TECH SERVICES VIDEOTAPE LIBRARY

The Tech Services Division at King Library recently added OCLC Report #11 to their collection of OCLC Reports on videotape. The new Report deals with OCLC's New Telecommunications Network as well as their Project ADAPT. It also features a look at one of the West Coast's largest reference centers, the Pasadena Public Library, and how it uses EPIC.

Other tapes in this series which King Tech Services has in its collection include OCLC Reports #3-10 plus a special interview with OCLC founder, Fred Kilgore, and the EDUCOM 87 Keynote Address by John Sculley.

Generally, these tapes run about thirty minutes in length. Any library staff member wishing to borrow any of these tapes is welcome to do so. For more information, call Mary McLaren, Acquisitions (257-2543).

LOCAL PLANNING DOCUMENTS COLLECTION ESTABLISHED AT UK

The Kentucky Chapter of the American Planning Association has designated the University of Kentucky's Government Publications/Maps Dept. as its depository for local planning documents produced by cities, counties, and Area Development Districts. The collection is expected to be ready for use by late 1990, and should include such documents as comprehensive plans, zoning regulations, historic preservation plans, open space plans, etc. For more information on this collection, contact Sandee McIninch. THANKS FROM CLIS

The following letter was received by Paul Willis from Dean Thomas Waldhart of the College of Library and Information Science:

I've come to the end of my second year as acting dean of the College and I want to take some time to formally thank you, and you staff, for everything that you have done for the College over the years. At many universities throughout the country the relationship between the graduate library school and the library system is more adversarial than mutually supportive. That is not the case at the University of Kentucky, and I believe that is largely because you and your staff have always been actively involved in the master's program. Without question, our educational program is stronger because of that interest and support and we hope that the college has been able to give a little back to the library system as well.

The library system's contribution to the College is most evident in the contributions of your staff to our instructional program--over the last two years 13 staff members have brought their special expertise to the college as instructors. Taking their professional experience into the classroom adds a dimension to our program which would be difficult to duplicate with full-time faculty who sometimes lose direct contact with professional practice. Certainly the students recognize and appreciate greatly this aspect of our educational program and I believe that it represents a real program strength. At the same time, many professional staff in the library system have monitored professional field experience for our students (also a highly valued educational experience). Finally, the professional staff of the library system contribute directly to the educational program through collection development work and by working with individual students in classroom related activities (e.g., this is especially true in courses which require students to actively use the information resources available in the library system--while we ask students to minimize their time demands on the professional staff, I know that a great deal of learning takes place at the point of use and that it is your staff that does the teaching).

I am looking forward to the introduction of UK100, Introduction to Information Resources, in the Fall. I think that the course has a great deal of potential for making the university library a more visible and important part of the undergraduate's educational experience. In addition, over the next couple of years I am hopeful that the College can take a more active role in developing more numerous and varied continuing education opportunities for the academic library community.

In short, we much appreciate all that you have done for the library school and look forward to working with you in the future.

ARL TRAINING SKILLS INSTITUTE

The Association of Research Libraries will be holding a Training Skills Institute in Atlanta, GA, July 31-August 3. The host for the institute will be Emory University's Woodruff Library. The three-and-a-half-day institute is designed to provide a conceptual framework for the provision of training, as well as methods and techniques to carry out the work. With this knowledge and these skills, library staff can make better judgements about what kinds of training will have a significant impact on library operations. This program will also allow them to form the basis of an inhouse training program at their home institution.

This process is designed for library professionals responsible for training or for determining staff training needs. These include supervisors, personnel officers, systems office staff, and BI instructors. Topics to be studied include: Learning Theory and Practice, Training Design and Delivery, Conduct of Learning Events, and Evaluation and Follow-Up. Participants will have an opportunity to develop and deliver a training program in an ARL member library. The projects will be chosen from a variety of topics which reflect the needs and interests of the library staff and participants.

Cost for the Institute is $425.00, not including travel or housing. Delta Airlines has agreed to give participants 40% discounts off roundtrip airfare. For additional information, contact the Training Assistant, Office of Management Services, Association of Research Libraries, 1527 New Hampshire Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036 (202-232-8656).

LSO PICNIC

Mark your calendar now for the Library Staff Organization's Annual Picnic on Friday, June 22, from 11:30 a.m. - 1:30 p.m. This year the picnic will be held on the Maxwell Place grounds. The highlight of the picnic will be a tour of Maxwell Place conducted by Mrs. Wethington.

LSO members are asked to bring a pot-luck dish; non-members are asked to bring a dish and pay a $3.00 fee. Fried chicken, rolls, and soft drinks will be provided by LSO. If it rains, the picnic will be held in the staff lounge, King North.
