ABBAY OF GETHSEMANI
TRAPPIST, KENTUCKY

July 30, 1966

Dear Carolyn:

I will check down at the monastery to see if there was ever a message about you and Victor coming over today: it is certainly a lovely day. But one never knows what happens to messages around here. Since I have heard nothing I presume you are not coming.

Can you help me with some more books?

I have to review Edwin Muir's collected poems for Sewanee Review and I will need some background material: chiefly Muir's own Autobiography. Do you have this?

Also an important review of this book, Collected Poems in its earlier edition by Kathleen Raine in the New Statesman, April 23, 1960. If by any chance there has been anything about the book lately in magazines like the Kenyon Review and others of the same ~~xxx~~ type, I would appreciate having access to them. Maybe you could obtain for me a Xerox of the Raine article, and the monastery of course would pay for it.

I just wanted to get this off while it was still fresh in my mind. Hope to see you and Victor soon on some such lovely day as this.

With warmest good wishes to you both,
in Christ,

Tom

I will return the Suzuki book soon.
