

Instead Of Editorials

A Column of Personal Opinion
By ANDREW ECKDAHL,
Editor, Summer Kernel

"All of us in the administration will miss you dearly; we count on seeing you again. I especially count on this after all our years of close personal friendship."
So wrote Franklin D. Roosevelt to James A. Farley, on the occasion of Mr. Farley's resignation as postmaster general, an important step in his career of bowing out of politics entirely.

Mr. Roosevelt's letter was a master piece of understatement. The gloom on Capitol Hill caused by the retirement of "Big Jim" is so dark that it would furnish an effective blackout for Washington, with enough left over for the most of Delaware.

Farley bore the same relationship to the Democratic party that the left hook bears to Joe Louis' fighting prowess.

He was the national watchdog. After the Roosevelt baritone had lulled the public and the New Deal brains had launched the platform, it was "Big Jim" who brought in the votes.

Mr. Roosevelt will be sorely perplexed to find a successor to him. But there is something in the retirement of Farley that should hearten America. For 30 years he has been in the game and he is quitting, respected by the nation as "an honest politician."

Farley is no statesman. He himself, would be the last to say that; he is a politician in the better sense of the word.

But I remember that it was Farley who said in October, 1936, that Roosevelt would carry every state except Maine and Vermont. Seldom are campaign managers so close to the mind of the public.

And as November draws nearer Mr. Roosevelt will more and more wish the "Big Jim" was watching the American political campaign instead of the American league pennant race.

'Cat Players Help Rupp Illustrate Net Lectures

The University's annual football and basketball coaching school, sponsored by the Department of Physical Education, opened yesterday with a class enrollment of 78.

According to Mr. M. E. Potter, who is in charge of the school, registration will not be completed until tomorrow. Approximately 100 coaches, from both college and high school, are expected, he stated.

The number of men returning from former coaching schools shows a sincere effort of present-day coaches to improve themselves professionally. Coach Rupp observed, M. E. Potter, director of the school, said he was pleased with the increased enrollment this year, especially since many other coaching schools have shown a drop in attendance this season.

Coach Shively said he "expected a busy but enjoyable week."

Mr. Kirwan made the opening address yesterday and introduced the guest coach, Carl Shively of Cornell, whose undefeated eleven of last year won the Lambert Trophy, emblematic of the championship of the East.

Yesterday morning's program featured lectures by both Mr. Kirwan and Coach Shively. Mr. Kirwan, head basketball coach at the University and national authority on basketball, Coach Rupp was assisted in his demonstration work by four members of the Wildcat squad.

Peckham Tells How He Utilized Personality, Talents

GENTLEMAN IN WAITING By Ted Peckham Dutton Publishing Co. BY VIRGINIA W. HAYDEN Jerome Zerke showed us how to find a place in New York society as well as eat with a financial standing who's ceiling is hitting zero.

Having completed his education Mr. Peckham arrived in New York as a truck driver with big ideas and little else. Not wanting to waste a degree in applying for a shipping crew and being unable to acquire satisfactory employment, the author hit upon the ingenious idea of an escort service for respectable and unaccompanied visiting females.

Written in a slightly autobiographical form, 'Gentleman in Waiting' is highly entertaining and planned to be somewhat frothy, tracing the history of the escort bureau and giving excerpts from many of the more amusing letters of application directed to the service.

One application gave qualifications as "a safe character, no drink, no smoke, drink, gamble, play sports, nor do I dance." He went on to explain that he was "straining every nerve to abolish war between civilizations and to improve social relationships between man and woman."

In response to the question on health an applicant stated that he was "in perfect health, except a slight of mumps." One of the more unusual letters was from the heir to "a fifty-room castle without bath."

Knudsen Reports Plane Output Now At 1,800 A Year

Washington—William S. Knudsen, production chief of the National Defense Commission, has reported to the nation that United States production of warplanes had reached a rate of 10,800 a year and would pass the 18,000 a year mark by next January.

Mr. Knudsen reported that the commission gave a detailed report on the defense program, closely followed by publication of a commission report showing that its production division had cleared $1,792,000,000 of army and navy contracts in the past two months.

During his schooling at the University, Mr. Warf was a member of the mechanical force of the Kentucky Kernel.

Oil Man McIlvain Aims At Developing Good Breeding Establishment At Walmac

Walmac, home of Oil Man McIlvain. This is the site of the breeding establishment of the Lexington Herald-Leader.

Green's foals. Mr. McIlvain bred her back in Paris, France, there would be much sport in merely going out and buying ready-made race horses that someone else had bred and developed.

Unhappily, Mr. McIlvain is pursuing the interesting task of building up a good breeding establishment. If it finally appears to be a good broodmare prospect, she may not be sent to the races at all, but reserved at the farm for that purpose.

Mr. McIlvain purchased a farm here not merely because of this convenient concentration of the best horses and the other natural advantages of the region, but partly because of his Kentucky ancestry. His great-grandfather, Capt. Moses McIlvain, came to Kentucky before 1800 and resided in Bourbon county until, in 1820, he was killed.

His western background made it inevitable that Mr. McIlvain should love horses. When he first entered racing it was with trotting and pacers, and as early as 1919 his Goldie Todd, a pacer, was a champion on the Grand Circuit.

Next he was attracted to polo. He had been a good horseman since youth, but had never attempted to play polo until he was 50 years old. He became one of the best players in the Chicago area, and for several years was president of the Oak Brook Polo Club.

The 12 broodmares at Walmac have been selected with great care. One of the first he bought, when he entered the thoroughbred game in 1895, was Bottle Green, purchased from Col. E. Bradley.

Eden-Warf Wedding Is Solemnized

The marriage of Mrs. Ann Bitterman Eden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Bitterman, to Mr. Walter N. Warf of Clyde, Ohio, son of Mr. Harrison Baker of Clyde, Ohio, took place at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the Bitterman home, 136 Victory avenue, the Rev. Charles Krebs officiating.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was becomingly attired in dark blue crepe with white accessories and a shoulder bouquet of pink and pale yellow roses.

Mr. Woodrow Aldridge was Mr. Warf's best man. The vows were exchanged in the living room before an improvised altar of ferns, flowers and candelabra holding white tapers. Flowers were arranged on the mantel and throughout the lower floor rooms.

Mr. Paul Thurman followed the wedding march and the following selections: "O Promise Me," "At Dawning" and "I Love You Truly." The ceremony was followed by a reception.

Mr. and Mrs. Warf left for a wedding trip to the northern states and after Aug. 15, they will be at home in Clyde, Ohio, where Mr. Warf is lieutenant for the Clyde Enterprise. Mr. Warf attended the University, where he was a member of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity.

Gill's Story Of Jungle Search Somewhat Overblown

WHITE WATER AND BLACK MAGIC By Edward C. Gill, Healy-Hest and Company. When Richard Gill was stricken with spastic paralysis, his doctor shook his head, prescribed an endless repetition of simple exercises for the recovery of muscular coordination and remarked only that the medical profession might progress in the treatment of the affliction if only it had an adequate and uniform supply of curare, the mysterious poison with which South American Indians tip the arrows for their blowguns.

Now it happened that Gill knew something about curare. A former English instructor, he had spent in Ecuador years before as a sort of duna rancher and had the opportunity there to learn something of the poison brewed by Indian witchmen in the jungles near the headwaters of the Amazon. It was while on a business trip to the United States that he was stricken, presumably as the result of a fall from a horse weeks before.

Crimes In Class Enacted At Texas

AUSTIN, Texas.—University of Texas law students find murder stories too tame. They not only plot crimes but enact them. The crimes are committed to gain practice in actual gathering of evidence and presentation of it in mock courts where the student "criminals" are tried.

In classroom a "crime" will be staged. There will be a shot and a victim will fall dead or fatally wounded. Other students not participating in the planned crime will be assigned as prosecutors or defense attorneys for trials of the offenders.

To get the best results, only crime participants know when the crime is to take place or what the offense will be. One such a fray was staged so realistically that a first year law student rushed in terror from the classroom. He had mistaken a blank cartridge for a live one and the victim had shammed death.

The National Association of Broadcasters has launched a drive to recruit approximately 100,000 civilian skilled workers for positions in the National Defense program. The N. A. B. asked stations to cooperate as fully as possible in the project through frequent announcements.

Pershing Sees 'Grave Danger' In World Situation

WASHINGTON.—General John J. Pershing's warning that "a grave danger" lurks in the present world situation and that "we shall be falling in our duty to America" if we do not help save the British Empire was repeated today by the proponents of military conscription to England.

"I say to you solemnly that tomorrow may be forever too late to keep war from the Americas," the chief of the A.E.F. during the first World War said in a network broadcast Sunday night. "Today may be the last time when by measures short of war we can still prevent war."

In endorsing military conscription, he said: "We must be ready to meet force with a stronger force. We must make ourselves strong by building up our army and navy and the establishment of the principles of universal selected service, which means merely that the men needed are chosen by lot."

Asserting it was his duty to tell the country "there is no too late," he general said: "The British navy needs destroyers and small craft to convoy merchant ships, to escort its warships, to hunt submarines and to rebel invasion. We have an immense reserve of destroyers left over from the other war, and in a few months the British will be completing a large number of destroyers of their own."

The most critical time, therefore, is the next few weeks and months. If there is anything we can do to help save the British fleet during that time, we shall be failing in our duty to America if we do not do it."

He said if a proper method can be worked out, this country "will safeguard her freedom and security by making available to the British or Canadian governments at least fifty of the over-age destroyers which are left from the days of the World War."

Highlight Of Ratto's Program Is Impersonation Of F.D.R.

By BOB DAVES Despite the rain, a large group of students turned out for the last convocation of the 1940 Summer Session, Tuesday, August 6, to hear the nationally known humorist-impersonator John B. Ratto add a little touch of anti-war propaganda to his program. Mr. Ratto gave nine impersonations, five of which were parodies of the United States. These last five impersonations were the best part of his program. They were Washington, Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt, Wilson, and Franklin D. Roosevelt. In these impersonations the tongue was conveyed that we must prepare for war for the sake of being prepared but not prepare in order that we jump headlong into the thing.

Sitting behind a black canvas only Mr. Ratto's face as seen as he put on the make-up for each impersonation. His program seemed to improve as it moved on. Maybe it was because he was dealing with characters with whom we are more familiar. Mr. Ratto's facial expressions were very good and vocal changes with the change of characters were excellent.

Probably the best of his program was the impersonation of Franklin D. Roosevelt. When he sat in the microphone on the desk rose from the chair and greeted the audience with "My friends..." they instantly applauded him.

As he ended his impersonation of F. D. R. he took his glasses from his nose with the left hand and held out his hand saying "And I'm depending on you my friends, to help me." Again he was heartily applauded.

His other impersonations were of a farmer, an old minister who got very excited over the football game in which his grandson was playing, an Italian at a fruit market, and an old German who had just sold his violin. The last of these was the best of the first four. The old man had been given the violin and had whistled it since he, as a young man, had played it in the Berlin orchestra. Now he was old, broke and had sold the violin.

Mr. Ratto has made approximately 5,000 appearances over the United States doing impersonations. He is interested in school dramatic productions and believes that when handled right they tend to correct many weaknesses of the actors.

Tax Problems Are Studied By UK Bureau

By JAMES W. MARTIN On recommendation of President Frank L. McVey, the University of Kentucky in 1928 established the Bureau of Business Research in the College of Commerce. The first staff was organized and began to function under its present direction in the autumn of the same year.

The work of the bureau is mainly three-fold. The first job, as its name implies, is investigation of business and economic problems, the second is service work of various sorts, the third is preparation of popular articles, brief notes, and other semi-scholarly copy for various publications.

Because the business management of state and local government constitutes a major problem for the state, the bureau's program provided for the study of such problems. The University has sought deliberately to have this phase of the bureau's work emphasized. In the first place, the president and the dean of the college sought a director whose training and experience would enable him to work effectively along this line.

Subsequently, provision for other facilities, as well as the personal interest and encouragement of President McVey, have continued this policy.

The studies undertaken have varied as needs have changed. In the early years general taxation problems, such as motor license, gasoline, property, sales, income and other specific taxation problems and policies have been investigated and reported. Other studies had to do with financial administration. During the first half a dozen years, although the reports were designed to contribute directly to immediate Kentucky problems, they appeared to have little influence, especially on legislation. The 1934 and subsequent legislatures, however, have seemed to make considerable use of the results.

Recently, partly because of the close tie-up between the research and financial practice, the emphasis in our work has shifted to such problems of practical operation as tax administration, budgeting, auditing and kindred subjects. In much of this work, there is close cooperation with the state government agencies concerned—in some cases actual collaboration.

In the haggling and sticking of the ancient bazaar, the merchant cheapened himself as well as the goods he sought to sell. Without price standards, he could not maintain quality standards for his merchandise. He gambled his prosperity on his ability to deceive his customer.

Modern successful merchandising is built on integrity and the mutual trust of buyer and seller. In this, advertising plays a vital role.

You may study the advertisements in this newspaper with the full assurance that they are both statements of fact and symbols of good faith. And you can read them in your own home, in comfort and quiet—with no danger of being stamped into a purchase by jabbering and arm-waving.

Personnel Office Assists Students Who Have Problems

By LYSLE W. CROFT
Under the direct supervision of President McVey and with the cooperation of the deans of the various colleges and the registrar, the University personnel office was established on the campus on an experimental basis in September, 1935.

This office treats the field of guidance with major emphasis upon educational and vocational problems, with recognition of the other phases of the student's life.

Liberal Author Lambasts F. D. R. In New Book

COUNTRY SQUIRE IN THE WHITE HOUSE By John T. Flynn. Doubleday, Doran.

Who sovereignty an unshakable speck on the far horizon, this book gives an amazingly accurate, if biased, account of Franklin D. Roosevelt, the president of the United States.

This tragic and terrifying condition is attributed, according to the author, to the shallow thinking and unscrupulous policies, reckless spending and facile promises of our No. 1 American citizen.

Miss Abraham And Orchestra Well Received

By BOB DAVES

We all complain a lot about the hot weather but just the same there was a full house to applaud Miss Harriet Abraham, soprano, and the Summer Symphony Orchestra last Thursday night in Memorial Hall.

There was a noticeable lack of cooperation when Miss Adele Genger led the community singing. It is true that there were no copies of the songs available but when "Sailing, Sailing," "My Bonnie Lies Over The Ocean" and "Anchors Aweigh" were sung to be sung.

Tax Problems

Crowded partly out of staff participation in the work of the Council of State Governments and of intergovernmental tax problems by the governor's office, the bureau has carried on some study of relationships between the Commission of Kentucky and other governmental units—and to some extent even broader relationships—in financial affairs.

In general, also, local government finance problems are increasingly emphasized. This results largely from the fact that the people of Kentucky are performing becomingly concerned about local government.

From the beginning, President McVey has desired emphasis on the direct assistance the bureau could render state, county, city and school governments in connection with their financial problems.

In the same way the bureau is called on from time to time to give direct assistance to private business, especially trade associations and similar groups. Since the entire college staff is available to aid in the work it has proved to be a satisfaction to many economic groups in the state.

Although the staff has generally been restricted to one full-time and four half-time workers, there may be some reason for satisfaction, especially in the light of practical official reliance on the bureau and its staff in state financial matters.

Commerce College, Organized In 1885, Has Grown Rapidly

By EDWARD WIEST, Dean of Commerce College

During the 23 years President Frank L. McVey has directed the affairs of the University of Kentucky much progress has been made in all its manifold activities.

History of Organization

During the academic year of 1917-18, the four subjects of history, political science, economics and sociology were taught by two professors and were under the jurisdiction of one department.

The names of many who are now prosperous and who have made important contributions to civic leadership in the state are noted with reference to graduates since the organization of the College of Commerce in 1925.

The Bureau of Business Research is a department maintained by most schools of business throughout the country. At the University of Kentucky this bureau has been concerned more with governmental business problems than with private business administration matters.

Enrollment figures are significant from the standpoint of educational progress and prestige. They are a measure of the need of a particular type of education. Since 1925 the enrollment of the College of Commerce has increased from 100 to 500.

WLW Plans To Broadcast Willkie's Acceptance

A special line from the speaker's stand at Calverly Park, Elwood, Indiana, will relay the acceptance speech of Wendell Willkie to WLW listeners in Kentucky and other parts of the nation on Saturday, August 17.

The Republican Presidential candidate is scheduled to begin his six-day tour of the South at 4:30 p. m., EST. It is believed he will speak for about 30 minutes. The position of Elwood, normally 11,000, is expected to zoom to 250,000 for the event, and several hundred acres of growing corn and soybeans will be cut down to make room for the visitors.

The college at this time has 10 full-time instructors and in addition has a number of research and graduate assistants. All staff members have advanced degrees and nearly all have written articles and books as a result of research done in their respective fields of specialization.

The educational program of the College of Commerce is set forth in four curricula under which students qualify for the degree of Bachelor of Science in Commerce.

The National Broadcasting Co. and Columbia Broadcasting System have announced they will get along with the broadcast of the event.

The specific respects in which his objectives seem to have been most satisfactorily attained are:

- 1. The research is recognized as contributing directly to the practical problems of Kentucky business.
2. The University, though the bureau, has not been privileged to supply a type of expert service which otherwise would not have been available to our government and our business enterprise.
3. The institution has also been enabled to relate its own work to that of other organizations, states, cities, the federal government, and business enterprises.
4. The teaching work of the College of Commerce, especially in the graduate field, has been enriched, though there is still great progress to be made in this area.

Model School First Located In Frazee Hall

By J. S. MITCHELL

Model high school was established in 1917 as a training school for student teachers. It was located in what is now Frazee Hall on the Kentucky campus, and here it grew for 12 or 13 years under the direction of Dr. J. C. T. Nee, Harold Fling and Prof. M. E. Ligon.

On the site of the old city dump there was completed in 1930 a new building which now houses the College of Education and the University schools. For the first time the elementary program was included. At the present time many members of the junior class began their work in the elementary school.

The curriculum has grown as the faculty has increased, and in the last 10 years, under the direction of Sherman Crayton, and later J. D. Williams, the University school has become one of the most alert and well-equipped in the south. It is principally a college preparatory school and the curriculum is arranged to meet this requirement.

Dr. Edward Wiest, dean of the Commerce college, is a native of Citrus county, Florida. He was appointed professor of economics and sociology from 1918 to 1925, acting dean of the Graduate School of Commerce in 1923-24, and dean of the College of Commerce since 1925.

Figures Show University's Growth In 22 Years

By LEO M. CHAMBERLAIN, Registrar

In the 22 years that have elapsed since the close of the World War enrollment of the University of Kentucky has multiplied three and four times. During the school year of 1919-20, when the University resumed its normal peace-time activities, the enrollment was 617. This latter figure represents the enrollment for both semesters and both summer terms with all duplicates excluded. For the first and second semester alone the total was 4,202.

The number of freshmen in 1919-20 was 453. In 1939-40 the number was 1,926. Graduate study was in its infancy at the University 20 years ago, with 23 students enrolled. During the current school year the Graduate School enrolled 1,541 students. In 1919-20 the College of Arts and Science enrolled 448 students; the College of Agriculture, 301; the College of Engineering, 354, and the College of Law, 168. This year the enrollments of these colleges were respectively, 1,945, 718, 436 and 158. The College of Education and the College of Commerce have been established since 1920. The former enrolled 568 students this year, and the latter, 616.

In 1919-20 the University of Kentucky granted a total of 161 degrees, 150 undergraduate and 11 graduate. In 1938-39 the number was 1,926.

The educational program of the College of Commerce is set forth in four curricula under which students qualify for the degree of Bachelor of Science in Commerce.

The National Broadcasting Co. and Columbia Broadcasting System have announced they will get along with the broadcast of the event.

The specific respects in which his objectives seem to have been most satisfactorily attained are:

- 1. The research is recognized as contributing directly to the practical problems of Kentucky business.
2. The University, though the bureau, has not been privileged to supply a type of expert service which otherwise would not have been available to our government and our business enterprise.
3. The institution has also been enabled to relate its own work to that of other organizations, states, cities, the federal government, and business enterprises.
4. The teaching work of the College of Commerce, especially in the graduate field, has been enriched, though there is still great progress to be made in this area.

Knuksen Reports

Present production is approximately 900 planes per month. By January 1 the number will have risen to 1,500 planes and the volume will increase steadily thereafter.

Knuksen denied that no combat planes had been contracted for out of money appropriated by Congress

up to Aug. 1, declaring the navy had contracted for $7,000,000 worth of such planes in July. "I would like to add," Knuksen continued, "that of money made available to us on July 1, five weeks ago, contracts have already been awarded for 45 per cent of the entire Army funds and 75 per cent of the navy's funds."

Knuksen was asked whether sufficient equipment would be available for an army of 400,000 men this fall, in the event the compulsory service law was passed, or other measures were enacted to create such a force. "I don't mean uniforms, other clothing and general equipment, the answer is yes," he said.

War's Week

By Jim Caldwell
Last week the Nazis passed up the most favorable seven days of the summer for an attack on England. There will be no more favorable Channel fogs this year; the moon will not be so advantageous cloud-lifted; there will not soon be a high, nor the Channel as calm. Within a few weeks a protecting fog will creep over England, and summer will become autumn. After autumn will come winter and famine.

Instead of attack, there was an address by Nazi Deputy Rudolph Hess—a speech which pointed toward war of attrition rather than blitzkrieg. Bombing attacks simultaneously were stepped up, indicating an attempt to tighten Germany's blockade on England.

There is a school of thought in the United States at the present time which maintains that "fascism is here to stay and we might as well make up our minds to GET along with it." These persons are absolutely wrong. The only trouble is that they do not carry their analysis nearly far enough. In view of totalitarianism's gains during the past year, a more accurate statement of fact would be: "Fascism has taken over control of the world, apparently for a long time, and we must now face the fact that we have to exist in that world."

That such a condition exists is obvious. Fascism and its puppets now occupy some 15,000,000 square miles of Europe, Asia, and Africa. Its sphere of influence may be well estimated conservatively to equal that of the United States.

This total constitutes well over half the world's territory that is now having (i. e., control of the "civilized world") has now passed into the hands of the fascists.

The means by which this condition came about are:

- (1) The rise of the fascists in Germany and Italy and their eventual conquest and partition of the rest of Europe.
- (2) With Molotov's advent to power in Russia, the Soviet ceased to be Communist and became a National Socialist (or Fascist) state.
- (3) Japan, after a number of years totalitarianism, finally stepped up a few weeks ago and became a full-fledged fascist nation.

When these four nations (and the territory conquered by them or subject to their influence) are separated from all the territory existing in the world, it is found there are left only two political units which have not

Celebration Billed At Blue Licks Park On August 19

Commemorating the 15th anniversary of the last engagement of the Revolutionary War—the Battle of Blue Licks—a mammoth patriotic celebration will be held at Blue Licks state park, in Robertson county, August 19. According to plans for the annual observance this year, the entire day's activities will be devoted to a review of Kentucky's role in the battle, honor the adherence of Kentuckians to American institutions.

Thomas C. Underwood, editor of the Lexington Herald, will deliver the principal address of the speaking program which will begin at 2 p. m. Others who will make brief speeches are James T. Norris, state commander of the American Legion, Ashland; Gen. Bally P. Woodson, director of state parks, Frankfort; Mrs. W. B. Arbery, Paris; Judge Samuel M. Wilson, Lexington; and Judge J. B. Ross, Carlisle. A number of vocalists, bands and drum corps will furnish appropriate music during the day.

Marking the burial-place of some 60 Kentucky pioneers who fell in the battle, but bloody battle with an overpowering number of Indians August 19, 1782, Blue Licks state park is today recognized as a national shrine. An imposing monument, bearing the illustrious names of early settlers who engaged in the battle, honors the memory of the frontiersmen.

For many years the date has been observed at the park by numerous family reunions and many bring picnic lunches in order to spend the entire day at the famous shrine. The museum containing hundreds of interesting relics, a natural amphitheater, wide drives and acres of grassy woodland supply facilities for an outing unexcelled in the state.

Kinkaid Remains Undeclared

Physical Ed Team Takes Buildings And Grounds

By BILL NEU
Kinkaid remained the only undefeated team in the University Soft Ball League Thursday afternoon by defeating Breckinridge by a 10 to 0 count.

Behind steady two-hit pitching of Bill Davis, the hitting of Art Drucker, Louis Schwartz, Gilbert "Bogus" Helton and Manager Ed Barkman were contributing factors to the Kinkaid victory.

In the other league game, Thursday, Manager J. B. Heckler's Buildings and Grounds boys dropped a hard-fought 9-8 decision to the Physical Ed ten with Bill Decker's timely hit with the tying and winning runs aboard in the 7th inning.

Went the league schedule at half way mark, team managers voted to move the starting time to 5:00 p.m. In fairness to managers, ten minutes delay was added after which time teams will be compelled to play with players present or forfeit their game.

Refugee Reaches Lexington And May Enter University

By PATRICIA HAMILTON
Already Bernard Farber, young German refugee who arrived in Lexington last week, has adopted a local American name. He found his Sunday morning at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Urbach, who are surrounded by funny papers. Poyers and Lili Abern have not crossed the Atlantic and no one over 18 years old looks at the comics they do have, Mr. Farber said.

Breckinridge Recommends Aid For Britain

To The Editor:
In face of the view that intervention is folly I contend that it is really the non-interventionist view which is folly, which in turn gives rise to the question "can we afford appeasement?"

First we review Goering's recent statement that America is simply not invadable by air or sea. That's particularly true if America's armaments and national defense are appropriate to commensurate with the country's size, etc.

Europe Is Greatest Mart

We know that Europe is our greatest market and that if Germany wins, will be totalitarian. Can we rest complacent, expecting trade to revive and that if Germany loses, we will be able to trade over there? If we wish to trade we must meet their deficits and production costs. A loss will be sustained somewhere, either in a cartel that will bankrupt the government or in a reduction of life standards. This "whereaway democracy?" To meet the terms and competition of total economies we will be forced to duplicate them. Harry Emmer Barnes adequately pointed the horrors of an America dictatorship.

Bill Neu's Plan

As an opportunity to umpire games at a small salary during the regular juvenile summer program. A chief feature of the clinic method is that the pupils are split up into small groups according to ages and thus receive far more individual attention than if they were all in one group.

Leaders Unpaid

In Louisville these squad leaders are unpaid; their only remuneration is an opportunity to umpire games at a small salary during the regular juvenile summer program.
