UK starts $1 billion campaign

Campaign set to raise $1 billion in donations by 2007; more than $600 million from donors raised so far

UK officials kicked off a $1 billion fund-raising campaign Friday at the Lexington Center Ballroom and said the effort will build upon the current base of gifts and pledges to the university.

President Lee Todd, James Stuckert, the national campaign chair, and Terry Mobley, the vice president of development, announced that UK's nearly six-year fund-raising effort raised $618,670,171. The original goal was $900 million.

Officials hope to raise an additional $400 million over the next four years, bringing the new total goal to $1 billion.

"This is an extremely special day for this institution to celebrate our accomplishments," Todd told UK officials and supporters at the annual development lunch. "This marks the first time a public institution has raised this kind of money on a first-time capital campaign."

Former UK President Charles Wethington began the first phase of the fund-raising campaign in 1997.

The campaign received all of its money from private donors. Donations came from all 50 states and ranged from 50 cents to millions of dollars, Todd said.

Surplus property auctions open to departments, public

Hidden in the basement of the dilapidated Reynolds Building Warehouse No. 1 is a strange sight.

Covering nearly every inch of the creaking floor boards are shelves of old computers, aisles upon aisles of dusty bookshelves and slightly broken desks, piles of lamps and a hodgepodge of other assorted items that previously adorned rooms around campus.

All are lined up and primed for buying through the UK Surplus Auction that occurs about every two or three months. Items are also available for sale every Tuesday for faculty and staff.

However, it's buyers' beware at this auction, employees said.

"It's on its last leg by the time we show it to the public," said Scott Marksbury, administrative coordinator for the physical plant division. "The faculty and staff have had a chance to look at it for about two months then."

The auction is the last stage in the cycle of surplus management.

The process begins when a department decides it no longer has any use for its equipment and replaces it.

The old equipment is then given to the Physical Plant Division, which takes it to the warehouse, where the first wave of bidders come every Tuesday afternoon, Marksbury said.

Purchases made on Tuesdays are limited to staff and faculty with department identification and the authorization of their departments stating they can buy the items they seek.

All the departments at one time or another may converge on this spot, but some are frequent visitors.

"You can tell the neediest of departments because many of their staff (members) are long-time regulars at the surplus warehouse," Marksbury said. "The art department often needs pieces and parts for their inanimate projects. It's ideal because it's located beneath their studio."

Garry Bibbs, head of the sculpture department, agreed that the art department finds the surplus useful.

"Our students go to the auction... to scavenge for useful materials for their projects," he said.

All of the departments benefit from this recycling of surplus, said Tony Day, the senior accounting manager for the surplus program.

"The surplus department makes every effort to make sure we make the program available to the staff and faculty in the university," he said.

The resale of items has been a valuable resource to the university for the cash-strapped departments that can't afford new materials, Day said.

After all the items have been searched through for a few months, an auction is held to get rid of the wares.

These auctions bring in about $8,000 to $10,000 at each sale, which pays for the surplus program. The rest of the proceeds go to UK's general funds, Day said.

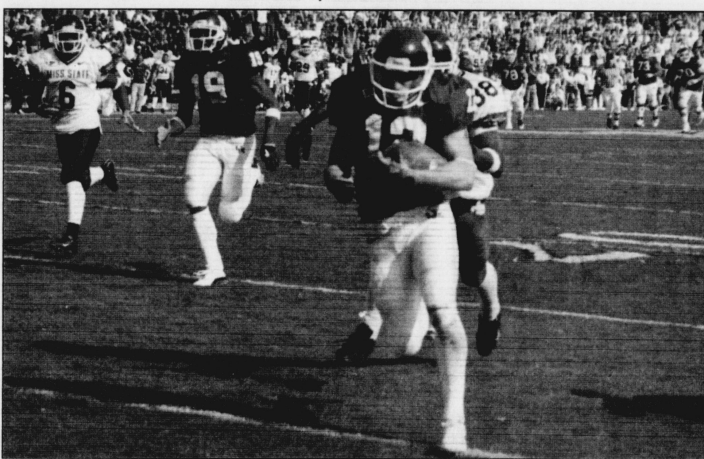

"Savvy bidders descend upon the warehouse already knowing the market value of the items they seek and bid accordingly," Day said.

The next auction should be in November. Marksbury said. Pre-registration for the auctions is available at www.uky.edu/eforms/alphaindex.html.

You can tell the neediest of departments because many of their staff (members) are long-time regulars."

ABNEY HELPS UK PILE IT ON

By Jeff Patterson
ASSISTANT SPORTS EDITOR

As Derek Abney raced down the sideline, everyone tried to get the monkey off his back.

Sprinting toward his eighth career touchdown return, tying the NCAA record, Abney followed blocker Earven Flowers to the end zone and, for good measure, Andrew Hopewell pushed him in during the third quarter of UK's comeback Saturday against Mississippi State.

The monkey was off Abney's back and UK's rout was on.

Trailing 17-0 late in the second quarter, UK staged one of its greatest comebacks, scoring 42 unanswered points in its 42-17 victory over the Mississippi State Bulldogs in front of 57,141 fans at Commonwealth Stadium.

Down 17-14 in the third quarter, Abney had a decision to make.

"I had a choice to stick with Earven or to cut in side," Abney said. "I knew if I stuck with him, he'd get me in the end zone. I had another guy (Andrew Hopewell) pushing me from behind, too. It was definitely a group effort. I think I get three points and they each get two."

The touchdown rejuvenated UK (4-1, 1-3 Southeastern Conference), giving it a 21-17 lead it would not relinquish.

But yet again, UK started the game sluggish.

After MSU running back Jerious Norwood rushed for 105 yards in the first quarter, UK seemed lifeless and uninspired. Norwood burst through the seams in UK's defense untouched on a 58-yard touchdown giving MSU (2-6, 1-3 SEC) an early 10-0 lead. A Kevin Fant touchdown pass to Ray Ray Bivines with 12:30 left in the half put MSU up 17-0.

As UK has done all season, it found itself within striking distance at halftime. UK fullback Ronald "Rock" Johnson plowed for a 7-yard score with 38 seconds left in the half.

California wildfires force evacuations
SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. — A wildfire roaring through the foothills of the San Bernardino Mountains burned as many as 20 homes and forced thousands to flee Saturday as it hopscotched through dense housing tracts. The fire, which erupted around 9 a.m. about 30 miles east of downtown Los Angeles, was fed by fierce Santa Ana winds and in a matter of hours had devoured 6,000 acres of chaparral. The cause of the blaze was unknown. Another fire, near Rancho Cucamonga, jumped down a hillside into an area of $1 million homes Saturday. The 13,730-acre blaze was the largest of a half-dozen burning throughout Southern California.

lars are essential in helping UK achieve the status of a Top-20 public research university by 2020.

"Nobody's backing off the goal of being a Top-20 school, but we're not going to achieve that status based on state funding," he said. "While private money can't replace public funding, we have to be sure that teaching, research and public service won't suffer because of a lack of funds."

Todd asked for a moment of silence during his speech to honor two of UK's staunchest supporters and contributors who recently died, former UK President Otis Singletary and former Gov. Ned Breathitt.

Todd highlighted some of UK's accomplishments since the campaign's launch, including record enrollment in 2003 for undergraduate and graduate students, gains in black enrollment and recruitment of the "most academically talented freshman class" in the school's history.

Provost Mike Nietzel said the success of the fund-raising campaign also dramatically increased UK's research funding. UK is now among the top 30 to 35 schools in terms of total research funding.

Funds from the campaign helped UK improve the quality of its research activities, Nietzel said.

"We are becoming a magnet for intellectual talent from across the country," he said. "We have a reputation where the world looks to us for research findings."

In addition to increasing research funds, the money raised by the campaign was used to fund scholarships, academic programs and Bucks for Brains, a program that helps UK recruit and retain top research faculty.

Gifts and pledges to the university also raised UK's endowment from $195 million to $415 million. Endowment funds created 58 new chairs and 148 professorships, bringing the current total to 80 chairs and 195 professorships.

The decision to extend the capital campaign four more years was based on the long-term commitment to UK displayed by donors' contributions, Todd said.

Todd said an important achievement of the capital campaign was the new relationships UK formed with contributors.

"It brought new people and investors to the university," he said. "People are excited about the momentum, and everyone wants to be a part of something successful."

Mobley said that the key to the campaign's success was good communication between administrators and contributors.

"We articulated our needs early on and ended up receiving over 400,000 gifts," Mobley said.

Maintaining scholarships will be the continued campaign's main concern, followed by funding construction of a new pharmacy-biology building and additions to the business and law colleges, Todd said.

One of UK's top goals concerning scholarships is maintenance of the Robinson Scholars program, Mobley said.

"We hope to acquire a $20 million endowment so that we can fully fund four scholarships for each of the 28 counties," he said.

Planning for the campaign's next phase is under way with details to be revealed at a kickoff event in the spring of 2004.

The black-tie event was held to induct 249 new donors into the Fellows Society which honors donors who have contributed or committed $10,000 or more to UK.

This was the second-largest total of new fellows inducted in the history of the society.

The talk of the evening, however, centered on the campaign's success in exceeding its original goal of $600 million and the expansion of this goal to $1 billion by 2007.

"UK is the first public institution to have its first fund-raising goal to be $1 billion," President Lee Todd said.

Todd recognized many of UK's recent accomplishments, such as the creation of 50 main chairs and 140 professorships, important research and this year's enrollment of what he called the best academic class at UK thus far.

"Why stop now?" Todd said. "This state is not going to get a lot richer during my term... so we have to keep going."

Other speakers said the campaign's success was simple.

"I'd like to summarize [it] in three words: vision, strategy and execution," said James Stuckert, chair of the UK Development Council.

Many at the dinner thought the new goal was right on target.

"It's needed for private individuals to step in where the state has left a gap," University Fellow Joe Fink said.

Ken Roberts, dean of the College of Pharmacy, said more money is needed to build a new facility for the college, ranked consistently as the third-best College of Pharmacy in the country.

"We're in very cramped spaces, with faculty scattered," Roberts said. "We've grossly outgrown our existing facility."

Wendy Baldwin, executive vice president for research, said she thinks the new goal is a great idea.

"I think it's fantastic and completely appropriate," she said.

"Bringing more money into UK will help the university reach its Top-20 goal, Baldwin said.

"Setting a fund-raising goal like that is just another piece of the puzzle to help people understand how good UK is," she said. "It's like an undervalued stock."

University Fellow George Ruschell had a unique outlook on the new high goal.

"It's nothing compared to the U.S. deficit," he said.

Others at the event praised the expanded campaign goal but acknowledged the difficulties it may face.

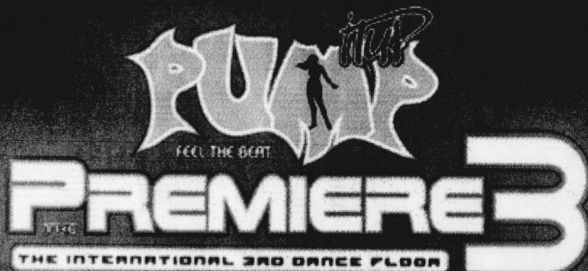

"It's laudable. It's exactly what needs to be done," said University Fellow Ron Geoghegan.

Increased private donations will help as the state cuts funding, he said.

"The challenge will be to get through the lull in the economy," he said.

Fall fashions full of color and combination

By Danielle Komis
STAFF WRITER

When you finally delve into your winter clothes stash, you're likely to be greeted with the smell of wool and the sight of old sweaters, uninspired button-up shirts and too-tight corduroys you wore in high school. It might be time to spice up your closet.

Here are some tips on how to dress fun, funky and full of color this fall.

Women's clothing

In women's clothing, there are many different hemlines present this fall, said Emily Rives, manager of Bella Rose, a women's boutique on Maxwell Street. This includes the short mini and the calf-length skirt, she said.

The pleated, cheerleader-type skirt has become popular, as well as Audrey Hepburn style dresses. Ribbons and sashes as embellishments are also very popular, Rives said.

Katie Blair, co-owner and manager of General Eccentric, a women's clothing boutique on the corner of Woodland Avenue and Maxwell Street, mentioned that another trend is skirts with netting-like material, called tulle, underneath them, which makes the skirts poof out.

Blair said women's pants this season are also shying away from the wide-leg flared look and are becoming straighter and more tightly-fitted. Tweed fabrics are very in-style now for pants, as well as plaid prints.

In general, color is very big this season, especially colors considered typically feminine, such as pinks and purples, Blair said.

"Add color you'll see a lot of," Blair advised.

This trend is reflected

in long, bright scarves and bright-colored, funky gloves that can be worn every day.

Combining "dressy" clothes with casual clothes is another hot trend. "Suiting is very big right now," Rives said.

Her examples included a corduroy jacket with jeans or a tailored suit jacket with jeans.

There are also trends occurring in women's outerwear. Blair said she has been having trouble keeping the fireman-style coat in stock. The coats are made with a soft velveteen fabric and a more feminine cut than their inspiration.

Other popular styles are coats made with suede fabrics and fur lining, as well as the shorter, 1980s-style jacket also lined with fur.

Men's clothing

Though men's fashions don't tend to go through the major trends that women's fashions do, there are still some noticeable changes in this season's menswear.

Gone are the days of dull grays, browns and blues for the winter and fall seasons. "The more color, the better," said Amy Rudesill, store manager at the Express in Fayette Mall.

Jessica Way, assistant manager at Banana Republic in Fayette Mall, also mentioned that brighter, bolder colors are in style right now. Way pointed out the rich red and green colors of some of their latest scarves as an example of this trend.

This season, an elevated sense of style is emerging in menswear.

"It's kind of a 1940s-style, when men dressed up more often," Way explained. For example, button-down shirts with wool slacks are popular, as well as dress shirts with jeans and sports coats with jeans.

Rudesill mentioned that solid-colored dress shirts and vertically striped dress shirts are in style this season.

For fabrics, Rudesill said that cashmere is huge this season, especially in scarves, gloves and sweaters. Argyle sweaters and socks are also in style, Way said, while denim is still a mainstay.

Boot-cut pants and jeans continue to be popular, though there's been a significant decrease in the popularity of cargo pants, Rudesill said.

Zip-up pullovers and sweater and sweatshirt hoodies are also top sellers in menswear. "The sporty look is in," Way said.

This look contributes to the popularity of the shoe Way called the "Euro-sneaker," which is a streamlined, dressier approach to the classic American sneaker.

Transfer is highlight of scrimmage

Ben Roberts
STAFF WRITER

In a game that is played to chart player progress for the upcoming season, the most impressive Wildcat on the court also happened to be the only ineligible one.

Junior guard Patrick Sparks led the White team with 23 points in a 77-77 tie in Saturday's Blue-White Scrimmage at Memorial Coliseum. The walk-on came off the bench to make five three-pointers and grab five steals, helping his squad jump out to a 49-24 halftime lead.

Sparks, who played the last two seasons for Western Kentucky University will have to sit out this year due to an NCAA rule that forbids transfers from competing in their first season at a new school.

Sparks said he didn't approach Saturday's contest any differently even though he knew it would be his last opportunity to play in front of UK's fans all year.

"I'm not the biggest, strongest or fastest, but I take it as a challenge and just compete with all my heart," Sparks said. "Every time I step on the floor I play like it's my last game. Tonight just happened to be my last game of the year."

Teammates said they expected Sparks to play well. "Sparks was no surprise to me," senior guard Gerald Fitch said. "He does that every day in practice and has been doing it in pickups ever since he got here."

While Sparks shined for the White team, Fitch was the star for the Blue squad. The returning starter scored 23 points and dished out seven assists while leading his teammates in erasing a 16-point halftime deficit. Forward Chuck Hayes added 22 points and 13 rebounds for the Blue team.

Head coach Tubby Smith said he expected the strong second half performances from Fitch and Hayes.

"They're supposed to do that," Smith said. "They've been through the wars before, and they were getting beat. They did what they needed to do to get into the flow of the game."

Going into Saturday's scrimmage, many of the questions on fans' minds revolved around UK's 7-foot freshman Shagari Alleyne and Lukasz Obrzut. While Obrzut struggled for much of the night, Alleyne proved to be a force for the Blue team on both ends of the court. The Bronx, N.Y., native finished the game with 15 points, 10 rebounds and three blocked shots.

Fitch said Alleyne's defensive presence will be a huge factor in the Wildcats' success this season.

"He's a giant down there," Fitch said. "Just his presence alone will intimidate guys. He's going to make our defense a whole lot better when he's down there."

After seeing so many strong plays and performances during Saturday's scrimmage, UK fans seemed ready to stick around for an extra period. But Smith declared the contest a draw, thanked the fans for coming and left the court to a standing ovation.

"We wanted to leave it at that," Smith said after the game. "We left on a high note. It's not about winning or losing. It's about getting better."

Buffalo no stress for UK goalie

By Jeff Patterson
ASSISTANT SPORTS EDITOR

UK goalie Andy Gruenebaum didn't even work up a sweat. He stood alone in the goal for nearly 90 minutes without seeing any action. The UK defense seemed to make life easy for him.

Buffalo battled a rigid UK defense Friday night, getting one shot on goal in UK's 2-0 victory on Senior Night at the UK Soccer Complex.

Gruenebaum earned his seventh shutout of the season for UK (10-1, 4-0 Mid-American Conference). He hasn't allowed a goal in the last 287 minutes of play dating back to a goal in the 75th minute in a 2-1 loss at North Carolina on Oct. 12.

Against Buffalo (1-10-3, 0-5-0 MAC), Gruenebaum had to find other ways to stay in the game.

"You always have to keep yourself in it mentally and you do that with other players,"

Gruenebaum said. "You keep yourself in it that way."

"Buffalo is a good team, and the good thing about college soccer is that anybody can win on any given night, so every victory we get is very emotional and hard-fought."

UK jumped out to an early 1-0 lead in the eighth minute when midfielder Joey Gaworecki intercepted a Buffalo pass and drove toward the left side of the goal, luring away goalie Daniel Bell and setting up an open-net shot for forward Riley O'Neill.

"It was pretty simple," O'Neill said. "Joey gave me a nice pass between two players and I put it in the net. My job is the easy part."

UK struck again in the 24th minute on a Thomas Senecal header off a Jamal Siteiwi assist.

After leading 2-0, UK's defense did the rest of the work. "I think people are understanding what we are trying to do and understanding the pride we have in our defense," said UK head coach Ian Collins. "We had one or two shaky moments toward the end, but I thought for the most part we were solid."

In the 72nd minute, Buffalo fired a shot hitting the cross bar, but UK cleared the ball out of harm's way. "When you don't see many shots, you are waiting for that one that you have to be ready for because it is inevitable," Gruenebaum said. "When it came I was screened, and I got a piece of my hand on it off the bar."

Women's soccer loses third straight to Vols

Senior forward Elizabeth Ramsey scores Cats' lone goal in Sunday's 4-1 home loss to the University of Tennessee

By Leslie Wilhite
STAFF WRITER

The dismal weather matched the spirit of UK's women's soccer team after they fell 4-1 to the 16th-ranked University of Tennessee Volunteers Sunday afternoon at the UK Soccer Complex.

Tennessee (12-4-1, 6-1-1 SEC), which stands atop the East division of the Southeastern Conference, wasted no time getting on the board in Sunday's game.

Volunteer freshman midfielder Ali Christoph scored on a head shot in front of the goal on an assist from senior forward Rhian Wilkinson just two and a half minutes into the game.

The Vols scored again in the 34th minute when junior midfielder Sue Flamini fed the ball to Wilkinson, who kicked a 20-yard chip-shot over the head of UK sophomore goalkeeper Liz Butler.

The Volunteers' third goal of the half came in the 41st minute on a feed from Flamini to junior midfielder Kayla Lockaby, giving the Vols a 3-0 lead at halftime.

UK coach Warren Lipka made some adjustments in the second half, putting freshman Anne Ogundele in at goalkeeper. He told the Cats they would have to be more aggressive in the second period to keep pace with Tennessee.

"Coach told us to find something within," senior forward Elizabeth Ramsey said. "Focus on one goal at a time, 15 minutes at a time. We knew we would have to prove ourselves." Ramsey took Lipka's advice to heart. Three minutes into the second half, she scored UK's first goal of the game on a free ball inside the box. It was her seventh goal of the season, and it looked like it could be the turning point for the Cats.

But UK couldn't capitalize on its shots on goal. Although players were more aggressive in the second half, getting off six shots compared to two in the first half, the Cats narrowly missed several scoring opportunities.

The Vols weren't finished yet. Although Ogundele saved two shots during the second period, Wilkinson scored Tennessee's final goal on a breakaway in the 72nd minute to seal the victory for the Vols.

With the loss, the Cats dropped to 6-8-2 overall and 4-3-2 in the SEC. It is their second straight regular season loss to the Vols.

After losing three straight games, the Cats look to end the regular season with a win on Senior Night against Southern Methodist at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the Soccer Complex.

The Cats have already clinched an SEC tournament berth and will head to Tuscaloosa, Ala., to begin tournament play Nov. 6.

The team knows that tournament wins are important for keeping its season alive.

"We need to play all four tournament games like the second half of this game," Ramsey said, "or our season is basically over."

Last year, the Vols knocked the Cats out of the tournament with a 1-0 win in the semifinals.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va. — Junior midfielder Jamal Shteivi scored the only goal of the game in a 1-0 UK win Sunday over Marshall.

UK (11-4-11, 5-0 Mid-American Conference) shut out its fourth straight opponent. The Cats have not allowed a goal in MAC play.

With seven seconds remaining in overtime, sophomore goalkeeper Andy Gruenbaum kicked a goal past midfield. Freshman forward Riley O'Neill took the kick and passed to Shteivi, who put a shot into the back left corner of the goal.

The win secured the MAC regular season title for the Cats.

Kalsariva faces 53rd-ranked Karin Coetzee of Wake Forest in Monday's finals. She has also earned a spot in the 32-player national indoor tournament Nov. 6-9.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

"The challenge will be to get through the lull in the economy."

- University Fellow Ron Geoghagan, on the difficulties for UK in getting $1 billion through its new campaign.

IN OUR OPINION

Use private funds wisely, UK

UK's recent success in fund raising - and high expectations for the future - foretells good things to come for the university.

But with the money flowing in, we must also recognize the responsibility that comes alongside this good fortune.

It may be a no-brainer to say, but it has to be said: UK had better use the money wisely.

UK has raised $618,670,171 in private funds since 1997. At a fund-raising campaign Friday, university officials announced a new goal of an additional $400 million over the next four years.

President Lee Todd said at the event that private dollars are essential in helping UK achieve the status of Top-20 public research university by 2020.

"While private money can't replace public funding, we have to be sure that teaching, research and public service won't suffer because of a lack of funds," Todd said.

Students, hopefully, won't get the short end of the stick either: UK's progress as a growing research university is vital. "We are becoming a magnet for intellectual talent across the country," in Provost Mike Nietzel's words.

But equally important to UK's reputation are the people already here, attending as students.

It looks like UK so far has been directing at least the greater portion of its money toward useful causes.

In addition to increasing research funds, money raised by the campaign has been used to fund scholarships, academic programs and Bucks for Brains, which helps recruit and retain top research faculty. UK has also more than doubled its endowment to $415 million with the last four years' gifts and pledges.

The campaign's main concern now is maintaining scholarships, especially the Robinson Scholars program - and rightly so. But in that line of thinking, it would also be nice to see UK raise enough money to hold off raising tuition.

Other priorities in the campaign will be funding construction of a new pharmacy-biology building and additions to business and law buildings. All of these areas will need the enhancements and improvements soon enough, if not immediately.

WEEK IN REVIEW

Here's a look back at events and issues from last week. If you want to sound off on any of these, e-mail the Dialogue desk at dialogue@kykernel.com

MONDAY

Enforcement of a city-wide smoking ban ordinance will continue to be postponed as the issue winds its way through the courts, the Kernel reported Monday.

Fayette Circuit Judge Larry VanMeter asked attorneys for both sides in the case to read up on precedent-setting cases. The lawyers must write briefs and respond to the opposing sides' arguments by Nov. 5, VanMeter said.

The court opinions the attorneys will examine involve private rights against public health. Attorneys were also told to look at precedents covering laws on issues like the fortification of drinking water and sewer hook-ups.

VanMeter said that he may not call for further oral arguments in the case.

TUESDAY

The Lexington-Fayette Urban County Government, UK and Samaritan Hospital announced Tuesday that many of their employees can soon receive forgivable loans of up to $15,000 by purchasing a home in an area between Cooper Drive and Sixth Street, the Kernel reported.

The project is an effort at revitalizing downtown by infusing new residential projects and older neighborhoods in the city center with young professionals, in addition to increasing home ownership downtown and, for UK, retaining faculty and staff.

Helping businesses attract talented workers, helping balance the rental property around UK with homes, and decreasing commuter and parking problems are other goals of the project.

Any UK worker can receive up to five percent of the total purchase price of a home, condo or duplex, and loans are not to exceed $15,000.

WEDNESDAY

Persuaded by arguments from Student Government President Rachel Watts, the Lexington-Fayette Urban County Council voted unanimously to delay action on the proposed keg ordinance until Nov. 6, the Kernel reported.

Council members said they want to give students more time to get involved with the proposed ordinance that would track and tag beer kegs. The policy's proponents say it is needed to combat underage drinking at parties.

Watts said she did not speak to the council in defense of underage drinking, but that she wanted the council to give students time to respond to the proposal.

SG has been scrambling to voice student opinion since a committee approved the proposal for further consideration at a meeting Oct. 14. No students attended that meeting.

Watts said she and Mayor Teresa Isaac are working to hold a forum with students, police, neighborhood associations and council members.

THURSDAY

UK students will be able to use their Plus Accounts at restaurants and retail stores off campus and manage their accounts online starting next semester, the Lexington Herald-Leader reported.

The university will initially contract with about 30 Lexington vendors to pilot the program to expand the use of the Plus card, which students and faculty use as debit cards at campus bookstores and dining and laundry facilities.

FRIDAY

Natural gas bills are expected to rise 10 to 40 percent this winter, hitting students living in the campus area, where many older homes are mainly heated using natural gas, the Kernel reported.

A representative for Columbia Gas of Kentucky told a Kernel reporter that the problem was due to high prices over the summer, which made it difficult to stock up on gas for the winter.

Muslim holy month is more than fasting

Hunger is more than just a pang that hits me during a long class this month. It's a reminder of the less fortunate who don't have a way to stifle that pang.

Ramadan began Sunday, and as a Muslim, I will be fasting every day for a month from sunrise to sunset.

There are a lot of misconceptions and unknowns about fasting. Many people nod when I tell them that I'm fasting and say "cool." When they find out that I can't drink water or even chew gum, they often change their response to "crazy."

Muslims fast for many more reasons than just to experience hunger. It is a complete fast that keeps one from more than just eating or drinking.

My eyes, ears, hands and feet are just as responsible for fasting as my mouth.
Hearing Chingy destroy the English language with "Right Thurr" becomes a ridiculous insult to my ears. Inner reflection and trying to be less judgmental, more loving, less unforgiving and more compassionate are high on the list of priorities. I spend the holy month trying to remind myself to be the best person I can throughout every moment of the day.

There are 1.3 billion Muslims in the world. Islam is the fastest-growing religion in the world. Knowing that people in every country in the world are experiencing the same hunger, the same spiritual surge, envelops me in a sense of unity.

The simplest things in life that are often taken for granted become special in Ramadan. Food and drink take on a whole new meaning. Passing by a water fountain in the classroom building when I want nothing more than a drink reminds me that God gave us all free will. As I veer away from it, I remember that I'm responsible for every step I take.

Ramadan is not easy, but it's not a hardship. I've been fasting each year since I was about 7 years old. My teachers would marvel at me in elementary school during class parties. My peers would be sitting around licking icing off their cupcakes and piling their plates high with sugary, greasy junk food while I ignored the free-for-all.

One teacher patted me on the head and said, "My you have such willpower. I could never do it."

It never bothered me, though. Sure, I was hungry and had a sweet tooth to rival Cookie Monster. But I felt firm in my convictions, and I knew that when I ended my fast at sunset that night with my family, that dinner would seem better than anything I could have eaten during the day.

Many people say just what my teacher did - that they could never do it. It's not such a difficult thing, though. My stomach may begin making sounds resembling those of a cat fight, and I'll know that I can sit with my friends at lunch but that I won't be eating with them. But I know I'm doing it for God, and that negates any thought that may cross my mind of breaking my fast.

The UK Muslim Student Association is hosting a program on Thursday, Oct. 30 to welcome Ramadan on campus. I encourage anyone interested in learning more about the holy month to stop by the Student Center's small ballroom at 4:30 that afternoon. Following two guest speakers, Muslim students will end their fast at sunset and a free dinner will be served to everyone in attendance.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dems are 'for the people,' Reps try to buy the people

From the beginning, Republicans have been pro-business, and Democrats have been pro-people. But in the past 30 years, Democrats lost their identification with the privileged. Americans feel isolated and are dispassionate. Every election, fewer people vote. We feel betrayed by politicians and do not feel our votes will count.

But in Kentucky, Ben Chandler, Susan Westrom and Daniel Monjardo, among many others, are bringing the distinction of "for the people" back to the Democratic Party. They are emphasizing the will of the people.

Massive Republican power is being leveled at this state to get Fletcher into office. Money is flowing in from all over the country, as is evident by the number of ads on television, for example. But the race is so close. As I write this, some polls show Chandler down by a mere 1 percent (47 to 46 percent).

Don't be swayed to vote against your interests. Kentucky is a democratic state. Prove that no amount of money is going to buy our votes. To every registered voter: Nov. 4 is the day you will vote again and prove that you are not satisfied sitting on the sidelines watching this race be won by corporate money. If we let that happen, who will represent the people?

Cats resurrect season, show fans they won't quit

We had seen this before. A lifeless crowd and 15,000 empty seats. An anemic offense. A porous defense. A 17-0 deficit through the second quarter for the team in blue. It looked like the standard recipe for an afternoon of agony for the Cats.

It would have been so easy for them to quit, so easy for them to play out the tragic script that had been acted out so many times before.

They could have folded like so many teams had before them. No one would have been surprised.

But they didn't quit. UK stormed back from the brink and refused to let its season slip away. Led by seniors Jared Lorenzen and Derek Abney, the Cats scored 42 unanswered points. When was the last time UK did that against a Southeastern Conference team?

No one could have seen that coming. On UK's first 27 offensive plays, the Cats gained a measly 52 yards. Lorenzen looked frustrated, the offensive line looked pathetic and 240-pound fullback Rock Johnson was the only Cat who remotely resembled a running back.

Not even quarterback Shane Boyd could inject life into that comatose offense like he had against Ohio or South Carolina.

But then, UK awoke from its coma. The magic elixir: a return to the wide-open, spread offense that made Lorenzen a record-setting quarterback.

Finally, the Cats' offense looked like a cohesive unit. Finally, Lorenzen and his receivers looked comfortable instead of confused and frustrated.

Back in the shotgun, Lorenzen looked at home sling passes and moving the Cats downfield. With each completion, life returned to the UK sidelines and to the stands of Commonwealth Stadium.

That spark ignited the Cats' drive to resurrect this game and their season.

In the second half, Arliss Beach broke free for a first down, only to lose the football. The ball bounced away and it looked like UK's comeback hopes would be lost as well.

But out of nowhere appeared Lorenzen. Running downfield, he would not allow this game and this season to slip away. He jumped on the ball and saved the day for UK. "Most quarterbacks would not have been around that ball," UK head coach Rich Brooks said. "That was a huge play by Jared Lorenzen."

That was the theme of the day, that extra effort, that determination to keep the season from going down the drain. There was Derek Abney on his record-setting punt return, refusing to be stopped short of the goal line.

"He just refused to go down," Brooks said. "It looked like he just willed himself in."

All day, it would have been so easy for the Cats to quit, but they never did.

"I think our fans were ready to write obits on us," Lorenzen said. "Thank God we turned it around."

The Cats turned it around with a vengeance. They found a way to win when it looked like all hope was lost. UK fans should learn a lesson from that.

Don't quit on this team, because they're not quitting on us.

At halftime, UK head coach Rich Brooks challenged his team.

"I just told them that they were ready to put their team and their season in the dumper if they didn't accept the challenge," Brooks said. "We challenged the defense to play the defense we played last week and that we've been playing, not the defense we masqueraded as in the first 20 minutes of the game."

The challenge worked. UK quarterback Jared Lorenzen led the Cats on a 9-play, 80-yard drive to start the half. UK opened up the Bulldog defense by switching to four wide receiver sets.

But there was trouble along the way.

After running back Arliss Beach stretched for first down yardage, he fumbled the ball. Lorenzen sprinted for the recovery.

"That was a big play for them," said MSU head coach Jackie Sherrill. "That kept the ball in their hands and kept the momentum going."

That momentum led Lorenzen the rest of the way. Lorenzen picked apart the defense en route to his 256 yards and one touchdown performance on 16 for 24 passing.

Trailing 17-14, Jared Cook punted to Abney.

Abney burned MSU with two punts returned for touchdowns last season. So, Sherrill had Cook punt out of bounds instead of punting directly to Abney.

But this time he punted right to Abney.

"We mis-kicked the one he ran back," Sherrill said. "We did that last year. If you miss it and hook it back, then most of the coverage is through the boundary, and you've got a problem."

Brooks called Abney's 80-yard return the turning point of the game.

"We wanted to get him the record all year long," Brooks said. "That was a huge play in the game, and it pumped life into our football team as well. It really picked up everybody offensively and defensively. Everyone seemed to get better."

The defense allowed 100 yards in the second half and picked off three passes. The rush gaps that had been available to MSU runners in the first half were filled.

But Abney still had to help break a record. Early in the fourth quarter, Lorenzen lobbed a 53-yard touchdown pass in two-man coverage to Abney, giving UK a 28-17 lead.

Abney pounded the ball into the turf and Lorenzen sprinted to get it. He held the ball high in the air as he strutted back to the UK sideline. The touchdown broke the UK record for career touchdown passes with 75, held by Tim Couch and Lorenzen.

"That one I did want," Lorenzen said. "And I'm sure if I check my voice mail, I have something from Tim yelling at me for breaking the record. It is a good record, and that one will go in the trophy case."

1950 football team honored with national championship

UK's 1950 football team was honored Saturday for receiving the school's only national championship in football.

Emery Clark still thinks the UK football team should have defeated Tennessee in 1950. Maybe if it had, it would have been named the national champion in 1950.

Fifty-three years later, Clark and the 1950 team's wish came true. The team was awarded the school's only national championship in football by Jeff Sagarin, a nationally recognized computer analyst who helps determine the national championship.

UK honored the 1950 team Saturday during halftime. Sagarin looked back through the record books, and through his analysis he named UK the 1950 national champion this summer. Oklahoma claimed the title because in that era the team with the No. 1 ranking before entering bowl games won the title.

But under head coach Paul "Bear" Bryant, UK completed its 11-1 season with the school's biggest win ever: UK defeated No. 1 Oklahoma 13-7 in the Sugar Bowl, snapping Oklahoma's 36-game winning streak.

Clark, a safety on the 1950 team, still reflects on the loss to Tennessee.

"Well, Tennessee beat us that year," Clark said of the 7-0 defeat. "They weren't inside of our 30-yard line but that one time — that was our fault. We ought to have won that game, but that's the way it goes."

UK won its first SEC title in 1950 and featured Outland Trophy winner (for the nation's top lineman) Bob Gain and quarterback Babe Parilli.

Ed Hamilton, a halfback, was happy just to receive recognition for the team's effort.

"It was pretty much a surprise being 50 years behind," Hamilton said. "We always thought we were pretty good, but at least one other person thought we were pretty good: Sagarin."

Sagarin rates teams in various categories, including strength of schedule and opponents' strength of schedule. The Bowl Championship Series that currently selects the championship game uses analysis from Sagarin.

For Clark, the homecoming brought back memories.

"It'll make you think back to the old days," Clark said. "I don't think I've missed a home game since I got out of school."
