

El Dorado, Kansas,
April 1, 1902.

My darling wife,

It is nearly eleven o'clock at night, I have been busy all day and a gas stove man and Mr. Butler - my manager - have just left my room. I have only a moment to write you before a mail train goes east. I arrived here yesterday. Will return to Jopoka tomorrow and go thence to Joplin. Am getting along here very nicely and all is sure to come out o.k. In haste.

Your loving Husband.
