Hallow'en Opportunities Are Many

Do you want a husband—or is it a wife? Halloween is the best day of all the year for discovering just what sort of better-half you are to be. Hold the spell by one of your fingers, swing it around your head three times and let it fall. It will show the shape of your lover's initials. Of course they might be hard for anyone but you to read. If you are Scotch, Dame Custon says throw a ball of blue yarn out of a window, but hold to one end of the string. The ball will leave the nearly half through winding the yarn, call loudly, "Who hauls?" and the name of your future wife. If an Irishman has to repeat the Pater Noster backwards while reciting the year in order to get the correct answer.

There are many ways of actually seeing an apparition. One way is to be. Wear the left sleeve of a garment, hang it before the fire to dry, and then, about midnight, the lover will come and turn the drying article. If you don't see the image, you can say that you must have looked off to sleep and missed it. This works for anyone.

A FRIEND PASSES

In the passing of "Jack" Dicker, many students and alumni of the University have lost a true friend. It has been estimated that more than 5,000 students came in contact with the genial and intelligent engineering professor during his long term of service to the institution.

A man who sought to help students in their personal as well as their scholastic problems, John B. Dicker established himself in the hearts of all persons who were fortunate enough to know him. A recognized authority in the pattern, woodworking, blacksmithing, foundry, and machine shop divisions of the College of Engineering, he sought to instill in the minds of his students the principles of the vocation to which he devoted his life's study. In addition to his own students, he was vitally interested in student problems and was never known to betray a confidence placed in him by any person who sought his counsel.

BARNUM WAS RIGHT

An editor of sports on a local newspaper makes the bold statement that it is the fault of the students that the University does not have a fighting team. Before going further, we want it known that the students do not think that the Wildcats are a listless ball club. We also want it known that the student body is back of the team in defeat as well as victory. So much for that.

This so-called newspaper man remarks in his brilliant and subtle manner: "It is so unpleasant to play football at a game is lost, it will prove to be a wonder to us why all the boys don't quit." We venture to say that many things are a wonder to this outstanding sports writer, who attempts, as did Atlas, to carry the burden of the world upon his shoulders.

The average intelligent person declares: "There may be other schools in the country that have fans who do nothing but knock, but we don't believe it." Who cares, we ask you, Mr. sports editor, who do you believe? Furthermore, does it make a great amount of difference what the fans think of the Wildcat performance? Has the student body arisen, en masse, to declare themselves mortified and chagrined at the defeat of the Cats by the powerful Washington and Lee team? No! It is true that possibly several students have talked "through their hats" about the defeat but that surely doesn't mean that the entire student body should be publicly chastised for the mistakes of a few.

The student body is willing to forget the Washington and Lee game and do their part to help the Wildcats overcome more powerful and important foes. With a little cooperation on the part of everyone concerned, many embarrassing and regrettable situations could be avoided. The University students are not prone to seek trouble or to justify criticism any person or persons. As a whole, they are an intelligent and fair-minded group.

Can the sports writers, the same men who dubbed the Wildcats the "Hitless Wonders," sincerely criticize the student body for something of which that group is entirely innocent? The majority of students realize that the team is playing a type of football which would not result in high-scoring, one-sided victories but they DID NOT nickname them the "Hitless Wonders," because of this fact. Does not the fact revert to the persons seeking to "correct" it?

It is the benefit of some ill-informed persons, that the student body is not seeking trouble and they, as a whole, are backing the team in its sincere efforts to play the type of football that will reflect the greatest amount of good-will upon the University of Kentucky, an institution known for its sportsmanship upon the football field and elsewhere.

The Kernel, the official publication of the student body of the University of Kentucky, is desirous of defending the students against these unjust attacks. We bear no malice toward any person or group of persons but merely wish to be known for doing the things that you will not reflect any criticism upon this University. We have been accused of doing something that would not bear out our traditions as we would like to have them borne out. For this, and only this, reason, was this editorial written.

ANOTHER FIRESIDE

Last Sunday night, October 22, the President of the United States and the people engaged in another of those delightful fireside chats which have characterized the Roosevelt administration. This manner of discussing common problems is quite new, but its success has been tremendous.

In all of these talks the President has discussed some basic problem which was confronting us at that time. His latest address considered several problems, but seemed to be more of a plea for the people to understand that nothing can be done overnight. If we will stop and think what has taken place since March 4, we all will have to agree that this nation has gone a long way towards recovery—four million men re-employed, home owners and farm holders can now feel sure they will be able to keep their homes. Then too, 300,000 young men have had their ideals and hopes restored through the reforestation camps. All of these steps are definite acts which have lessened the depression. The job of conquering this depression is a long time job and cannot be accomplished in a day. To date, we have recovered exactly 23 per cent, which means at the present rate, we will be in normal times again in less than two years. It is far better to build slowly and securely than to build fast, and have the structure collapse.

The President, since the beginning of his term, has made two things clear. First—he promised no miracles, and second—that he would do his best. Miracles are not worked by humans and it is unfair to expect the President to do a superhuman act. That President Roosevelt has done his best, there can be absolutely no question.

He said in his talk that the nation was definitely on its way to recovery and that if one method did not succeed, others would be used which would succeed. In his own words—"If we cannot do this one way, we will do it another, but do it we will." This is the spirit of the President and with such a spirit nothing but success lies ahead. Yes, Mr. President, we are on our way, on our way towards social justice for all the sons and daughters of men.

CONSIDER THE SPECTATOR

The complaint that students selling for SuKy at football games often make nuisances of themselves by obstructing the view of spectators has arisen again, as it has many times during the past football seasons. Both visitors and Kentucky fans have been heard to express their irritation in bitter words. At every game, intermittent cries of "down in front" are directed to offending SuKy salesmen.

Instead of confining most of the promulgating necessary to sell their wares to the period between halves, they wander up and down the aisles, even during the most exciting moments of play on the field, distracting the attention of the crowd and lessening the enjoyment of the game.

Attempts to require that students sell only when the game is not in progress have been made. However, when this was tried last year, the reaction of those selling was decidedly unfavorable. If they feel that they cannot sacrifice a few random sales for the peace of mind of the spectators, at least they can be more considerate and refrain from too much passing through the aisles. When making a sale they should be careful to avoid standing directly in front of people. While watching the game or resting, they should sit down. Such indications of consideration for others will earn them the gratitude of the crowd.

The small boys who gather at the top of the stadium and amuse themselves by pelting people with paper wads also call forth justifiable ire. They pay only a few cents for admission to the game. While we do not want to deprive them of the opportunity to see the game, the rights of those who pay at the regular rates must be considered first. These boys should be warned that repetition of their playful antics will result in their being barred from the stadium. If the disturbance continues after such fair warning, the threat should be carried out. To say the least the location of policemen in the top row should be sufficient to handle those who persist in the throwing of missiles.

PETITE PIECE

By LORRAINE LEFFER

Thoughts while crossing the campus:

Sunday was a typical European autumn day. Steady misty rain, oceans of wet leaves and bent twigs on the pavements. Lamps burning early in the afternoon. Woody smells from all the chimneys inevitably suggesting a leaping hearth lighting its room. And drowsiness is so pleasant—but Monday morning we are in America, and tastes again of the crisp fall air and the indirect rays of the sun as it moves farther away.

Wish I knew who was or is responsible for the Botanical garden; for it is surely a credit to the campus, and I should like to tell that person so. My first visit taught me a little of some things I never knew existed, and I have ideas now that seem so strange. Must be good to learn about abstractions.

Nearing the basketball building makes my nose wrinkle as I think of the awful picture I took.

Think I'll run into the Women's building for a cup of tea. It is a lovely custom the girls have preserved over there, and I do hope nothing happens to do away with this hospitality.

And what's all this about a Student Union building? Seems like a rumbling in the distance, but I hope it really happens. We wouldn't have to cast longing looks into the faculty room any more, for one thing. Would they build it where that big open space is in front of the Physics building, I wonder, or has the site already been chosen?

There ought to be a law against profs who dare to pop a quiz on Monday morning. Monday afternoon wouldn't be bad, for by that time we are sort of adjusted to the idea of being in this great scholarly atmosphere, but Monday morning. What mean quirks there are in humanity!

I am stopping now to say a few words with a girl who has a jade ring on. I wonder where she got it, but I don't know her well enough to ask. Jade is one of my pets. Did you know that all the jade unearthed nowadays is old stuff, that no new jade has been found in centuries, and that scientists are sort of stuck on this problem? Must be the old saying that you can't move into the Orient, at least if you're of the Western civilization. And here's another thing I learned recently, that seems never to have escaped the tight lips of the Chinese. Everybody in China has a round dining table. Even the poorest of the poor. The reason, so they tell me, is so that there will be always room for another. Never thought much about that, but you can't put as many people around a square table, at that.

So now I'll have my tea.

Ky. Has Never Won From Wade's Team
(Continued from Page One) Everything we've got and we're going to play the best football that we ever hope to play, and it will be for 60 minutes.

All the sharpshooters and big guns will be raring to go and do their deadly work. Kentucky is tired of being the underdog in the feud. Their cognomen of Wildcats will be especially true when they come out on the field Saturday. No marling, savage, bloodthirsty pack of untamed felines would be more dangerous to oppose than the Big Blue; Wildcats, literally and in fact. All indications point to the fact that the best game of the season will be presented Saturday, and when the torn gridiron becomes at once again deserted we hope to see the savage Kentucky Wildcats victorious for the first time over the twelve year nemesis of Wallace Wade.

KENTUCKIAN DANCE SATURDAY

SATURDAY NIGHT

SEEN FROM THE PRESSBOX

By J. DELMAR ADAMS

Regardless of the miserable showing of the Big Blue at Roanoke Saturday, the Duke Blue Devils will not slaughter them as the majority of the fans are expecting.

But a new spirit has pervaded the Big Blue camp which indicates that the Cats are aroused to a pitch they have not reached in several years.

has jinxed the Wildcats for 12 years and it seems as if the law of averages is about due to step in and give him a lacing, if the Cats are not able to do it by themselves.

Colonel Neville Dunn, author of Snapshots, a column which appears in a local paper, recently observed "The reason the Wildcats have no better spirit and win no more games is the attitude of the student body."

Mr. Dunn further remarked that the school and the student body is not back of the team. Just how this self-established conclusion is at his stupendous conclusion is heard to say. But however, his opinion is extremely erroneous.

Wade's Duke offense is built around Corky Cornelius, a 175-pound halfback, who kicks, punts and passes with almost uncanny ability.

Several new faces will be seen in the opening lineup for the Wildcats, Saturday. Jimmy Miller, who played at blocking back during most of last season, will be in Jean's place as the "Ripper" shoulder.

Cats Meet Wademen Tomorrow at 2 p. m.

(Continued on Page Four) lengthened to four and thirteen respectively. Dunlap, varsity center, Quarterback Hendrickson, and Corky Cornelius, the "eight-yard" trip halfback, who were injured in their victory over Tennessee are back in shape and it is probable that Duke will be able to throw her full strength against the Wildcats.

Freshman Military Classes Dismissed

Prof. H. B. Price, head of the department of markets and rural finance, College of Agriculture, left Lexington Saturday for Washington, D. C., where he is working with the Agricultural Adjustment Administration in an attempt to develop a satisfactory plan for reducing the amount of Burley tobacco to be produced next year.

The annual intramural cross-country race will be run today at 4 o'clock. The course has been staked out and the teams which are now entered have run the course five times in practice.

The course starts at the west gate of stool field and extends along Boneyard creek over to South Limestone street. It continues along South Limestone street and circles the Agriculture building and back along the South Limestone street, and runs back with the west gate as a finish.

The number of teams entered now is four which is exceedingly small in comparison with the ones which were entered when the race was first announced. Some were cut out by the physical examination, and some by the requirement of the five practice runs.

The race is expected to be an exceptional one in that there will be only 20 entrants, and that the teams have trained very hard, and that they are in good physical condition.

The University of Chicago has the largest football stadium in the country.
