Wreckage covers Greg and Carla Davis' yard after Russell Carey, an LCC student, smashed through the garage early Monday morning. Carey, a DJ for WRFL, died in the wreck following a high-speed chase with police.

LCC student dies after car slams into house following police chase

By MEREDITH LITTLE
Assistant News Editor

A Lexington Community College student died Sunday night following a high-speed police chase that ended when the student's car hit a house on the corner of Lansdowne Drive and Redding Road.

Russell Carey, an LCC junior and WRFL disc jockey, was chased by police after an officer unsuccessfully tried to pull him over on High Street. The chase reached estimated speeds of up to 85 mph.

The accident occurred on Lansdowne Drive about 2 a.m. Carey's 1977 Pontiac Firebird left the road and hit a light pole and several small trees, according to the Lexington police report.

The car then crossed Redding Road and was airborne until it hit the house of Greg and Carla Davis.

"We didn't know if it was a car or an airplane," Mr. Davis said. "It was just like an airplane. The police said he was obviously airborne when he hit the house."

Carey was taken to the UK Chandler

Medical Center. He was pronounced dead at 3 a.m. The cause of death was listed as multiple-internal injuries and a blunt blow to the head, according to the Lexington-Fayette County Coroner's Office.

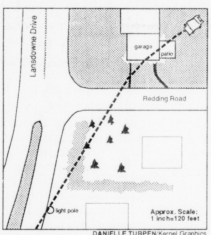

The coroner's office has ordered a toxicology test to determine if any drugs were present in Carey's body at the time of death. Results from the test will not be available for two weeks.

Carey was a general staff disc jockey at the UK student radio station, WRFL. He was in charge of a weekly four-hour air shift and at least one record review every week.

Mark Beatty, WRFL program director, said he did not know Carey outside of the station, but he was "conscientious about participating in station events."

"Russell was always willing to help out and participate in station stuff," Beatty said.

The Davis' said Carey's car went through shrubbery on an adjacent lawn, up a grassy embankment and ran through the garage of the house.

The car came to a halt in the back yard and left skid marks in the front yard but not on the street.

The roof of the Davis' garage collapsed as two walls of the garage were destroyed.

At least 2 tickets will run for SGA executive branch

Lohman-Foster, James-Hart camps first candidates to announce plans

By C.A. DUANE BONIFER
Editorial Editor

With at least 2 1/2 months before the Student Government Association's spring elections, two executive branch tickets already has emerged, and a third person has all but confirmed his intentions to run for president.

Senators at large Sean Lohman and Paige Foster confirmed last week that they will announce their candidacies for president and vice president, respectively, within 30 days.

Senator at Large Kennedy James and College of Education Senator Pat Hart confirmed last night that they will officially announce their candidacies for presidency and vice presidency respectively in the next month also.

Jeff Ashley, president of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, said several people have talked to him about running for office, and he is strongly leaning toward entering the presidential race within the month.

And at least one other senator and student organization president also have expressed interest in running for either president or vice president, but neither of them have made any decisions.

Lohman said he decided to run for president in early October when Senator at Large Kim Fowler told him she was not going to run for president. Lohman and Fowler ran for the Senate together last year, and had planned to run on a ticket for the executive branch this year.

But Fowler, who received the most votes in the Senate race last year, said she is not going to run for president because "I want to get out of school in four years, and I don't feel like I have enough time."

Fowler, who is a junior, said she will manage Lohman's presidential campaign. She said she has not decided if she will seek a third senatorial term.

Lohman said he considered several people as possible running mates, and at least four senators personally asked him to be his running mates.

"There have been a lot of senators who have approached me, asking me if they could run with me," he said.

Lohman, a political science sophomore, said he approached Foster in mid-November and asked her to be his running mate. Soon after Thanksgiving, Foster said she accepted Lohman's offer.

"I knew that Paige isn't just the kind of person who jumps out and says, 'I'm going to run,' just like I'm not the kind of person who jumps out and says, 'I'm going to run,'" Lohman said.

Foster, an education sophomore, said she decided to run for vice president because there are several student services she wants to implement next year.

"Over the (Thanksgiving) break, I thought of some things I would like to do — some changes I could personally make," Foster said. "And Sean has really good ideas."

James said last night that he and Hart made the decision late last week to form a steering committee after several students outside student government urged him to run for president.

"We sat down and talked about it and we figured we were probably the most experienced ticket in terms of student government experience and student organization experience," James said.

James, who is serving his first term in the Senate, said his candidacy has caused a lot of senators and students close to SGA to re-evaluate who they support.

"A lot of the people that were leaning toward Ashley and Lohman have come out and said they want to remain neutral until after the debate," he said.

Hart, a member of Beta Theta Pi, is serving his second term as the College of Education senator. As the president of the Senate, he has been praised by his colleagues for how he has run Senate meetings during Vice President Leah McCain's absences.

Guiding the Kennedy-Hart campaign will be Si Deane, a first-term senator at large who was the regional director of Students for Gore, the student arm of Sen. Al Gore Jr.'s presidential campaign.

"We'll be looking at student government for all students, not just for one section," James said. "We must think long-range when we'll benefit (the students) in the long run."

Ashley said he has "no doubt about my abilities, but right now, I'm just working on some things."

"I've got no doubt in my mind that I am the best man for the job," he said. "I think student government is ready for a breath of fresh air. In the four years I've been at UK, they've been kind of stagnant. I think someone needs to get in there and knock some heads around."

Ashley said no group or person is responsible for SGA's situation, but in general, he said there is too much "backstabbing" in student government and the senators are looking for too much glory for themselves.

Ashley said he would not plan "any drastic changes" if elected, "just some fresh air."

"I think there needs to be more interest in students' needs than there has been," said Ashley, a journalism senior who was a senator at large two years ago. "I think the way a lot of the campus perceives (SGA) is as incompetent, which is unfortunate."

If he chooses to run, Ashley said he would not run a "flashy" campaign.

Two decades after death, King's dream continues to live on

More than 1,200 people turn out Sunday to remember the slain civil rights leader

By JAY BLANTON
Editor in Chief

White, Black, Jewish, Lawyer. Small child. Older adult. College student.

The differences are apparent. But on Sunday more than 1,200 people with those differences — undaunted by cold January temperatures and gray, overcast skies — blended together for a short time to march and to celebrate the birthday of slain civil rights leader Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

The fourth annual march, celebrating King's 60th birthday and the 20th anniversary of his death, started about 3 p.m. behind Memorial Coliseum.

The familiar strains of the spiritual "We shall Overcome" could be heard in echo-like tones from the front of the line, while several organizations — many of them with group banners — walked along the march route.

Up Rose Street to Washington Street and then over to South Limestone, the procession continued to Euclid Avenue and ended at the Singletary Center for the Arts.

UK Vice Chancellor for Minority Affairs William Parker looked on as people participating in Sunday's march walked past him up South Limestone.

"I think there's a sense of awareness in our community now to do something about race relations," said Parker, organizer of the event. "I think that has occurred."

Parker said since the issue of racism has been dealt with by the local media, there has been more concern about confronting problems of racism and promoting integration.

"This group is 50 percent white," Parker said. "Kids ... Kids on roller skates, white kids, that wouldn't have happened (in civil rights marches of the past). Most people would have been black."

Students say King's ideas still important

By TONJA WILT

Although graduate student Jonathan Mabe just recently came to the United States from his home in Iran and was only 13 years old when Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. was assassinated, he still finds the beliefs and work of King important.

"The holiday held in honor for Martin Luther King Jr. is not very important," Mabe said. "What is important is what he felt about the black and white communities."

The ideas of Martin Luther King Jr. are not just meant for the United States, but for the black and white communities all over the world.

Like Mabe, other UK students believe in the importance of King's work.

"If he had not been assassinated, King would have been a really good leader, alleviating a lot of problems blacks have today," said accounting junior Jonathan Keller. "He was a person who thought

Minority education addressed at conference

Education in the home vital, education secretary says

By ELIZABETH WADE
Assistant News Editor

Education in the home is vital to minority education and beyond, said Lauro F. Cavazos, U.S. Education Secretary at the third annual conference on the Recruitment and Retention of Minority Students in Teacher Education last night.

The conference, which is sponsored by the UK College of Education, draws educators from throughout the country to discuss the enhancement of minority enrollment in teacher education programs.

"Our mission as a department is to assist in the education of every person of this nation to his or her fullest potential," Cavazos said. "If parents realized that their efforts would make a difference I really believe that most parents would try to make that difference."

Cavazos said the challenge of recruiting and retaining minorities in education must begin early. He said increasing education in the home would help give minority students the incentive to work hard and finish school. In turn, these students would go on to college and help increase the number of minority professors he said.

"Educational progress comes hard in Kentucky and must be upgraded," said U.S. Congressman Larry J. Hopkins, who represents Kentucky's sixth congressional district. "A new more competitive, more expensive, more demanding world threatens to separate us into two classes of Americans and to me that is the most terrifying possibility to be imagined."

Mary Hatwood Futrell, president of the National Education Association, said in a press release that demographic projections indicate that by 2020 more than 35 percent of students in the public school system will belong to a minority group.

Current national figures show that 30 percent of the student population in the United States is a minority. Also, less than 13 percent of teachers nationally are a minority and 41 percent of those minority teachers claim they will leave the profession after five years, which is 25 percent higher than whites, Cavazos said.

UK also is trying to increase the number of minority students, faculty and staff.

"At our University, we have a number of initiatives dedicated to the recruitment of students, faculty and staff minority," said UK President David Roselle. "It is our feeling at UK that we must continue to hold fast and to honor the principles of equal opportunity and to work to improve that area each and every day."

U.S. Education Secretary Lauro F. Cavazos spoke to about 100 people at a national minorities conference last night.

Minorities compose only 1 1/2 percent of UK's faculty on the Lexington campus, according to Bernie Vonderhede, UK director of public relations. Fifty percent of the minority faculty are tenured.

"Most of the minority faculty have not been here long enough to be tenured," Vonderhede said. "If President Roselle's initiative to have more minority faculty continues, that figure will go down more because there will be more minorities at entry-level positions. A mark of success would be for that number to go lower, which is our objective."

"We want all of our children to encounter role models from all ethnic groups," Cavazos said. "We need to raise the expectations of kids to learn more."

NEA chief urges equality in education for minorities

By MIKE EMBRY
Associated Press

Unless the United States affirms its commitment to equity and excellence in education for minorities, the "American dream will turn into a nightmare," the National Education Association president said yesterday.

Mary Hatwood Futrell, leader of the 1.9 million-member NEA since 1983, said education reforms should be extended to all students, regardless of race or economic level.

"And unless we as a nation affirm our twin commitment to equity and excellence, the American dream will turn into a nightmare that mocks the ideals of the Constitution, converting the challenge of reform into the tragedy of reform," she said in a prepared text to about 75 educators at a conference on the Recruitment and Retention of Minority Students in Teacher Education.

Futrell said that by 2020, minorities will comprise 35 percent of the students in public schools.

"These are the citizens whose taxes will support us, the citizens who can make the future tax base of America expand or contract, the citizens who will determine our place in the global economy," she said.

While the minority student population will increase, the number of minority teachers in public schools is expected to drop from the current 8 percent to 3 percent in the mid-1990s, she said.

Exhibit 'Nude '89' showcases beauty of the human body

By VICKI GRITTON
Contributing Critic

Expressing a distinct understanding for the human figure along with a strong concern for balance between the work and the viewer, the Lexington Art League opened "The Nude '89" exhibit at the Loudoun House.

The show, which opened Friday, will run through Feb. 25. It displays the works of 25 artists and delivers an image of natural, familiar beauty.

The exhibit proves the distance between Manet's style-breaking nude "Olympia" of the 19th century — when people did not want to view the nude as art — and today's concern for illustrating the human form.

The pieces chosen for this exhibit concentrate on a portrayal of the nude in a specific environmental context. Wendell Perry's "Twistin'," which was done in black ink on paper, is a street scene commenting on the social comments in a relationship.

"The thing I tried to accent was a sense of humanity, frailty. I wanted it to be noble and beautiful at the same time as humorous," Perry said about the piece. The show contains many works,

"The nude shows detail and how no edges are on the human body. I feel that we Americans are very inhibited. It is a shame that nakedness isn't viewed in better ways."

Karen Carrico, artist

including the photography of Rick Arrowood and pieces by Susan Rodriguez.

In Rodriguez's work, the eye is to distinguish through the realistic lines of color and form that move together to grasp the familiar form of the human figure. The works relate an ambitious and unharsh appearance of each individual's vision and interpretation of the nude.

"I recall concentrating on drawing what I could with just one long, clean line," said Karen Carrico of her untitled nude male seen shortened by the back reclining on a chair.

Along with most of the other works in the show, Carrico's piece reflects the human flesh as slightly molded and pinched, allowing for no rough or pointed features.

"The nude shows detail and how no edges are on the human body. I feel that we Americans are very inhibited. It is a shame that nakedness isn't viewed in better ways," Carrico said.

Bow Hutcheson Kulp, another exhibitor, expressed her view of the nude as "a wonderful mechanism — yet I don't see it much different than a landscape."

Her painting, "Surprise," was done in enamel, a basic flesh paint, to relay her message of "just talking about flesh."

Kulp, who also is the Loudoun House's art director, said the Lexington Art League tries to exhibit all kinds of artists and styles. She strongly believes in displaying art that concentrates on the figure.

"We did another nude show because figurative work has not been encouraged much in art," she said. "We'll probably have another in about a year — the more variety and artists the better."

Despite good idea, 'January Man' turns out to be a disappointment

By LAURA SUTTON
Staff Critic

"The January Man" has all the makings of a good cop movie: an elusive murderer who's just struck again, a slew of perplexed police chiefs, an uptight mayor who's at his wit's end and one unconventional former cop who's got all the answers. Too bad it proved to be a disappointment.

Kevin Kline stars as Nick Starkey, a beatnik but brilliant New York City detective who was demoted all the way down to firefighter after a mysterious scandal two years ago involving his brother Frank (Harvey Keitel), the city commissioner.

When a friend of the mayor's daughter becomes the eleventh victim of the "January Man," a serial strangler who patternly strikes once a month, the mayor (Rod Steiger) calls for Nick's help and pressures Frank to reinstate his wayward brother.

Nick reluctantly agrees to take the case, but on the condition that he can cook dinner for Frank's wife, Christine (Susan Sarandon), an old flame who appears to have married for wealth and social status rather than love.

After hiring artsy friend Ed (Alan Rickman) as his assistant and setting up a graphics computer (this proves ridiculously instrumental in solving the mystery), Nick is ready to crack the case and begins by questioning the mayor's beautiful daughter (Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio).

Nick follows her to the funeral of her friend and she quickly becomes his "love interest" after one of the cleverest seduction scenes I've seen, which includes a fateful, post-funeral discussion about living every moment as if it was the last and "We'll all be dead in 100 years anyway."

Writer John Patrick Shanley seems to have tried to create memorably eccentric characters like the ones who helped him win an Oscar for "Moonstruck." Unfortunately, "The January Man" only contains fundamentally boring characters who are plagued by annoying idiosyncrasies.

Nick is particularly unbelievable, making it impossible to find merit in Kline's performance. For example, after heroically rescuing a child from a blazing building, he asks, in mock-nonchalance: "Can I get a cup of coffee? Preferably espresso." I got the irony but I missed the humor.

Of course, Kline gets little help from his costars. Steiger's rantings and ravings are not only silly but inappropriate. On the other end of the spectrum, Keitel and Danny Aiello (as police chief) are so low-key they seem to be sleepwalking.

Sarandon, however, turned in an excellent performance, although her talent and character both seemed out of place.

"The January Man," which is rated 'R,' can be seen at North Park and Fayette Mall Cinemas.

Ford in charge of inaugural arrangements

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Kentucky Sen. Wendell Ford winds up nearly a year of unglamorous, nitty-gritty work Friday when George Bush becomes the 41st president of the United States.

The Owensboro Democrat will serve as master of ceremonies after riding from the White House to the Capitol in the same car with Bush and President Reagan, both Republicans.

Ford was accorded that honor because he is chairman of a congressional committee planning the swearing-in ceremony.

He has imparted a Kentucky flavor to the proceedings.

The Harlan Boys Choir, selected by Bush at the urging of a Ford aide, will sing during the ceremony. At a luncheon afterward, Ford will toast the new president with a special champagne made for the occasion by Kordel, a subsidiary of Louisville-based Brown-Forman Corp.

Each state will have a marching band, and Kentucky's will be from Corbin High School. In addition, the Hazard High School band will be one of 10 lining Pennsylvania Avenue. Also playing will be the Kentucky Bellingrings from Frankfort's First United Methodist Church.

Another Kentuckian, Mike Ruehling, who, as the committee's executive director, is responsible for just about anything associated with the inaugural activities at the Capitol.

Last summer, Ford asked Ruehling, his press secretary from 1975 to 1983, to take the job. Ruehling, 40, a vice president of The Preston Group, a Lexington homeowner with a wife and two children, rented a house outside Washington and started working again in a Senate office building.

When Ruehling took the job, he said, Ford gave him this mandate: "One, make it run smoothly. Two, handle the tickets. Three, make sure it looks good on TV."

Ford already has performed a few small favors for colleagues who want extra tickets, for Kentucky groups and industries that want to be included, and for journalists who want more passes or better camera angles.

"There's opportunity (to score points) with those that you make happy," Ford said last week. "Less so with those who feel they should have had some tickets or recognition. So it has its downside. I just try to be fair and go straight down the middle."

Taking a cue from Reagan, who was the first president to be inaugurated on the Capitol's west front, where a larger crowd can watch from the Mall with a backdrop of monuments, Ford and Ruehling decided to stick with the west front and only marginally change the design of the platform and bunting.

Appalachian choir set to perform at Bush's inauguration

By STEVE ROBRAHN
Associated Press

HARLAN, Ky. — Members of the Harlan Boys Choir managed to ignore the glare of television lights recently during one of the final rehearsals before chartered buses will carry them out of the Appalachian hills to sing at the presidential inauguration Jan. 20.

"Now that's getting it," Director David Davies told the 76-member group after working on a spiritual song it will be prepared to sing at possible impromptu performances during the inaugural trip.

Harlan, a coalfield town largely bypassed by the economic expansion under President Reagan, has reacted with pride about the group's selection last month to be the lead choir for the inauguration of President-elect George Bush.

"It's been one of the biggest and best things that's happened to the community," said Harlan County Judge-Executive Delzina Belcher. "The choir is one of the good traditions that's just particular to Harlan County."

Roy Allison, an insurance agent who is the choir's business coordinator, said he was confident the group could raise the $25,000 needed for the trip through donations.

Television crews already have been in Harlan, a community of about 3,000, for the past two weeks, and one morning network television show plans to feature the choir during a program on the morning of the inauguration, he said.

Davies said the choir would sing "This Is My Country" on the platform on the front lawn of the U.S. Capitol minutes before Bush is sworn in as the nation's 41st president. He said the choir would not sing the selected piece when television cameras are present until inauguration day.

"This is something we're not quite used to, but we're enjoying it while it's here," Davies said of the publicity.

The choir director said he hoped people watching the inauguration would be impressed with the group's musical abilities and discipline. He said the inaugural performance would stand out in the choir's 24-year history, which has included international trips and numerous competition trophies.

"We're getting used to the TV cameras," said choir member Jeremy Disney, 12. "It will help us. This might get us ready for when we get to Washington."

But in Harlan County, which has often gained national attention for poverty and coal industry problems, some people are wary that positive publicity about the choir may be accompanied by yet another wave of stories about the troubles in the region.

"We know how people perceive us, and we hope our offering will allow us an opportunity to change that," Davies said, adding that he thought "it's only natural" for outsiders to believe certain stereotypes about Appalachia.

The community has been plagued by the lingering memory of violence associated with coal strikes in the 1930s and 1940s that earned the town the name "Bloody Harlan."

As Christmas approaches each year, charitable organizations appeal nationally for donations to help poor people in Harlan County, publicity that Belcher and other officials say has included some false reports about widespread hunger, inadequate housing and overwhelming unemployment in the county.

You don't need your parents' money to buy a Macintosh.

It's never been difficult for students to convince their parents of the need for a Macintosh® computer at school.

Persuading them to write the check, however, is another thing altogether.

Which is why Apple created the Student Loan-to-Own Program. An ingenious loan program that makes buying a Macintosh as easy as using one.

Simply pick up an application at the location listed below, or call 800-831-LOAN. All your parents need to do is fill it out, sign it, and send it. If they qualify, they'll receive a check for you in just a few weeks.

There's no collateral. No need to prove financial hardship. No application fee.

Best of all, the loan payments can be spread over as many as 10 years.

Which gives you and your parents plenty of time to decide just who pays for it all.

RANDAL WILLIAMSON/Kentucky Staff

Sophomore center LeRon Ellis led all UK scorers with 20 points Saturday in the Wildcats' 64-62 loss to LSU.

Jackson all action as Tigers burn UK

By BARRY REEVES
Staff Writer

Like a magician, LSU coach Dale Brown is famous for reaching up his sleeve and pulling out some kind of surprise whenever he leads his team against UK.

Surprisingly enough, Brown didn't have anything out of the ordinary for the Wildcats Saturday — but his biggest trick, super freshman Chris Jackson, didn't start putting on his act until late in the game.

Fortunately for Louisiana State University, a little bit of Jackson was too much for the UK basketball team.

"This was the largest cold streak I've had," Jackson said after he scored LSU's last 16 points off of a poor shooting night and to lead the Tigers to a 64-62 win over UK at Rupp Arena.

"You have games like that," said Jackson, who hit on nine of 22 from the field. "But you've got to stay tough, and I did."

The Rupp Arena record crowd of 24,288 had come to see what everyone throughout the Southeastern Conference was buzzing about — Jackson.

They were not disappointed. The freshman guard from Gulfport, Miss., scored 27 points to lead the visitors back from a 13-point deficit in the first half.

Jackson started out slowly, as did the rest of his teammates, by hitting only three of 11 shots — including 0 for 5 from three-point range — in the first half.

At that point, the Wildcats had built a comfortable 32-19 lead following a Reggie Hanson layup. LSU, which had given conference leader the University of Tennessee a run for its money earlier in the week, seemed ready to fall apart.

This game, like many UK-LSU games, was not without its controversy. Sutton was whistled for a technical foul with 4:12 remaining in the game.

"I did not say one word to (referee Charles) Watkins. I jumped up and didn't say one word," the UK coach explained. "It was uncalled for and a bad call on his part. I have talked to the (conference) commissioner (Harvey Schiller) about it."

The Tigers took full advantage of the call, turning a five-point deficit into a two-point lead.

The Cats held a 55-50 lead with 5:22 left in the game. But Jackson hit a layup, two technical free throws and a three-pointer before UK got the ball back — trailing by two points with 4:12 remaining.

"(Jackson) is definitely an excellent player," UK forward LeRon Ellis said after the game. "He knows how to handle the road pressures real well, especially for a freshman."

UK had its chances to put the Tigers away early in the game following the Hanson layup, but LSU pulled back to 33-26 by halftime.

"I felt like we lost the game in the first half when we did not deliver the knockout punch when we had the chance," Sutton said. "I felt like we should have been up by at least 20 (points) at the half."

Blanton was the second leading scorer in the game as he tallied 21 points.

"You can't say enough about the job Ricky has done for us all season long," Brown said. "Chris gets all the attention, but Ricky is the real leader of this team."

Ellis chipped in 20 points to lead the Wildcats and Chris Mills added 14 points and grabbed a game-high 11 rebounds.

UK sharpshooter Derrick Miller, who had been averaging more than 22 points in the last five games, was held to only eight points before fouling out with six seconds remaining.

Miller did have the job of trying to stop Jackson and did so for the first 30 minutes.

"I knew going into the game that my offense would probably suffer because of my defensive assignment," Miller said.

With the loss, UK's record fell to 3-1 in conference play and 8-8 overall. LSU improved its overall record to 10-5 and 3-2 in the SEC.

"This was a very painful loss because we had the opportunity to leave the arena with a 4-0 conference record," the UK coach said. "The loss ... hurts our confidence."

Lady Kats romp over Ky. State

By BRIAN JENT
Assistant Sports Editor

The Lady Kat basketball team was able to do something it had not been able to accomplish in the past — put its opposition away early.

Kentucky State University became the victim of a 91-53 thrashing, which started when UK dominated the Thorobrettes in the first half, 44-18.

"We got off to a pretty good start," UK coach Sharon Fanning said. "We were getting up and down the court and taking good shots. It was a game in which everybody was contributing to the game."

UK got out of the starting block early. With the score tied at six, the Lady Kats went on a 14-0 run that lasted almost five minutes.

The run started on an inside shot by UK forward Vanessa Foster-Sutton and ended on a three-point field goal by Ruth Ann Mountain at the 13:33 mark, making the score 20-6.

"These games aren't much fun," senior Jodie Whitaker said. "The only thing good about them is that it gives everybody a chance to play."

The entire UK bench saw first-half action and of the 13 players, 10 contributed to the team's 44 points.

The Kats continued to increase their lead throughout the second half.

Its biggest lead was 45 points, which the Kats equaled three times throughout the half.

Fanning said she was leashed with the blowout.

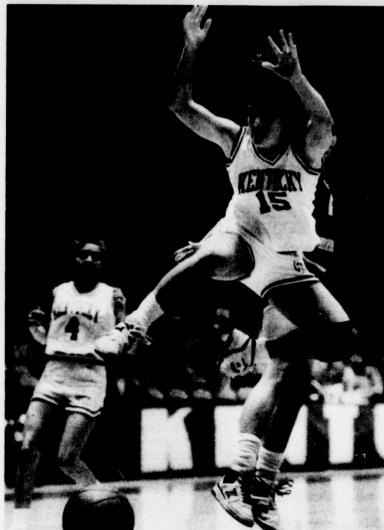

"I'm always pleased with a win," Fanning said. "I'm always pleased with team effort and I'm always pleased with hustle."

For most of the players, the victory was an easy one.

"It was relaxing," junior guard Malinka Sahli said. "It was more like practice — we didn't give up — we played for fun."

Even though 12 UK players scored, Whitaker paved the way by scoring 18 points. UK senior forward Pam Shrum chipped in 16.

Patricia Holland led the Thorobrettes with 18 points.

ALAN HAWBE/Kernal Staff

UK senior guard Jodie Whitaker flies through the air after a loose ball last night at Memorial Coliseum. UK beat Kentucky St. 91-53.

"We were getting up and down the court and taking good shots."

Sharon Fanning,
Lady Kat coach

Kentucky St. added to its woes by shooting 23.7 percent and committing 24 turnovers.

UK hit 52.7 percent from the field and turned the ball over 27 times.

KSU's record dropped to 9-6. The win extended UK's current winning streak to five.

The Lady Kats, who improved to 9-6, will play Wednesday night. They travel to Freedom Hall to play the University of Louisville Lady Cardinals at 7:30 p.m.

Winn shines in debut meet

By BOB NORMAN
Staff Writer

A cold, hard rain didn't stop UK's gymnastics meet Saturday afternoon at Memorial Coliseum — but it did hinder a few of the athletes.

"When you come in on a day when it's cold and raining outside, it does have a bearing on performance. The rain has a tendency to tighten bodies up," said UK team psychologist Dennis Sprague.

UK might have been all wet in a loss to Ohio State University in that meet — but not all UK performances were dreary.

Freshman Amie Winn, a Lexington native who was competing in her first collegiate meet, suddenly became the UK gymnastics team's ray of hope as she placed second in the all-around competition.

"She did great," UK coach Leah Little said after the meet, in which her team took second place behind Ohio State. "Amie needed a good meet to get her going, and that's what happened."

Winn, the 1988 Kentucky State USGF Class I senior champion, placed second all-around in the meet featuring UK, Ohio State, and Indiana University of Pennsylvania.

Winn's individual event honors included a fourth on the vault, fifth on the uneven bars and fifth in the floor exercises. Another opponent Winn said she defeated was herself.

"I was so nervous. I didn't know what to expect," said Winn, a former member of the nationally-ranked Tates Creek High School dance team.

"I just have to be aggressive," she said. "I guess sometimes your nerves work for you."

"The first meet is always hard; we just need to iron out the kinks," Little said. "Most errors — in fact, all the errors — were mental errors."

Despite Winn's efforts and the performance of UK sophomore Aaron Aldrich (who scored a meet-best 9.5 on the balance beam), the Kats could not overcome Ohio State.

The Lady Buckeyes were fueled by the excellent showings of Monica Stavros (first overall), Julie Somers (a 9.7 on the vault) and Michelle Schulte.

"Also without top returner (Diane Sill, who only performed on the balance beam) and school-record vaulter (Courtney Smith), it makes winning a lot tougher," she said.

Perhaps the nervousness and jitters culminated on the balance beam. Until Aldrich performed, all of UK's beamers had fallen.

Aldrich, who finished in fourth place all-around, took to the beam like she owned it and put in one of the more graceful performances of the meet.

"I felt good (about her performance)," Aldrich said. "I did have some minor mistakes, first-meet mistakes. I have some things I need to clean up, but I feel really good."

According to Sprague, one reason for some of the falls might have been, oddly enough, the rain falling outside.

Regardless of the source of the Kats' mistakes or the mistakes themselves, Little said the UK gymnastics program has the talent to be a top contender this year.

With the encouraging performance by Winn, Little said the team has "nowhere to go but up."

"We have a more talented team than ever. The talent and skill is there," Little said. "We just have to keep going."

Aldrich echoed Little's remarks. "We made a lot of mistakes, but I think we'll have a great year," she said.

UK's next challenge will come in the Kentucky Classic, Jan. 20-22, at Memorial Coliseum.

Bush pays tribute to King; staff prepares for Friday inauguration

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President-elect Bush began his inauguration week by paying tribute yesterday to the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. and working on his inaugural address as those organizing the swearing-in ceremony anxiously made lists, juggled seating arrangements and monitored weather reports.

BUSH

While federal workers enjoyed a day off, behind-the-scenes activity for the inauguration of the nation's 41st president went on at a furious pace.

House Democrats arranged a "Majority Party Party" at a hotel ballroom Thursday night, the same time the GOP has scheduled a televised, star-studded inaugural gala.

"We had to give the Democrats something to do," said Howard Schloss, a spokesman for the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, which strengthened its grip on the House in November.

"Hopefully, in four years we'll be having the inaugural gala." The gala was one of the myriad events put together by the Presidential Inaugural Committee, which is running most of the week's festivities. They open Wednesday with a tribute to teachers and end Sunday with a prayer service at Washington Cathedral.

Yesterday was a generally quiet day in the nation's capital, as federal offices were closed for the national holiday commemorating King's birthday. Bush offered a strong tribute to the slain civil rights leader at a prayer breakfast for black supporters.

"We must not fail the nation he loved so much and gave his life for," Bush said. "I understand that five days before becoming president of the United States of America."

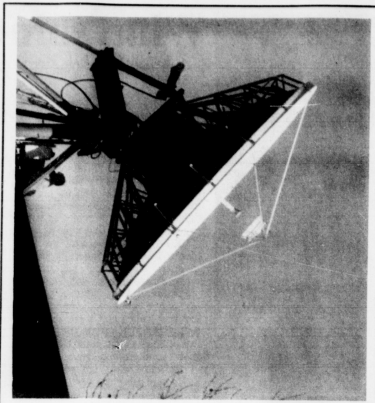

He then returned home to work on the speech he will give Friday after taking the oath of office.

The president-elect and his aides are keeping mum on the tenor of the speech, for which Bush is calling on the author of some of his most memorable campaign comments, speechwriter Peggy Noonan. The Bush team researched past inaugural addresses in preparation for the address.

Inauguration week started differently at the Capitol Hill office of the Joint Congressional Committee on Inaugural Ceremonies, which is in charge of the swearing-in ceremony and a luncheon to follow.

"The very first thing we did this morning was make a checklist of what could be forgotten — who's bringing the Bush bibles, who's bringing the Quayle bibles," said executive director Mike Ruehling.

The bicentennial inaugural ceremony will begin at 11:38 a.m. Friday, with Bush taking the oath as close to noon as possible, as the Constitution directs. Ruehling said

CATCHING A WAVE: A worker repairs the satellite dish on top of the KET building on Cooper Drive yesterday.

Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., chairman of the committee and the master of ceremonies, will have both long and short introductions to use, depending on how the program is going.

"One thing you can't take into account is applause," Ruehling said. "If you build in three minutes of applause and there's only 30 seconds, you're in trouble. And we don't have any public service announcements to run to fill the time."

The congressional panel is monitoring weather reports from two sources — the military and NDC, home of the network pool producer. The latest report for Friday called for clear skies and temperatures ranging from the high 30s to low 40s.

"A little nippy but still considerably better than four years ago," Ruehling said. Then the temperature was 10 degrees, enough to force President Reagan's oath-taking into the Capitol Rotunda and cancel the post-ceremony parade.

Outside on the West Front of the Capitol, with its sweeping view of the Smithsonian museums and the Washington monument, workers prepared Monday to install a podium and the bulletproof glass shield that will surround it.

Ruehling's committee was also finalizing a seating chart for the inner platform — a group of 300 who will sit closest to the podium.

Cease-fire could help to establish PLO's credibility

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Yasser Arafat's guerrillas have refrained from attacking Israeli targets for the past two months, observing an undeclared cease-fire that could give credibility to the PLO's peace initiative if it endures.

Some Israeli officials have called attention to the lack of Fatah operations but have expressed doubt about Arafat's ability or even desire to make it last. "We have not identified any flagrant act on the part of the PLO against the security zone or Israel since Arafat committed himself" to end terrorism, said Uri Lubrani, a senior Defense Ministry official responsible for Lebanon policy.

"I think it is too early to judge" if the truce would be lasting, Lubrani said on Israel radio.

Foreign Ministry Spokesman Alon Liel said in an interview it was "not 100 percent clear" whether the cease-fire encompassed only Arafat's own Fatah guerrillas or all Palestine Liberation Organization factions.

There have been two recent infiltration attempts by Syrian-based groups, one headed by Abu Nidal which is outside the PLO umbrella and the other, the Palestine Liberation Front, which is part of the PLO. Israeli soldiers killed six of the guerrillas.

The last attack by Arafat's Fatah came on the eve of the PLO's declaration of statehood in mid-November when a five-member Fatah squad took U.N. soldiers and Lebanese civilians hostage for 18 hours. The guerrillas shot to death one Lebanese man before surrendering.

Anat Kurz, a terrorism expert at Tel Aviv University's Jaffee Center for Strategic Studies, said in an interview that a cease-fire would have to be more enduring to overcome Israeli suspicion about the PLO.

"It will change people's mind if it lasts longer," she said.

Kurz noted Arafat had never renounced armed struggle or the right to attack targets in Israel but said it was in Arafat's interest to suspend anti-Israeli attacks to give his initiative credibility, especially with Western countries.

However, she said there were serious doubts among Israeli policymakers about whether Fatah could tolerate a long period of inaction without clear political gains.

The center estimates Fatah has about 8,000 guerrillas, or half the total number of Palestinians under arms. Most are based in Lebanon.

Many Israelis, especially those on the political right, view the 13-month Palestinian uprising in the occupied territories as a form of terrorism aimed at destroying Israel.

Retired Maj. Gen. Shlomo Gazit, former head of military intelligence, said a PLO cease-fire would not be effective in dispelling Israeli doubts unless Arafat specified its duration and made it comprehensive.

Ford, McConnell may collide over reform of campaign expenditure

Associated Press

COVINGTON, Ky. — The differing positions of U.S. Sens. Mitch McConnell and Wendell Ford over campaign spending reform apparently reflect the division in Congress over how to attack the rising cost of elections.

Ford, D-Ky., favors limiting how much a candidate can take in. McConnell, R-Ky., favors limiting who can give but not how much.

McConnell, chairman of a task force of Republican senators considering federal election campaign reform, already is arming for the fray.

But Ford is chairman of the Rules Committee, where all campaign reform measures must pass before going to the full Senate.

Ford favors overall spending limits in congressional campaigns and is willing to support public financing for those same elections. McConnell isn't.

"That's off the table," McConnell said during a recent interview with The Kentucky Post of Covington. He promises a Republican filibuster to block any such legislation, similar to the one McConnell led in 1987 to kill legislation drafted, in part, by Ford.

One key dividing point is what to do about political action committees. The committees collect contributions from people of particular interest groups and distribute it to candidates.

Ford is open to tighter restrictions on the giving of political action committees, but he opposes a ban on it. The thrust of the campaign spending limits he supported in the past session of Congress dealt not with political action committee donations but with overall spending.

The spirit of King needs to be kept alive by actions

It was December 1955 when Rosa Parks, a black woman, was arrested for refusing to sit in the "colored" section of the bus in Montgomery, Ala. Parks' defiance set off a series of peaceful protests and boycotts of the Montgomery bus system.

Leading that fight for justice and equality was the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. and his wife Coretta Scott.

Following India's Mohandas Gandhi's teachings of non-violent protest, known as ahimsa, King helped change a nation's attitude toward segregation and prejudice.

Culminating with the march on Washington in 1963 and the signing of the 1964 Civil Rights Act and 1965 Voting Rights Act, King showed a world that change can be brought about in a society without guns and bullets.

In 1989, America has come a long way in terms of civil rights. But as with any great nation, there is room for improvement. The upper echelon working force is still dominated by white males and many minorities are still left out of the decision-making process.

At UK, there are more opportunities for minorities, and the recent programs initiated under UK President David Roselle are an encouraging sign.

But more can be done in higher education to help minorities.

Kentucky's eight state-run universities have met federal standards, but meeting standards is not enough, members of a Council on Higher Education committee said last week.

It was appropriate for us to commemorate the birthday of King last weekend, but it is even more important for us to practice the spirit of King and work toward the goals he fought, and eventually died, for.

Not your average Joe

Burch is precisely what UK needs in an athletics director

Kernel Checklist

Take A Ticket And We'll Call You In The Morning.

Add-drop. The new computerized Student Information System, which has been promoted as the greatest thing to come to UK since Adolph Rupp, turned out to be a major headache for students last week. Officials said the reason for long lines was that they underestimated the number of people who would go through Add-drop. At least one positive thing can be said for the new system: It made Add-drop at Memorial Coliseum seem like such a wonderful experience.

School Spirit. Student Tickets. In reaction to low student attendance at the men's basketball games, the University took away 400 student tickets and sold them as half-season tickets. Saturday night's game against Louisiana State University had the biggest crowd to see a UK basketball game since Rupp Arena opened. It should be obvious who the real UK fans are.

Happy Trails. Ronald Reagan. America's 40th president leaves office at noon Friday, after living at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. for the last eight years. Ronald Reagan will ride off into the sunset as the most popular president since Dwight D. Eisenhower, never mind little things, like the largest fiscal deficit in the history of the world, the Iran-contra debacle and a corrupt administration.

Change of Attitude? Pi Kappa Alpha Social Fraternity. In wake of their fraternity brother's drunken driving incident and subsequent jail sentence, members of Pi Kappa Alpha said they plan to make a film about drunken driving. The greek system has long had a reputation of silliness, partying and general indifference about society, but the idea of addressing one of society's more serious problems is somewhat encouraging.

Joe Burch is not your normal athletics director. At least not in the way we at UK and the Southeastern Conference have come to think about and "love" the position.

When you think of athletics directors, you usually think of the good-old-boy network of athlete-turned-successful-athletics administrator.

Consider: Yours' truly Cliff Hagan, a former UK and NBA all-star; Joe Dean at Louisiana State University; and Vince Dooley, at the University of Georgia, who, until recently, held both the top athletics and football jobs.

Hagan's replacement figures to be broken from the same mold.

Larry Conley, a UK basketball-player-turned-broadcast-analyst has applied for the job. And C.M. Newton, a former UK player and current Vanderbilt University basketball coach known for his integrity and high academic standards, is being touted for the job by every columnist and rumor-monger in Kentucky.

Burch fits none of those characteristics.

He's a longtime University employee, particularly in the dean of students office, who's known for being a troubleshooter—the kind of no-nonsense guy you bring to sweep out trouble in a low-key, efficient manner.

But that's exactly why Joe Burch should be UK's permanent athletics director—because he is breaks the mold in every conceivable way from what you think of in an athletics director.

UK needs two things in an athletics director:

Someone who is above reproach and will be able to make a statement to the country that UK's athletics programs have integrity. The perception of UK as an institution that not only allows cheating, but at least in the past encouraged it, is rampant across the country. Cliff Hagan, despite bringing unprecedented financial growth to the department, symbolized UK athletics too much to remain on with a program tarnished repeatedly by scandal. Although Larry Conley certainly assures the NCAA, or anybody else, that UK's athletics program from his playing days and now from being an analyst, he would suffer the same problems that Hagan did.

Conley is associated too much with a basketball program that everybody knows was willing to bend, and at times break, a few rules over the years. Conley would not assure the NCAA, or anybody else for that matter, that UK is serious about having a clean program.

UK needs to move the athletics program across Euclid Avenue from Memorial Coliseum to President Roselle's lap in the administration building. In other words, Roselle from now on needs to be directly involved in the athletics program to ensure the institutional control that has been lacking at UK.

Newton fulfills criterion one. He certainly is above reproach and known for his hard-line stance on academics. (Of course, he would have to be at a school like Vandy.)

Joe Burch does not fit the image of a typical athletics director, but he has the competence to do the job.

Newton, through no fault of his own, cannot fulfill criterion two, however. If he wants the job, Newton probably would be in favor of administrative involvement in the athletics department. And the nation probably would tout UK's selection of such a fine man.

Newton's selection, or even Conley's, also would be considered a victory by groups such as the Athletics Association, and K&N, who for some reason think no one but a former athlete can run an athletics department.

That's just not true. In fact, in many cases they hinder them. UK, and college athletics in general, does not need that mentality. And that's just one of the many reasons why Roselle needs to get rid of our Athletics Association.

Although Newton would be a fine choice for an AD, Burch takes things a step further.

Burch represents what UK desperately needs in its athletics department—a good, tough and proven administrator. He also provides that direct link to the administrator that UK needs to show everyone it has.

No, Joe Burch is not your normal athletics director.

And that's exactly why he should be our next one.

New learning program helps students master their classes

Dear Counselor: Last semester, I saw stories in the Kernel and in the Lexington Herald-Leader about a class at UK that would teach me how to get better grades. My mom also sent me a clipping from The Courier-Journal about this class. It was called the Master Student class. My grades are OK, but I wouldn't mind having a higher grade point average. Can you tell me more about the Master Student class? Curious Junior.

Dear Curious: Your question concerns the newest component of the Counseling and Testing Center's effort to enable all students to have a successful academic experience at UK.

Each semester, the center's Learning Skills Program provides classes and workshops in learning and study strategies. The participants in our programs represent the wide variety of students at UK: traditional-age undergraduates, older adults, graduate students, international students, full-time and part-time students, students on academic scholarship, and students on academic probation.

All of the students have one common goal: They all want to do their best academically at UK.

The Master Student class was initially developed with the support and encouragement of Richard

COUNSELOR'S CORNER

Greissman, assistant to the dean of the College of Arts & Sciences. He works with students seeking readmissions to the University after an academic suspension of one semester or more.

Greissman found that most students were very bright and had often achieved success in high school with very little effort. However, they had never developed the kind of learning and study skills required to make it at UK.

If they were permitted to try another semester at UK, Greissman decided they had acquired more efficient study habits. The Learning Skills staff designed a course, the Master Student, to address the specific needs of those students in academic jeopardy.

The first Master Student class was offered in the spring 1988 semester. It met one evening per week for six weeks. Nineteen students from the College of Arts & Sciences attended the class as part of the readmission agreement with Greissman.

Areas of study included: time management, procrastination, reading strategies, note-taking and test-taking, motivation, and concentration. It was a resounding success.

Fifteen of the 19 students who participated in the program showed a dramatic improvement in their grade point averages. In fact, seven students earned a grade point average of 3.0 or better. Two of these students even achieved a grade point average of 4.0!

Jerome Bruner, an education theorist, once said: "We get interested in what we get good at." Most of these "master students" reported feeling more motivated to study, more committed and more confident of their ability to succeed at UK.

The Master Student continued in the fall 1988 semester with two, 12-hour classes. There were 42 participants referred by the deans and academic advisers of various colleges. Those students also have shown significant improvement in their course work.

This semester, the Master Student program is expanding to serve the needs of all students at the University. We are continuing to offer a 12-hour evening class with enrollment limited to students who are referred by academic deans and advisers.

In addition, there are two daytime sections of the Master Student class. Any UK student may enroll in those sections. Section I will meet 2 to 2:50 p.m., Tuesdays and Thursdays. The program begins today and ends Feb. 23. Section II will meet 2 to 2:50 p.m., Jan. 25-April 19.

If you would like to improve your academic standing and gain some tips on campus participation and social adjustment to college, the Master Student is the class for you!

20 years after his death, King's ideals continue to thrive

Lexington and the Lexington Fayette County NAACP were just some of the organizations carrying banners and representing those diverse interests.

A small child rode on his father's back, other children skateboarded or roller skated along the march route. Some walked arm-in-arm, while others sang together, their harmony a banner.

Darryl E. Mathis, a mathematics senior, said the march was important for UK students because in a large university people get separated.

The march, Mathis said, "is real helpful in bringing the black students together."

Last year, in a light rain, only about 500 people marched to honor King.

Parker attributed the larger turnout at this year's march to a change in time: The last two years the march had been held early in the morning.

This year, with the march starting later and the weather conditions improved from the snow and rain of previous marches, the event was much larger.

"That I had no idea it would be this big," Parker said.

Kennedy James, a Student Government Association senator, said Sunday's march was important to show "the people that the dream is still alive, that the dream didn't die with Martin Luther King Jr. but it's instilled in all of us."

"They killed the dreamer but they didn't kill the dream."

Inside the Singletary Center, the marchers gathered to celebrate that dream, nearly filling the center's 1,500-seat recital hall.

Although several speakers—such as Betty Griffin, with the state Board of Education and Charlotte Baer, with UK's College of Agriculture Extension — and the Black Voices choir kept to the theme of carrying King's dream of racial equality beyond that one day, it was King's words themselves which moved the audience the most.

Darnel Jones, a UK student, drew a standing ovation for an impassioned rendition of King's "Letter from a Birmingham Jail."

The letter, a defense of civil disobedience, was written to clergy members unhappy with King's protest of conditions in the South during the civil rights movement.

There are two types of laws — just and unjust," said Jones, reading from the letter. "And I would be the first to advocate obeying just laws. One has not only a legal but a moral responsibility to obey just laws."

Two slates of candidates vie for SGA's executive branch

"I'm sure as hell not a flashy politician because I'm sure not one, and I'm not going to try to be one," he said.

Although Ashley would not rule out running alone, he said he has talked to several prospective running mates, including his close friend, Arts & Sciences College Senator Keith Byers.

But Byers said he has not heard his name mentioned as a vice presidential candidate, and would not comment on what he plans to do this spring.

"Pretty much the way I look at it, it's pretty early to be talking about elections," Byers said.

Other students who have indicated they may run for the executive branch include LCC Senator Chris Essid and Student Activities Board President Michael Bowling.

about running together last semester, and was very upset when he learned only last week that Lohman had chosen Foster.

"He strung me along," Essid said. "I know he strung me along and I've got proof . . . and that's what pisses me off. I told (Lohman) and (Foster) that I wouldn't be surprised if I run for either (president or vice president)."

Essid said he is most qualified to be vice president because of his experience as chairman of LCC's Association of Students.

"The job of the vice president is basically what I've done at LCC, which I think is a pretty good job," Essid said. "Paige is a good person, but I just don't know if she has the ability to effectively control the Senate. I don't see Paige as doing as good a job as Leah (McCain)."

McCain has been harshly criticized by some senators for poorly running some of the Senate meetings.

But if the presidential race comes down between Lohman and Ashley, Essid said he would have a better chance at winning the presidency because he could split up the greek vote. Lohman is a member of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity.

Essid could not be reached last night for comment after it was learned that Kennedy was running for president.

Bowling said he was "kind of flattered" when several student leaders approached him about running for president, but right now he said he is satisfied with his current position in SAB.

"I wouldn't rule it out, but I'm not encouraging it, either," he said. "To be honest with you, I really enjoy my job in SAB."

Kevin T. Williams, 25, a student at Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tenn., said his generation did not have to experience the adversity faced during the civil rights movement of the 1960s. And that made Sunday's march more important.

"The majority of people here are my age and younger," Williams said. "A lot of them didn't really experience the civil rights struggle. . . . And a lot of racism is growing again in America because they didn't experience these trials and hardships."

Victor Hazard, a first-year dean of students, said it was important to show students that King's cause was not "just a black cause or a white cause."

"And I think that's the thing that's exemplified in this program: that it's all of our causes."

King's ideas important, students say about a lot of things that a lot of people today don't, because they are scared of retribution."

"He was very brave and stood up for other people," said Sandra Elder, an accounting senior. "The fact that what he said might make others angry didn't stop him."

"I think he was a great person," said physical therapy freshman Tiffany Calvert. "I have a great respect for someone who could have such an impact on the world today."

Even though most UK students agree that King was an important figure, they agree with Mabe in that the holiday does not merit a holiday.

"I don't think he should have his own holiday," said interior design major Heather Henderson. "I think a lot of times black people try to find things to make them stand out above whites. I think this is discriminatory toward whites."

The students of UK find that civil rights, an important issue of King's, is only evident periodically on campus.

"Civil rights is an issue at UK at certain times of the year," said marketing senior Sylvia Brown. "It doesn't come up all of the time, it's one of those things everyone thinks is being taken care of."

"I really don't see civil rights as a very big thing," Calvert said. "I believe it's observed, but on a daily basis it's not prominent."

Reagan wanted Regan out earlier

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan wanted former chief of staff Donald T. Regan out of the White House for some time before Regan was eventually ousted, Regan said in a nationally broadcast interview yesterday night.

Regan related that he erred in granting the wishes of then-Treasury Secretary Regan and then-White House chief of staff James A. Baker III to switch jobs at the beginning of his second term in early 1985.

"I know that I have a soft heart," he said, when asked by Cable News Network to say what he considered as a weakness of his presidential leadership style.

Regan was ousted at the end of February 1987, at the height of the Iran-Contra scandal, and was replaced by former Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn. Regan insisted at the time he did not fire Regan, saying Regan had indicated at some earlier time he wanted to return to private business.

Regan said he quietly hoped to be able to use a letter of resignation which Regan had submitted months earlier when the chief of staff indicated he would not likely serve through Regan's entire second term.

"There was no firing at all," Regan said. "I set out at the same time, then, to start quietly, and hoping, leakproof, to have a successor on hand for when he announced the time he was going to go."

Regan was infuriated when there were news reports of his resignation in late February, 1986, coupled with reports of Baker's selection.

CNN anchorman Bernard Shaw, at one point, asked Regan if he agreed with daughter Maureen's interview statement that allowing Regan to become chief of staff had been her father's biggest mistake.

"I saw that. Happened to be watching television and saw that," he replied. ". . . I said, 'That's my girl.'"

Regan also said he is bitter about Regan's book, "For The Record," in which the former chief of staff harshly criticized Regan's executive management style and also maintained that first lady Nancy Reagan played a heavy hand in White House affairs.

"I was very displeased with that, and yes, it hurt," Regan said. "None of the attack was leveled at me — only at her. And she didn't deserve it anyway."

To assure rushee understanding of important policies affecting pledging you are requested to read and sign the following statement:

I understand that:
Although Panhellenic does not require a specific grade point average to participate in rush, each of the women's fraternity chapters has a minimum grade point average for pledging. These range from 2.0 to a 3.2 for freshmen and from 2.0 to a 3.3 for upperclassmen on a 4.0 scale. I understand that if my grade point average is below the minimum, chances of pledging are low.
I agree that Panhellenic may verify my self-reported grade point average and my American College Test (ACT) scores and that this information may be released to the Panhellenic Council and the individual sororities.
