the Devil REARREN CONNER Action! Action! Action! A vivid, gripping story of the Irish revolution. The author is a true picture of the Irish revolution. The style is quite different from his previous work. So keen is the author's sense of rhythm that every picture of battle and bloodshed comes clear and ringing line of staccato brilliance.

Intramurals Are Beneficial

University Disproves Statements That Students Have No Athletic Opportunities Besides Varsity Teams

Statements that college students get little or no opportunity for athletics outside of the few who make the varsity are violently disproved by the University of Kentucky. During the 1932-33 school year, 807 male students participated in intramural athletics, according to Mr. E. B. Fisher, head of the Department of Physical Education.

Intramural sports may be enjoyed by all students including post-graduates, except those who are on the varsity teams in that particular sport. One hundred and eighteen students participated in four different sports and one student in 18 different ones during the 1932-33 season.

Seasons govern the intramural sports offered. The fall season, from the opening of football until December 24, embraces such activities as tennis, golf, football, horseback riding, cross-country, and volleyball. The winter period, from December 24 to April 1, includes boxing, wrestling, handball, and basketball. In the spring months, attention is concentrated on track, fencing, diamond ball, tennis, horseback riding and golf.

Communications

February 21, 1934

To the Editor of The Kernel: On Monday night, February 19, I put in a call to Ashland 6807, the telephone which serves both the music department and The Kernel business office after the switch board service is cut off. Both telephones were out and can be answered from either end of the line. Someone in the music department answered and being informed that I was calling The Kernel, he left the receiver down, making it impossible to ring the other party on the line. There can be no doubt that this action was intentionally rude and thoughtless.

The courteous which exist under the present telephone system at the University are distinctly awkward in themselves and when some individual takes it upon himself to deliberately cut off the service from one end, this is an act of deliberate change and improvement. There is some step which could be taken to eliminate the possibility of such action.

Probably the least said about the defeat of the Wildcats by the Florida Gators Saturday afternoon in the tournament, the better. It was a great disappointment to fans, team and the press at large. But the fact remains that at some time or other a team will meet defeat, and the law of averages had been long denied by the Big Blue as they had rolled up 24 straight wins.

It would have been for the best had the Wildcats been defeated during the progress of the regular season. Their record would not have been so impressive, perhaps, but the record would have been stronger.

That is the bad part about tournaments. A team that is very ordinary throughout the season will get "hot" in one game in a tournament and out a team which ordinarily is much their superior in every department of the game. A tournament is valuable in that it produces a high spirit of competition and interesting contests to the spectators, at least.

The whole Wildcat team was off in their first start in the tournament, and the loss came, because for one thing, the Cats were slightly overconfident and were inclined to take their first game easy. There is nothing worse for any team, in any sport, than overconfidence. It is worse than any team of opponent. It breaks down the spirit and leads to ultimate defeat. Perhaps the Cats were cocky, but they had a record to protect and were the defending champions besides.

Saturday was a day of upsets down in Atlanta. Not only did the Cats drop out of the running, but L.S.U., another seeded team, encountered a tartar in the Tennessee Vols and were eliminated. Alabama, who was second seeded, had difficulty in defeating Mississippi state, but is favorites to win the crown, now that the Cats are out of it.

From here, it looks as though Alabama or Tennessee will be crowned champion, depending on which wins, as the two must play in the semi-final on Monday afternoon. Probably the best game of the tournament will be played when Vanderbilt and Georgia meet up in the other semi-final contest.

The interest in boxing at the University is very high at present, and there seems to be an excellent chance of it being recognized as a minor sport by the athletic council.

Guignol Triumphs In Mystery Drama

two sailors from a ship-wrecked yacht. Nolle, although deformed in body, has a brilliant mind and bitterly resents the shore folk's intrusion. No less bitter is his old mother, Marm, who sits knitting and hating. During the first month of the stay on the island complications arise leading to the situation where each person in the tower comes to hate the dissipated and unpleasant Harry Leroy. One night an "accident" occurs, just as a coast guard officer arrives at the island. Every person has a well-founded motive for murder, and two confessions are made, yet each suspect appears to be innocent.

First mention must go to L. C. Robinson who has the extremely difficult task of portraying the leading role of Nolle, the hunch-back. Professor Robinson has captured the essence of the character and makes it live by his sincere and finished work. Director Fowler was wise in his choice for this part.

Outstanding too, in the cast is LeRoy Miles who forcefully and accurately conveys the part of Harry Leroy, the character that is the object of hate from all. Mr. Miles succeeds admirably in making his portrayal authentic in every detail. Dorothy Dyer Rodas, as the society matron, Mrs. Chamberlain Ditson, handles the part with finesse and shows remarkable ability. Mabel Baker, as Lois Cameron, handles the female lead capably, lending beauty to the play with her natural beauty and pleasing voice.

Frederic Andre deWilde, as Neddie Leroy, the juvenile lead, is perfectly cast, and the pleasing freshness he lends to the part makes for an authentic and realistic characterization. The part of Marm, Nolle's mother, is handled to perfection by Mabel Tyree whose affected cracked voice and decided limp give to the role everything it needs. The Swedish girl, Christine, is nicely and capably done by Faith Abbott.

Ruth Kay Schneider, as Annette, the French maid, is convincing; Leonard Van Arsdale, as Tony, the Italian sailor, is excellent and William Clay McKee, as Lars, the Swedish sailor, is well cast. Ollie Henson, enacting the role of Lieut. George Friebse, is effective in a role rather difficult to make interesting.

Lysofsky, Kentucky's 165-pound champ, easily gained a decision over Butler in the heaviest weight bout of the match. Lysofsky could have gained a knock-out early in the match but contented himself with giving the fans a scientific exhibition of polished boxing.

Holbrook, 118-pound Kentucky champ, took Power's measure with ease. He coasted through the fight to a decision, out-classing his opponent without trying to knock him out. Karsner, Kentucky, and Harrod, put up a good fight in the 100-pound class. Karsner fought stoutly and gained a popular decision.

Devoles of Kentucky gained a draw in the 145-pound class with Farmer, former Washington and Lee pugilist. Pickett of Kentucky lost the 125-pound match to Green on a decision. Pickett fought a defensive fight which might have caused the judges to vote against him.

Wildcats Lose In First Tourney Tilt

through the net, and Kentucky was again trailing by a one point margin.

Davis sank a basket from the side to start a rally, when ended after DeMoisy sank a crisp to bring the 'Cats into a 27 to 24 lead. During this rally the fans thought that the Kentucky "power house" had turned on, but it was merely a sputter. Hughes pushed one in from the side, and Warner answered in to make a crisp, and the score was 28 to 27 with Florida again in front. On the next tip-off Warner came back to sink another crisp shot.

DeMoisy brought the 'Cats into the lead when he sank two free throws, but this was short lived, when Shearer made a crisp and Love made a free loss good, the score being 33 to 31 with Florida again on the long end. At this point there were four minutes left to play, but the Wildcats did not gain another lead. They tried all the tricks they knew and forgot their defense. During this death-bed struggle, Davis sank one free throw and Shearer connected with a pair of crisps and one free toss to end the scoring for both teams.

Pottery Is Subject Of Home Ec Speaker
A meeting of the Home Economics club was held at 7:30 p. m., yesterday, in room 205 at the Agricultural building. Miss Mary Lois Williamson, critic teacher in home economics, Versailles high school, spoke on her hobby, "Pottery." The talk was illustrated by a display of glazed pottery and a potter's wheel. Ruth Forman presided. During the meeting a discussion of professional projects was held and refreshments were served at the end.

This was the third in a series of talks on hobbies. The first was given by Miss Anita Burman, field agent in junior club work, who spoke on "Perfumes," and the second by Dr. Henry Beaumont of the psychology department on "Housing in Vienna."

You hear a lot today about balanced diet... and there's something too in the way tobaccos are balanced that makes a cigarette milder and makes it taste better.

I keep coming back to that statement on the back of the Chesterfield package--

CHESTERFIELD CIGARETTES ARE A BALANCED BLEND OF THE FINEST AROMATIC TURKISH TOBACCO AND THE CHOICEST OF SEVERAL AMERICAN VARIETIES BLENDED IN THE CORRECT PROPORTION TO BRING OUT THE FINER QUALITIES OF EACH TOBACCO.

We believe you'll enjoy Chesterfields and we ask you to try them.
