I'm usually an easy person to please. I don't require everything to go my way, like some people I know. Right now, everyone who knows me is questioning the same that themselves after that there are a couple of objects and ideas that I need in my life to be more complete. Will I go crazy and hold kittens or small children hostage if my meager, yet sensible, ideas are not followed? Not likely, but is it worth the risk? UK President Lee Todd took his vision for UK to the streets Thursday when he addressed the Greater Lexington Chamber of Commerce at its inaugural Good Morning Bluegrass meeting.

Todd, who has championed expanding the concept of a "great" university beyond the confines of the research on munity to include the arts and humanities, addressed meeting.

"Businesses are very well aware that they need a much more will will be person nor will be deviced that they need a much more will be person to deal "If you just teach them how to thave good people skills, and you to have good people skills, and you to have good people skills, and you to have good people skills, which include the proposition of the pr

Todd discussed his plans for expanding the campus community when asked how UK would affect the revitalization of downtown Lexington.

"UK and Lexington have never worked together." Todd said, adding he has met with Mayor Pam Miller and her staff to discuss the situation. "Louisville is eating our lunch. They've done an excellent job of the university working with the business community. "We have a need to keep our UK students here on weekends. I was a mazed at how much of a suitcase campus ware," he said. "You can't buy anything, any article of clothing, on UK's campus other than a sweatshirt without walking a long distance or getting in a car and driving somewhere."

Todd's vision for an extended campus exterior stretches down Limestone Street and incorporates a campus "town," including shops and restaurants. Todd also said improved transportation options would be necessary to allow students to get downtown to dine or shop.
"From a retail point of view, you want these students to stay in Lexington on the weekends," he said. "If d like for them to stay here so they can feel like they're going to a top 20 university where you think more university thoughts than feel like they're high school students only two years older."

Football players aren't the only people putting in long hours for tomorrow's game.

The UK marching band has been practicing for the half-time show since Aug. 13. The first show will feature music from The Mask of Zorro, including the songs "Malagunea" and "El Toro Caliente."

George Bouldon, associate director of bands, said there are many changes in store this season, including a parade around the stadium before its pre-game show to excite fans.

The pre-game will continue to feature the "Cats" formation. The band will perform the UK fight song, "My Old Kentucky Home" and the national anthem.

"This year, at the third-quarter break, we're going to play the fight song the second time through," Bouldon said. "Now we're hoping the audience will join in on the singing. It may take a while to get started, but it's a great way to get support for the football team."

He said the stadium should display the words on the Bouldon said students are excited about the upcoming season. "With a new football coach, students are excited about the first game. Some students will be performing in front of more people on Saturday than all the people that live in their hometown. It's quite an experience to play for that many people at one time." Bouldon said.

Students said they liked participating in band because of all the people they met.

"I like band because it makes me feel involved at UK. I can meet new people and see the games," said Sarah Arnold, an undeclared sophomore who plays the piccolo.

Movie trailers in the theater and on your home computer

Quick Time Movie Trailers

Movie Trailers Data-base http://comingsoon.net/tr ailers/

By Bryan Marshall

When people go to the theater to see a movie, the film is not all there is to enjoy. Movie trailers give people a glimpse at what is to come from Hollywood.

what is to come from Holly-wood.

While some viewers may want the movie to start without a five to 10-minute delay, otheres find previews useful when deciding what future movies interest them.

"I like them a lot because if gives me a chance to see the upcoming releases," said Diana Dillard, an elementary education senior. "Since I don't watch much TV, it's the only time! can see previews."

But with the Internet, moviegoers don't have to leave their computers to get a sneak peek af future films. The Web is flooded with sites dedicated to allowing users to download movie trailers.

"On the Internet you can watch previews whenever you want," said Matt Williams, a journalism junior. "Sometimes you might get to the theater too late or they don't show the trailer you want to see, but you can find the movies you want or line."

The popularity of film trailer Web sites is evident by the mass number of times trailers are downloaded onto computers. In 1999, Star Wars: The Phantom Menace created a rash of people ravenous to see the first images from George Lucas's prequel. More recently, when New Line Cinemas re-leased the first look at *The Fel-*lourship of the J.R.R. Tolkein classic trilogy, on its of-ficial site, an estimated 1.7 mil-lion people watched the trailer within the first 24 hours. As anticipation grows for lion people watched the trailer within the first 24 hours.

As anticipation grows for potential blockbusters like Spiderman, Star Wars: Attack of the Clones and The Matrix: Reloaded, the desire to watch foottage from these films will grow. Fortunately, there will be no shortage of Web pages ready to fill the demand.
Some movies, such as the recent Kevin Smith release, Jay and Silent Bob Strike Back and the forthcoming parody Not Arabite Tean Word, even have internet-only trailers that include material, usually harsh language or nudity, that give viewers some footage they cannot see in the previews in theaters.

The obvious upsides to visiting sites for trailers make it clear why the Internet is such a helpful tool for film fans.

"Besides being convenient, before the Internet usually has movie previews earlier than theaters and somettimes even different versions than the ones shown at the movies," said Mike Weiner, a computer science sophoner. "Plus you don't have to

Columnist should lighten up: college shouldn't be so serious

I have read Desiree Bland's commentary on the lack of "higher mentality levels" and her challenge to all UK students to conduct themselves as model citizens.

While reading this article early in the morning, I was unsure of how I should react. Should I simply take Ms. Bland's comments at face value, realizing that she has endured but a week of college life and will someday realize there is more to the college experience than locking herself in her dorm room for fear that the morons of the world will drap her down to their level? will drag her down to their level?

Or, maybe I should live in fear that she will actually draw a following of like-minded intellectuals, spreading the gospel of "higher mentality levels" in a manner so fervent that even the great Preacher Man of the Student Center will feel compelled to tell her 'hey, lighten up!

her 'hey, Ighten up!'
Desiree Bland, whoever you are, I implore you to get involved in your college campus. Make an effort to meet people who are unlike you. You will undoubtedly realize that the very people who may seem uncouth and a little rough around the edges on the surface are often the most intelligent people you will encounter.

I am writing in response to the "Patrick's Peanuts" article on Monday Patrick Avery's response to the Faurick's readitist article on Monday.

Patrick Avery's response to the sudden death of Aaliyah was rude and insensitive. Saying that "Aaliyah will no longer be able to "Try Again" was a harsh way of announcing the singer had died. Even though he may have tried to come up with a "cute" way to tie her song in with the article, it was distasteful.

Although I am not much of a fan, her death was shocking and sad — if for no other reason than the fact she was our age

Final Word

The Question:

The United States' first African-American Secretary of State will not be attending a United Nation's conference on racism, the New York Times reported on Monday. In addition to Colin Powell not attending the conference, it is possible that the United States will boycott the gathering, his spokesman Richard L. Boucher said L. Boucher said.

The decision of Secretary Powell to not attend

The decision of Secretary Powell to not attend centers upon language in the meeting's agenda criticizing Israel. According to the Times, President Bush said on Friday that the United States would not participate in the conference as long as delegates "pick on Israel." Secretary Powell's decision has gained him and the Bush administration both supporters and critics. Some Jewish groups are very much against Powell going to the conference, and back his decision, while others have been in favor of sending representatives to the conference's preparatory sessions to try to climinate the anti-Israel language.

Should Powell go or has he made the right decision to not attend? Should we send any delegates at all?

sion to not attend? Should we send any delegates at all? Why or why not?

What they said:

The last thing Bush needs to do is further distance himself from international dialogue, additionally harming the United States' relationship with the global community. The Israel-Palestine conflict is far too sensitive right now to bear this sort of self-righteous posturing; if Bush knows what's good for him, he'll send delegates, regardless of whether Powell participates."

Candice Jackson, Senior Columnist

Powell is a sell out! The United States is putting racism on the back burner. saying racism has been phased out here. Racism is still present, may not be visible day by day, but it's still here. We need help anyway we can get it ... we need someone there!

Lamin Swann, Special Sections Editor

Hmm. A conference whose purpose is supposedly to deal with the problem of global racism has on its meeting's agenda language that is anti-Israel. I'm still trying to make sense of that one. What's the point of going to a conference on racism if certain groups are going to be discriminated against anyway? Although I normally despise Bush, I think he and Powell actually made the right move this time.

John Wampler, Associate Editor

There's business to attend to here at home. G.W. has got unqualified cronies to appoint to jobs and Colin Powell has to make sure his son is effectively running the Bush administration's FCC witchhunt. We don't have time to worry about a damn U.N. conference."

SEASON OPENER

Cats rev up for Cards

Playing for real

Sophomore quarterback Jared Lorenzen will lead the Cats against Louisville. He threw for 322 yards in last year's game.

White's suspension lessened

UK senior linebacker
Jamal White, who was suspended four games by the NCAA earlier this week's because of possible violations dating back to 1999,
has had his suspension
White's original fourman penalty was shared Part's penalty has not been reduced.

Finally the waiting can stop. Finally UK will get the chance to shed some of the weight of last year's tumultuous 2-9 season by avenging what may have been its most painful defeat.

of the weight of last year's tumultuous 2-9 season by avenging what may have been its most painful defeat.

"This game right here is the big game," said sophomore running back Chad Scott. "This game is going to pretty much set us up for the season. I think if we'd have won this game last year, we would have had a better attitude going into the Indiana and Florida games. We need to get a win right here."

Head coach Guy Morriss said the most crucial reason the Cats need to win Saturday is to stay postive.

"I don't want them to get the idea of doing all this hard work and we still don't win."

Moussville already captured their first win of 2001 against New Mexico State 45-21 last week. UK players said the Cards do not have an advantage from having played a game previously. "I feel the advantage goes to us because they're just showing their hand earlier," senior ilinebacker Ronnie Riley said.

Riley said he attended U of L's opener to assess the Cards' offense — a unit that racked up 442 yards against UK in 2000.

"Their offense is good. They wouldn't have won nine games last year if they weren't, but out defense is good too," he said. "Were going to put it up good on good and see what happens."

The Cats will also attempt to remedy the five turnovers that plagued them in last year's game.

U of L was second in the nation last season in turnovers forced and held true to form against UK early turn lange to the product." More were the season in turnovers forced and held true to form against UK early turn lange turn last the season in turnovers forced and held true to form against two the product of the NMSU by running two Aggie fumbles back for ouchdowns.

"We can't put the ball on the ground," Morriss said. "They are an extremely opportunistic team. We can't turn the ball over."

If the Cats can keep the ball in their grasps, then they could very well have some daylight.

U of La llowed 407 rushing yards to NMSU.

"We've seen that we can run the ball on them and do a couple different plays and spark the offense." Scott said.

That or any other snark would be nice for the tense," Scott said.

That or any other spark would be nice for the Cats after such a long, tough offseason.

UK women eager to make statement

Soccer debut: Women's soccer team opens tonight against Marshall Thundering Herd

The UK women's soccer team is ready and anxious to start this season off right.
The Cats host Marshall at 7 p.m., tonight at the UK Soccer Complex for the first match up of the regular season.
A disappointing 15-6 season a year ago that kept UK out of the NCAA Tournament and an intense off-season of conditioning are motivators in preparing the Cats for a promising season. UK was picked fourth in the preseason Southeastern Conference coaches' policy.

UK conditioned harder this year for our first game than we ever have been," said Almee Brown, a senior defender and team captain. "We are so ready to get started because we've been practicing for two weeks."

UK conditioned harder this off-season than ever before and benefited from workouts with strength coach, Heidi Robertson.

They spen the entire preseason competing against each other. Now, Brown and the Cats are ready to start punishing opponents rather than teammates.

"I think because we have been practicing so much, things are starting to get a little monotonous and our touches are getting a little shaky, but I think as soon as the games start we'll get right back into it." Borwn said.

Freshman Jamie Hutchison is not only ready to play in her first collegiate game, she wants to bump people around.

"Ilke physicalness," Hutchison said. "Ilke games where the proper of the bench and possibly even start.

"UK coach Warren Lipla was pleased these you harder." UK coach Warren Lipla was pleased the they own harder." "They have fit in really well, both on and off of the field," she said. "They don't even seem like freshmen to the rest of us." "Being a freshman is real welcoming," "Hutchison said." "Being close as a team makes everything work out better on the field."

Tonight's game is the first step to make up for last year's disappointment. Lipka witnessed the hard work of his team in the offseason and credits the players for their self-motivation.

"They stressed it themselves because they did not make it to the NCAA Tournament and they felt they are quality enough to get there," Lipka said. "The only way you can rectify a wrong is to make it right."
