Soviets still sending world mixed signals on reactor disaster

By CAROL J. WILLIAMS
Associated Press

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union told a nervous world yesterday that radiation from the nuclear plant disaster was decreasing, but one of its diplomats said other countries should not relax because the "accident is not over."

Traditional May Day parades were held as usual, including one in Kiev, the Ukrainian city of 2.4 million only 80 miles from the Chernobyl power plant where a reactor caught fire Friday. State television showed colorfully dressed folk dancers performing there.

The cause of the accident has not been revealed, but Soviet radiation expert Pavel Ramzaev said when asked yesterday if it was a meltdown of the reactor core. "I suppose that is so."

There were conflicting reports about whether the reactor fire had been extinguished. U.S. intelligence sources had said Wednesday in Washington that it still raged and could burn for weeks.

Vitaly Churkin, second secretary of the Soviet Embassy in Washington, testifying before a House of Representatives subcommittee yesterday, was asked whether the fire had been put out. He said, "I don't know," and added: "The accident is not over with that is clear. We have not told other countries that everything is OK and they can relax."

The U.S. Agriculture Department said shifting winds were carrying a radioactive plume from the stricken plant over the rich farmland of the western Ukraine and into Romania, Hungary, eastern Czechoslovakia and Austria. Poland reported less fallout than in previous days, but said radioactivity levels in water and soil remained high.

The Soviet government said only "Efforts to implement a complex of technical measures continued at the Chernobyl nuclear power station (NPS) in the duration of April 30. The radioactivity on the territory of the NPS and the NPS' settlement dropped 1.5-2 times."

"Work is under way to deactivate the contaminated areas adjacent to the NPS territory."

"Medical assistance is administered to those affected, of whom 18 people are in serious condition. There are no foreign citizens among those affected."

The "settlement" is Pripyat, a town of 25,000 built at the plant site.

A Foreign Ministry official in Red Square for the parade said a news conference would be held when more information became available, but added that he could not predict when that would be.

Officially, the casualty toll is two dead and 197 injured, but Secretary

English professor leaving UK

After a 25-year career, Pival taking time to write textbooks

By BRAD GEMEINHART
Contributing Writer

This year's commencement exercises will not only see the dismissal of another senior class, but the loss of a respected teacher as well.

After 25 years of service to UK, Jean Pival, an associate professor of English, is retiring.

"I am retiring. I am not planning to die," she said. "I'm retiring early because I'm involved in writing English textbooks and I wanted to free up my time. I'm not going to do a double job again this time."

Pival's educational accomplishments began at UK where she received her bachelor's and master's degrees. Later, she attended the University of Michigan, where she began work on her doctorate in linguistics.

Pival's career in teaching began at the primary level, teaching sixth graders at Cassidy Elementary School in Lexington.

"I jumped from the sixth grade all the way to college students," she said. Her venture into the college scene began in 1961.

Throughout her teaching at UK, her primary emphasis has been on students. "Over my years here, my best and worst memories are of students," she said. "I enjoyed classes and students that have excited and challenged me intellectually. My worst memories come from the apathetic attitudes of some classes and students, and when they just don't want to learn."

Respect for Jean Pival comes not only from her students, but also her colleagues.

"I think that Jean Pival represents the very best qualities of a teacher," said Robert Hemenway, chairman of the English department. "I hope others would pattern themselves after what she emulates."

"She is a good part of our department and she does something that UK needs to spend more time on, that is advising. Her commitment to advising has helped many students," he said. "There is going to be a hole in our department when she leaves."

Pival's work at the University is not only concentrated on teaching, but extends to campus and student life.

"I think that very few people have done so much for the University over the years," Hemenway said. "I feel that she should be a model for all of us in our careers."

Pival's future plans include traveling and completing work on the

Kernel ends publication until fall

Staff reports

Monday's issue of the Kentucky Kernel will mark the last of the semester.

Because of construction on the Journalism Building, the Kernel will not publish its weekly summer edition this year. Kernel advertising, production and newsroom operations will be headquartered in the basement of the Journalism Building next fall, but beginning Wednesday, they'll be located temporarily in rooms 3 and 7 of Miller Hall.

The paper will resume publishing next semester with its Add/Drop edition on Aug. 23.

Daily circulation will begin Aug. 27.

Poet, businessman join 4,000 getting degrees at graduation

Staff reports

Kentucky author and poet Wendell Berry and William B. Sturgill, a former member and chairman of the UK Board of Trustees, will be honored along with 4,000 degree candidates and recipients during the 119th University commencement ceremonies at 4 p.m. May 10 in Memorial Coliseum.

The candidates include the 2,775 students applying for May degrees; and the 1,059 December 1985 degree recipients and the 652 August 1986 recipients.

Berry and Sturgill will receive honorary degrees from the University. Berry will receive a doctor of letters degree and Sturgill will receive a doctorate of laws.

Concerning a commencement speaker, Vice President for University Relations Ray Hornback said yesterday no plans have been finalized. He declined to comment further.

President Otis A. Singletary will present the Algernon Sydney Sullivan medallions to an outstanding male and female graduate and to an outstanding person who is not a UK student. He also will present the William B. Sturgill Award to a graduate faculty member who has made significant contributions to graduate education at the University.

Singletary will recognize the UK Alumni Association Great Teachers, including Curtis E. Harvey, an economics professor; Beverly Davenport Sypher, an assistant professor of communication; and Jane Gentry Vance, an associate professor in the UK Honors Program.

David Ravencraft, of Reston, Va., president of the UK National Alumni Association, will offer brief remarks.

The School of Music band, under the direction of Ronald Monsen, will perform during the procession and recession. The Rev. Benjamin Baker, pastor of Lexington's Main Street Baptist Church, will deliver the invocation and the Rev. William R. Jennings, pastor of the Lexington First Methodist Church, will give the benediction.

Besides the traditional commencement exercises for all graduates, individual colleges and schools have planned activities and events.

Finals week operating hours lengthened for King library

Staff reports

Beginning tonight, the M.I. King library will extend its operating hours to facilitate students studying for finals.

The library will be open until midnight today and tomorrow and until 2 a.m. on Sunday. Hours will be from 7:30 a.m. to 2 a.m. Monday through Thursday.

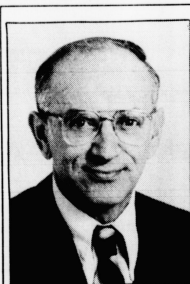

Patrick McCarthy, a member of the Library Student Advisory Committee, said the extended hours will be for the whole library, not just the study rooms. "It should give people more room and more privacy," he said.

The committee is currently considering revising the library hours, McCarthy said. He said a survey is available at the library and has been distributed at fraternity and sorority houses and cafeterias, asking for student input about extending the library's hours of operation.

In the future, the library may remain open 24 hours during finals week, McCarthy said. "If that's what the students want." The library also may open before 8 a.m.

Great teachers

Alumni Association awards professors for excellence

By WENDY SUSAN SMITH
Senior Staff Writer

The UK Alumni Association picks UK's Great Teachers "to recognize a few of the excellent teachers at this University," said Jay Brumfield, director of alumni affairs.

The 1986 winners — Curtis Harvey, an economics professor; Beverly Davenport Sypher, a communications professor; and Jane Gentry Vance, an associate professor in the Honors Program — were nominated by various campus organizations and students to receive an award of $600 each.

"I think the nomination of these professors, solicited by the students, is the best judge in showing that these professors are doing an adequate or better than adequate job," Brumfield said.

The process in itself brings out good people, he said. There are popular teachers who may not be outstanding, but "they're popular because they are very good."

Harvey, who was nominated by the Student Activities Board, Delta Delta Delta and Kappa Delta sororities and Lambda Sigma sophomore honorary, was very pleased because of the number of organizations that nominated him.

"When I learned how many organizations nominated me, I was very happy to receive the award. Everybody enjoys being struck from time to time, and I'm not an exception," Harvey said.

"Some people may think economics is not the most exciting discipline, but I think it can be made very exciting by an enthusiastic teacher. I like it, and the students seem to enjoy my classes. Their evaluations say I'm enthusiastic and always very helpful," he said.

Vance, who was nominated by two students in last spring's Honors 202 20th century perspectives class, said she feels very happy about winning the award. "A prize like this is very gratifying to a teacher in humanities. It's a real reinforcement in the present."

Halley's help

Since last November, two dedicated people from the physics department have held public viewing sessions for Halley's comet. The comet did not turn out to be the show we had all hoped for, but one viewing session stirred our imaginations enough to buy some binoculars, go out onto Jessamine County backroads with a thermos of hot coffee on cold mornings and see if we could keep finding Halley's.

We introduced him to our friends, too, and some of them wanted to introduce him to their friends. We are thinking of buying a telescope now and seeing what else is out there. And we publicly want to thank Michael Torbett and Scott Miller for getting us going.

Wanted: Columnists

The Kentucky Kernel Viewpoint page will be losing several of its regular columnists next year, and this means the road to fame and a little fortune will be opening up.

But it's a toll road and here are the tokens you must proffer. The post of Kernel Columnist requires a column every week, in the neighborhood of 800 words. These columns are due at 2 p.m. two days before the day of publication.

Think you can hack it? Now for the hard part. Write three submissions and send them to the editorial editor at the Kernel office before Aug. 1, 1986. That address: 113 Journalism Building, Lexington, Ky. 40506-0042.

Purveyors of pornography as oppressive as opponents seem

Why can't this "voracious lust" for knowledge of world affairs that is supposedly satisfied by the "quality" writing staff of either Playboy or Penthouse be quenched by the superior coverages of the events by Time, Newsweek, or U.S. News and World Report?

Unfortunately, I'm sure I know the reason why. Were any of the three to plaster nude photos to their covers, sales would rise meteorically for the duration of that issue, and proportionately fall when the next issue (minus the smut) hit the newsstands.

Don't get me wrong. I'm not by any means a Falwell zealot. I do, however, support the move on the part of the Southern Corp. to abstain from the sale of pornographic materials. If a "Falwell" is what it takes to remove pornography from our society, then he does, if only for that certain issue, have my support. If my name happened to be Thomas J. Sullivan, then I would first research a few facts before rashly throwing out my opinion in the way which he did in his column in the April 17 Kentucky Kernel.

Lesson No. 1 (Mr. Sullivan please take note): Rape is not (nine times out of 10) a crime of lust, but a crime of domination and ultimately a struggle for power. Suggested readings for enlightenment (only one): Susan Brownmiller's Against Our Will.

Lesson No. 2: Personal liberty at the emotional expense of others is not liberty at all; to make others suffer unjustifiably for your own personal pleasure is wrong. In this case, Mr. Sullivan, we as rational, "normal and professional" people do not suffer at all. It is at the expense of the children of our society, the real victims of the abuse, that you so ecstatically flip through your preferred porno magazine. As a child views the way we fight over the issue, the sexual identity of that developing human must become awfully confused.

You say the sale and distribution of pornographic materials is not hurting anyone; you are wrong. Of course, it's always "suffer the children."

I will not have my child learn of its own body through the use of porno magazines, and I resent anyone who would. All sorts of emotional, psychological and physical damages could result. You say, Mr. Sullivan, that porno magazines don't contribute solely to the crimes of rape, child abuse or physical violence. I ask you, if they contribute at all, isn't that crime enough?

I shudder to think that too many people I know have experienced crimes that correlate with pornography. The most heart-wrenching thing to me in this world is that I know they're alive.

Lesson No. 3: Morality is a conscience decision, as well as, say, the pursuit of happiness. I wonder why we, as a society, disapprove of public nudity, but consistently approve of the use of not only nudity but profanity and violence on television (a major source of learning for a developing child in this modern world) as well as advertising? Do I even have to make mention of the approval of pornographic materials? Ask yourself, but if you find an answer with positive ramifications, please tell me. For that, I am clueless.

Finally, Mr. Sullivan, take your beer and porno garbage wherever you wish, but infringe upon the lives of my future family, future children or myself, and I will fight your cause with every ounce of energy I can muster. At one time, this entire nation banded together for a singular cause; I only wish it could happen again.

For Barry Johnson, the shortest distance between two points is not necessarily the best.

"When Johnson came to UK as a doctor to candidate music, he brought with him a repertoire of styles that reach back to his early youth when he played the saxophone for six years as a road musician before setting foot on a college campus. He then went on to receive his bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Louisville.

The result of Johnson's stylistic depth may be best represented on a gospel single just released by the Black Voices of the University of Kentucky featuring two scores written by Johnson: "This Is The Day," an extended remake of the gospel classic, and "I Am Free" as the B-side.

"I'm not locked into any particular style. I take certain things from my music reservoir and let them influence one another. Gospel people may think I have too much of a jazz influence."

Barry Johnson,
Director of UK Black Voices

This single marks the first time in over 10 years that the sounds of the Black Voices have been committed to vinyl.

Johnson labels the single as "basically a gospel production." It exhibits lofty choral vocals backed by various crossover forms including R&B and traditional jazz. "I'm not locked into any particular style," says Johnson. "I take certain things from my music reservoir and let them influence one another. Gospel people may think I have too much of a jazz influence." Though Johnson participates in countless musical endeavors, he says, "I'll always have my hand in the area of gospel because of my upbringing in the church."

Johnson has high expectations for gospel music on the American college campus. Gospel, Johnson says, is just like jazz in the sense that it is an art form that is strictly American. "I hope that one day gospel will be seen as more legitimate on college campuses," says Johnson. "It has a lot more use than just getting people to church on Sunday."

Johnson wrote the two scores that appear on the single specifically for the Black Voices, a group of student musicians who formed in the early '70s. After the songs were recorded, the single was pressed in Louisville where Johnson says it is receiving a considerable amount of airplay.

Johnson sees this year as his last at UK. He hopes to find a job teaching at a university where he can continue writing, arranging and producing. He plans to continue working in various genres of music including classical, jazz, gospel, and R&B. "I'll never get to the point where one outweighs the other," says Johnson.

The single is now on sale at the Office of Music's Student Affairs, 1 Miller Hall. They are $3 each.

Schwarzenegger riding movie industry's 'crest'

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Riding the crest of what he calls "the biggest thing ever to hit the industry," Arnold Schwarzenegger finds himself booked with film projects for the next year and a half.

And even though producers know he's lined up far into the future, they still want to make deals with him. "Dino (de Laurentis) wants to make a 10-picture deal. Fox wants me to sign for a picture in 1989. That's how crazy it's getting," the body builder said.

What is this "biggest thing," he talks about? He describes it as an action-adventure movie in which good destroys evil. The leading exponent of that genre is, of course, Sylvester Stallone. However, Schwarzenegger, 38, has also carved a piece of the action with such films as "Conan the Barbarian," "The Terminator," "Conan the Destroyer" and "Commando."

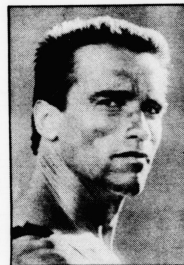

"Raw Deal," his latest movie, will be released in June. He is leaving shortly to start another, "Alien Hunter."

"I'll work two weeks in the heat of the Mexican jungle, then fly to Hyannisport (Mass.) to get married," Schwarzenegger said. The Austrian-born actor married Maria Shriver, 29, co-anchor of "The CBS Morning News" on April 26. She is the daughter of Eunice Kennedy Shriver.

Schwarzenegger had just completed the first of his three daily workouts. "I always start up my training before I step a picture: I lift weights and exercise at the gym in the morning, swim in the afternoon, then later I run or ride the bicycle."

For body-exposing films he's made, he pumps up to 230 pounds from his normal 220. In "Raw Deal," amazingly enough, he is clad in three-piece suits.

Despite the attire, "Raw Deal" is pure Schwarzenegger. He plays an FBI agent who is framed by a crooked prosecutor and fired in disgrace. But the FBI needs him to infiltrate the mob, so his death is faked and he sets out to wreak vengeance on the bad guys.

Schwarzenegger found his way from body-building — he was Mr. Universe five times and Mr. Olympia seven times — to acting through the documentary "Pumping Iron," in which his joyful personality shone through. That led to a small role in "Stay Hungry." When the revenge-action genre crashed into the film world, he was ready.

Schwarzenegger appeared at the Robert F. Kennedy Pro-Celebrity Tennis Tournament in 1977 when he met Maria Shriver, then embarking on a broadcasting career. Their romance grew, especially when she moved into a Santa Monica apartment a few blocks from his house. Last August they were engaged, but their lives were complicated when she took over the CBS morning post in New York.

Schwarzenegger insisted that their continental existence is "the easiest thing in the world, a piece of cake. As long as you understand what the situation is, you can make it work for you."

Snow Chief, listed at 6-5, early favorite in Kentucky Derby

Post positions for field of 16 horses announced in 112th Run for the Roses

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Snow Chief, a battle-hardened little colt from California, will oppose 15 other 3-year-olds tomorrow in the 112th Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs.

The son of modest parentage was made the early 6-5 favorite yesterday to beat back a bunch of blue-blooded challengers and become the fourth California-bred to win the 1 1/4-mile Derby.

Decidedly, in 1962, was the last Californian to wear the blanket of roses. The other two were Morvich in 1922 and Swaps in 1955.

Snow Chief has been racing one a month since November and in that period he has won five straight stakes.

Three of Snow Chief's challengers for the $800,400 winner's share of a Derby record purse of $784,400 will be Badger Land, Bold Arrangement and Broad Brush.

Badger Land, the second early choice at 9-1, chased Snow Chief across the finish in their first four meetings. Snow Chief won three of those races including the Florida Derby in which Badger Land was second.

Bold Arrangement, an English-bred colt listed at 12-1, will be trying to become the third English-bred winner of the Kentucky Derby. The two winners were Omar Khayyam in 1917 and Tony Lee in 1959. Neither raced in England.

Bold Arrangement, who has run only one of his 11 races in this country, is being pointed toward a Derby double — victories here Saturday and in the English Derby June 4 at Epsom Derby.

Broad Brush, who is co-trainer with the stretch-running Mogambo, has won four straight and seven of his last eight starts.

Also entered yesterday were the gelding Bachelor Beau, Rampage, Ferdinand, Vernon Castle, Wheatly Hall, Groovy, Fobby Forbes, Wise Times, Icy Groom, Zabaleta and Southern Appeal.

Each starter will carry 126 pounds. Posttime is 5:30 p.m. EDT, with ABC to televise from 4:30 p.m. to 6 p.m.

New York Tech's Keith Locklear appears to stray off course a bit as he slides home in the Bears' win over UK yesterday.

Tech prevents 3-game sweep, winning 11-9 in 11

By BRAD COOPER
Senior Staff Writer

Over their last two games, the Kentucky Wildcats had outscored New York Tech 33-12.

Yesterday UK's onslaught fell short of a three-game sweep of the Bears from Long Island, who captured a come-from-behind victory over the Cats 11-9 in 11 innings at Shively field.

The Bears, who trailed Kentucky twice in the game by scores of 5-4 and 9-6, managed to sneak by with the help of clutch pitching and hitting.

Joey Milenkovic, who flew in from New York just Wednesday night, was the Bears' pitching hero, working five innings in relief. He struck out eight and walked one.

"We have been a hot team for three days and (Milenkovic) came in and cooled us down," said

UK coach Keith Madison, whose team is now 22-27 on the season.

Although UK started on shaky ground in the first inning by falling behind 4-1, it was able to nose ahead 9-6 after seven, and it looked like UK reliever David Voit would be able to shut the door on the Bears.

After entering the game in the middle of the fifth inning for starter Roy Bailey, Voit pitched 3 1/2 innings while only allowing one hit — a home run by Ray Gianelli.

Enter new reliever Steve Culkar.

With the Cats up 9-7, Culkar entered the ninth and managed to save the game and the series sweep.

Instead, before he walked off the mound at the end of the inning, he gave up two earned runs that sent the game into extra innings.

Culkar, who entered the game with a 4.33 earned run average, opened the ninth by striking out the lead-off hitter Vince Colasuonno.

After a single by designated hitter Keith Locklear, Culkar surrendered a 365-foot blast to left center field off the bat of catcher Ira Goldstein.

In the bottom of the frame, the Wildcats had a chance to give Culkar the win, but they fell 90 feet short.

Left fielder Mitch Knox opened the inning by reaching second base on an infield error. Knox then went to third on a sacrifice by first baseman Jim Murphy.

But John Marshall popped out and Steve Hamilton grounded out to end the inning.

In the 11th inning, Tech took advantage of the Cats' miscue when Fred Leone took Culkar to the fences, launching a homer to center field putting the Bears ahead to stay.

Reagan stops in Philippines, Indonesia

Tokyo-bound, President commends Suharto, remains cool on Aquino's rule

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press

BALI, Indonesia — Secretary of State George Shultz said yesterday the Reagan administration considers deposed Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos "a free man" entitled to call supporters in his homeland and to move from the United States if he wishes.

In blunt-spoken language exposing tension between the administration and the government of Marcos successor Corason Aquino, Shultz also said "we don't have infinite capacity to provide money" to Manila.

He said that Philippine Vice President Salvador Laurel, in a meeting with President Reagan, was told the administration believes the courts — and not the executive branch of the U.S. government — must resolve claims by the Aquino government that Marcos stole billions in money and other valuables belonging to the Philippines.

Asked whether Reagan had provided to Laurel sufficient assurances of U.S. support for the Aquino government, Shultz snapped to reporters: "You will have to ask Mr. Laurel if he is satisfied. Let me remind you the president is not on trial here."

In his last full day on this tropical island before heading on to Tokyo and the seven-nation international economic summit, Reagan met with Laurel, conferred separately with Indonesian President Suharto and spoke to the foreign ministers of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations. Reagan then was joined by wife Nancy for an elegant evening dinner and cultural performance hosted by Suharto and his wife, Tien.

In a toast at a state dinner thrown by Suharto, Reagan noted strong ties between the two nations "even though our methods of government differ."

Earlier in the week, Indonesia denied entry to two Australian journalists traveling with Reagan's entourage because of a ban on Australian reporters stemming from a story in a Sydney newspaper suggesting corruption in Suharto's government.

Shultz told reporters that in the session with Suharto, "we made plain our view of freedom of the press, which is different from the view here. And we always have a continuing dialogue on problems in the general human rights area."

During his address to the Southeast Asian officials, Reagan voiced his disappointment that Vietnam had broken off talks on the search for Americans still listed as missing in action, "the last vestige" of the Vietnam war.

At the same time, Reagan saluted the ASEAN nations — Indonesia, Philippines, Malaysia, Singapore, Thailand and Brunei — as "the dominoes that did not fall" after the collapse of Indochina. He commended their efforts to bring about a negotiated settlement leading to the end of Vietnamese occupation of Cambodia.

In Manila, police in riot gear used clubs, tear gas and water cannons yesterday to disperse thousands of supporters of Marcos who were demonstrating after a May Day rally led by Aquino. Scores of people were injured during the clashes and in earlier street battles between Marcos and Aquino supporters.

Source says Kentucky candidate for GM site

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Kentucky officials are not commenting on a report that Lexington is one of three areas being considered as alternatives to Indianapolis for General Motors Corp.'s World Transmission Project.

However, United Auto Workers union leaders said they were told that Lexington, Nashville, Tenn., and Canada were reportedly in the running for the $300 million project.

Bob Boone, shop committee chairman at UAW Local 933, told the Indianapolis Star this week that the three sites under consideration already have existing auto plants. Lexington, however, does not have such a facility.

Also, Gary Hull, vice president of UAW Local 933, said yesterday that he understood that GM was considering purchasing the Clark Equipment Co. plant in Scott County, Ky. Clark announced earlier this year that it would close the plant by 1988.

World Transmission, a proposed line of heavy-duty automatic truck transmissions, will replace transmissions now made at DDA's plant in Speedway.

Soviet spokesman defends reporting of reactor accident

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A Soviet official, in an extraordinary appearance before a House subcommittee, said yesterday his country delayed telling the world about the Chernobyl accident because officials wanted to know "what the consequences were before making an announcement."

And Vitaly Churkin, a second secretary of the Soviet Embassy, calmly responding to sometimes testy questions of House members, insisting: "We have been very forthcoming."

Churkin's testimony did not deviate from the official accounts put out by the Soviet government in the wake of the April 26 accident at the four-reactor Chernobyl nuclear complex, 80 miles north of Kiev.

The embassy representative insisted that only two people were killed in the April 26 accident and 197 injured, 18 of them seriously.

"Definitely there has been an accident which has not been liquidated yet and theoretically poses a threat to people outside the Soviet Union," Churkin said. "We are still trying to manage the situation. We have not told other countries yet that everything is OK and that they can relax."

Subcommittee chairman Ed Markey, D-Mass., told Churkin that instead of celebrating May Day, the Soviets should have been sending a "Mayday (warning) signal" to the residents of the Soviet Union who lived near the Chernobyl fallout.

"It would not be correct on my part to accept any advice from you," Churkin replied. He added, "If they have any problems, they will not have medical bills to pay."

U.S. officials continued to offer a more severe assessment of the accident yesterday, citing the likelihood of numerous radiation deaths, contaminated farmland and continuing radiation releases at the damaged plant.

Under questioning, Churkin said he did not know whether his government would permit international inspection of the Chernobyl site. "I am sure we will be willing to do whatever is necessary to prevent such accidents from happening again, whether in the Soviet Union or anywhere else."

Earlier in the day, at the start of a meeting with Indonesian President Suharto, President Reagan said U.S. officials were trying to keep track of the Soviet accident and its consequences. But he added, "We're limited in our knowledge. They're usually a little close-mouthed about these things, and this is no exception."

Soviet accident triggers rally on world commodities markets

By ROBERT GLASS
Associated Press

LONDON — The nuclear accident in the Ukraine, one of the Soviet Union's biggest farming regions, has caused a sharp rise in wheat and livestock prices on world markets, commodities analysts said yesterday.

In the absence of any word from the Soviet Union on possible radiation damage to soil, water, crops and herds, commodities markets have been gripped by speculation that the Soviets will be forced to increase imports of grain, sugar and milk products.

Commodities analysts said it was too early to assess the extent of radioactive pollution in the Ukraine from the Chernobyl nuclear reactor but that heavy fallout could damage Soviet agricultural output for years to come.

Sweden and Denmark have already banned food imports from the Soviet Union and some Eastern European countries.

"The market is going through the roof," said Bill Demaria, an analyst with the London-based International Wheat Council. "We haven't seen excitement like this for months and months."

The Ukraine, an area about the size of Texas in the southwest corner of the Soviet Union, is the country's third-most important farming region. According to International Wheat Council, Ukrainian farms produce about one-fifth of all grain grown in the country and also about one-fifth of its cattle and pigs.

But most of the farmland lies to the south of Chernobyl nuclear power plant and the first radioactive cloud released by last weekend's accident blew to the north, away from the most important crop-producing areas.

In Washington, the U.S. Agriculture Department reported shifting winds were carrying the radioactive plume to the southwest yesterday, in a direction that could ultimately affect some of the Soviet Union's richest, black earth areas.

Wheat prices, which had been falling steadily recently, shot up this week on the Chicago futures market. Last Friday wheat for May delivery was quoted at $2.89 a bushel. By yesterday, it had jumped to $3.28.

Corn markets have also benefited from expectations of an increase in exports to the Soviet Union and Poland.

Speculation over possible contamination of Soviet livestock has similarly driven up prices on the Chicago meat markets.

Analysts in London and Chicago attributed the commodities rally mainly to speculative buying and said it could fizzle out.

The Soviet Union is by far the world's biggest cereal importer, although imports fell last year after an unusually good harvest. The government has not published data on grain production since 1979, but the International Wheat Council estimates the Soviets produced 191 million metric tons of wheat and course grains last year.

Soviets accept aid from U.S. group

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Soviet Union agreed yesterday to accept help for victims of a nuclear accident near Kiev from an international bone-marrow transplant organization, the group's chairman said.

Dr. Robert P. Gale of the International Bone Marrow Transplant Registry, which represents 128 centers that do bone marrow transplants, said he received a telephone call today from the Soviet Embassy in Washington. Soviet officials told him they were "anxious for me to come, confer with my counterparts in the Soviet Union and, if necessary, take whatever steps are necessary," he said.

These steps would include determining the number of people suffering from radiation sickness, then overseeing massive international efforts to locate suitable bone marrow donors and perform transplants, Gale said.

Armand Hammer, chairman of President Reagan's cancer advisory panel, had conveyed the group's offer to the Soviet Embassy, he said.

Marrow transplants are the only way to treat otherwise fatal doses of radiation, Gale said.

with the students and the collegiality here at the University," she said. "I am also going to miss my colleagues and the sort of intellectual atmosphere that I have grown accustomed to over the years."

of State George P. Shultz said it was higher "by good measure."

An Israeli amateur radio operator in Tel Aviv said a Soviet ham told him there were 300 casualties, but how many were dead was not clear.

The Soviet Union's first public mention of any effect on other countries came in a report yesterday by the official news agency Tass on a meeting in New York between U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar and Yuri Dubinin, chief Soviet delegate to the United Nations.

Vladimir Lomeiko, a Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman, said in an ABC television interview that reports of high casualties were "an absurdity." He accused Western reporters of starting an anti-Soviet campaign.

"Who needs to create on the basis of this tragedy and sorrow this situation and this atmosphere of psychosis and distrust?" he said.

More foreigners left the Ukraine to avoid potential health hazards. Their governments monitored the radioactivity and denounced the Soviets for not providing full information.

The British Foreign Office warned travelers to avoid Moscow and Warsaw, the Polish capital, saying Soviet authorities were withholding information about radiation levels.

Because of the wind shift, no new radiation was reported in Sweden, but levels three times normal were recorded in northern Austria after overnight showers.

Lack of definite symptoms makes chlamydia an especially deceptive STD

This is the first in a two-part series on sexually transmitted diseases. Part two will run Monday.

Is chlamydia a flower, or perfume or a movie star? It's none of the above! Chlamydia is a sexually transmitted bacterial infection that can cause permanent damage if left untreated.

Those who were in their "heyday" in the '60s remember well when the words "venereal disease" conjured up thoughts of the dreaded "clap," or gonorrhea and syphilis. These two infections have, to some extent, taken a back seat in prevalence to some other sexually transmitted diseases, or STDs, but are certainly still present in human society. They each can cause very serious problems if not treated, an unfortunate situation since treatment is effective and complete.

The newer and more inclusive term STD includes, along with gonorrhea and syphilis, some 28 different bacterial, viral, fungal and parasitic infections. It is a myth that only "dirty" or promiscuous people catch STDs. People with multiple sexual partners, however, especially if these are casual, are at an increased risk of developing one.

Many people in our culture feel uneasy discussing sexuality. They may experience guilt, fear or shame if they think they have an STD. Most clinicians, however, are not judgmental and only want to see such maladies cleared up. This is important to keep in mind if you suspect you may have an STD, or if you've been told by a partner that you have been infected.

Sexually transmitted diseases are spreading so rapidly that more than 10 million Americans are infected each year, UK students contributing well more than 1,500 to this total. They are second in frequency only to the common cold, yet few people are aware of the most common among them.

Let's return to our discussion of chlamydia, and a few other prevalent and/or potentially dangerous STDs it may benefit you to know about. Information on where to obtain more details can be found at the conclusion of this series.

For the HEALTH OF IT

Chlamydia is now more prevalent than gonorrhea, being twice as common (as gonorrhea) in American men. It most often starts as an infection of the cervix in women, and is one of the causes of nongonococcal urethritis (NGU) in men. NGU is an inflammation of the urethra resembling gonorrhea, but is not caused by the same bacteria. If left untreated it can lead to inflammation of the testicles in men, which can cause sterility. In women, the consequences are even more severe. The infection can spread through the uterus to the fallopian tubes, causing blockage resulting in infertility and increased risk of tubal pregnancy (pregnancy that develops in the fallopian tubes rather than the uterus, causing 10 percent of maternal deaths).

Each year, chlamydia leads to more than half of the cases of male sterility, and an estimated 11,000 cases of female sterility. It can also cause pneumonia or eye infections in newborns, if passed to them by a mother during birth. A pregnant woman with untreated chlamydia also has a much greater risk of miscarrying, or of delivering a stillborn child.

Damage caused by this insidious infection may often have occurred before any unusual symptoms are noticed. Although not a new "bug," chlamydia has been called "the silent STD" because there are no symptoms in 90 percent to 90 percent of women and 10 percent of men who have it. And when symptoms do develop, they are usually mild and frequently mistaken for gonorrhea. The danger of the chlamydia epidemic, therefore, lies in the fact that this seemingly mild or symptomless condition can have such destructive and permanent results.

If a woman has chlamydia and is "lucky" enough to have symptoms from within one to three weeks after contact with an infected partner, they would be vaginal itching or discharge, burning and frequency of urination, painful intercourse, and later symptoms of chronic abdominal pain, bleeding between periods and a low grade fever. For men, symptoms include watery discharge from the penis and/or burning when urinating and burning and itching around the penile opening; symptoms may occur early in the day, go away, then return.

As is probably now obvious to you, many people would not know they had chlamydia unless a responsible sexual partner told them they had been exposed. It is extremely important, with this or any sexually transmitted disease, that both partners be treated at the same time, to prevent reinfection. This is especially true with chlamydia, in order to prevent the tragic consequence of infertility in an unsuspecting female partner. Once detected, chlamydia can be quickly and painlessly cured with antibiotics. Use of condoms by men and diaphragms by women can help limit the spread of this infection.

SGA passes two bills, picks committee heads

Staff reports

Getting into full legislative gear for the first time, the 1986-87 Student Government Association passed two amendments to its bylaws and also elected chairmen for its various committees.

The meeting last night saw two bills sponsored by President Donna Greenwell concerning committee meeting times.

The first bill states that the committee on committees will meet each Tuesday during the next academic year.

The purpose of the bill is to ensure that packets of bills being considered by SGA will come out earlier, Greenwell said. Last year the committee met on Wednesdays, causing many problems with packets being complete by the senate meeting.

SGA also passed a bill fixing the meeting times of all standing committees.

The senate also elected committee chairmen last night.

The following were elected:

- Operations and Evaluations: Senator at large James Rose
- Political Affairs: Senator at large David Botkins
- Campus Relations: Arts & Sciences Senator Cyndi Weaver
- Appropriations & Revenue: Senator at large Bill Hensley

"If this experiment shows that enough people use the library and enough people respond to the questionnaire, we'd certainly try it," said Paul Willis, director of libraries.

Willis said the committee will keep statistics on the number of people who use the library during finals week to determine whether the extended hours are worthwhile.

"We don't want to pay money to keep the building open if there is no one there," he said.

Willis said security also must be considered. Although the UK police make periodic checks of the library each night, he said he has alerted the police to see what steps can be taken to increase security during the extended hours.

S. African blacks stage massive strikes

By JAMES F. SMITH
Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Millions of blacks stayed away from jobs and schools yesterday, crippling factories, mines and stores in the largest anti-apartheid protest in South African history.

The nationwide strike, demanding in part that May Day be declared a national holiday, signaled a powerful new organizational strength among black workers, students and civic groups in the campaign for equal rights.

An academic monitoring group said at least 1.5 million workers, and possibly many more, struck for the day in the nation's four largest cities alone. A government spokesman also estimated at least 1 million urban black students boycotted classes for the day.

Beyond those 2.5 million strikers, there was no way to calculate how many others left school and work for the day in rural areas and the nation's 10 tribal homelands, scenes of turmoil in recent months.

The national Associated Chambers of Commerce reported "massive absence from work" across the country, ranging from 70 to 100 percent. The black workforce is estimated at more than 6 million in a population of 24 million.

Both Vincent Brett, manpower director for the chamber, and Professor Eddie Webster, head of the academic monitor group, agreed the strike was the largest ever in South Africa.

In Port Elizabeth in eastern Cape Province, researcher Glen Adler said a survey of 86 companies showed that just six of 11,000 black employees turned up.

Thousands of mixed-race people joined the strike and many Asians closed their shops in sympathy. Supermarkets tried to cope with white staff, but checkout counters were jammed.

Transport to and from townships halted as bus, train and taxi drivers joined the strike. Most companies adopted a policy of "no work, no pay, nonpenalty."

"It must be a signal to the government that these communities can weld together and do something," said Jimmy McKenzie, senior general manager of Barclays Bank.

Police headquarters in Pretoria reported clashes with rioters in 25 black townships, leaving two dead, and said they arrested at least 136 blacks, including 55 in one incident in Paarl, near Cape Town. Police said some blacks forced others to join the protest.

Libya expels Europeans

The Associated Press

Libya has begun balancing the expulsion books by ordering about 150 West Europeans out of the country, apparently at random. In the case of 19 Britons, their employers were allowed to decide who would go.

"No one gave us any reason," said Angelo Vitale, a 24-year-old Italian worker who arrived in Rome on Wednesday.

Col. Moammar Khadafy's government issued expulsion orders Tuesday for the Britons, about 50 Italians and 80 employees of two Spanish companies.

Governments in Western Europe have told dozens of Libyans to leave their territory since the European Common Market decided last week to reduce Libyan diplomatic staffs drastically and restrict the movements of those Libyans remaining.

"A lot of teachers deserve it equally with me, and I hope it will also come around to them," she said.

Sypher, who was nominated by Alpha Delta Pi sorority, also said she is truly honored to receive the award.

"For people in the teaching profession, I think an award from students is the best honor we can get," Sypher said.

"I think one reason I won is because of my commitment to teaching. I make every attempt to make myself available to students, and I try to make learning fun," she said.
