THE SALT SHAKER

As much as we're looking forward to our Christmas vacation, can't help looking backward a little bit, too.

He returned the paper with the notation, "God gets an A; you get an F. Happy New Year."

The play on the Guignol stage wasn't half so much fun as the play going on backstage.

Swiss cheese, pickles, mustard, salami, beer, milk, a full dinner, candy, pie, beans, cokes and fruit cocktail, in that order, cause indigestion. 4. White socks are hard to keep clean when you don't wear shoes. 5. A college education is extremely important—if you want to be successful with cross-word puzzles.

One of UK's men has always been told by his father, "Make your own pants, my son, wherever you go." And that's the reason why Hugh Collett ignores the "Please" signs.

We are quoting a letter from a friend stationed in the Marianas: "You may not believe this, but one of the mosquitoes landed on the airfield the other day, and the ground crew pumped ten gallons of gas into it before they realized it wasn't a P-47."

Freshmen Fanny-Boners: In the kernel office, a young, aspiring, little-boy reporter was left in charge of the phone. It rang. He picked it up and said, "This is the kernel speaking!" ... Walking behind two frosh, we heard one say to the other, "Gosh, this is the biggest school I've ever seen in all my life—not to have one pencil-sharpener!" Merry Christmas!

What Goes On There...

By Dora Lee Robertson

While a Wayne senior was instructing an eighth grade journalism class on the art of the interview, the question of the suitable length for an article arose.

Just think of some poor Captain Minus all his silver bars standing behind some counter selling peanuts and cigars.

Shed a tear for some poor Colonel if he doesn't feel himself jerking sodas isn't easy.

Two American soldiers in Egypt lived for months on dehydrated beef, dehydrated milk, dehydrated butter, and vegetables.

So be kind to working people. That you meet wherever you go. For they say what's washing dishes may have been your C. O.

Dr. Maurice Ramsey, assistant professor of government at Wayne University, sighed slightly when, at the end of the class period in the political parties course, a student requested, "Will you please discuss the situation in Washington?"

The actions of men are like the index of a book; they point out what is most remarkable in them.

He Knew to Working People: When bagles sound their final notes and bombs explode no more.

Wayne alumna, Marguerite Pasque, now an Ensign in the Navy, was introduced to L. E. Dickinson, associate professor of English, on her recent visit to Wayne.

Sur-Meis-Ing Student Thinks UK Should Have More Tradition

Speaking of religion, we have heard an interesting theory on the subject of immortality.

Could someone please tell us if there is such a person as ZONIA? Bill Kessler, an ASTP engineer, is continually in a dither about the barker of this name.

Did You Know? The boys who play volleyball in the men's Phys. Ed. classes, can be seen any time out on the field playing vigorously.

Virginia Rosen decided that she would be up on her toes this year and bought her first gift, a whole mouth ahead of time.

And now to end with the corniest pun of the quarter; while in the bookstore we were asked if we had heard the latest recording by Art Gorn and his rubber band—'Erable You.'

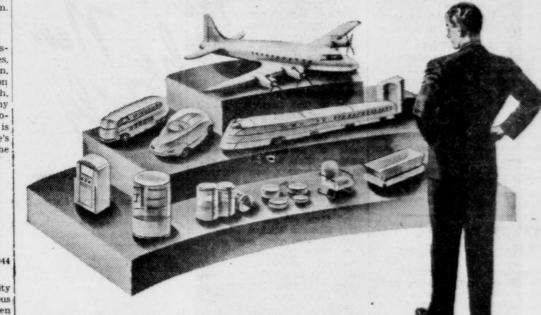

Yes, I think that the University of Kentucky lacks traditions, lacks those things which fathers tell sons about when Junior comes to college.

She has taken the students and the soldiers under her wing and feels that "we are all her children."

Yale has an honor system; a powerful morale builder.

Now she is wearing a pair of silver wings coiled around a parachute.

Yes, I think that the University of Kentucky lacks traditions, lacks those things which fathers tell sons about when Junior comes to college.

Your own Imaginering can start now

Whether you are in training for the services... or actually serving... you can start your own imaginering for the future right now.

Imaginering, you know, is the word we use at Alcoa for letting imaginations soar, then engineering these ideas down to practical use.

And one very practical way of starting your own postwar planning is to consider what is ahead for aluminum.

Almost everywhere now you can see this light, strong, versatile metal performing new wonders in war and industrial equipment.

Yes, I think that the University of Kentucky lacks traditions, lacks those things which fathers tell sons about when Junior comes to college.

Alcoa Aluminum. A parenthetical aside from the autobiography of Alcoa Aluminum. This message is printed by Aluminum Company of America to help people to understand what we do and what sort of men make aluminum grow in usefulness.

Assume The Angle Is Out

When an editorial suggesting the possibility and almost the probability of an end to fraternities on the campus appeared in The Kernel several weeks ago, comments both for and against such arguments presented were forceful, but the main reaction was that unfortunately it takes a year to bring this problem into the open.

fairly good reasons for the existence of the organizations. In addition to the influence of correct living and individual development, the provisions agree that they help match the discipline of the college administration, instigate successful management, requiring sound financial practices and good housekeeping methods, teach good citizenship in the chapter house and civic responsibilities as members of the college community thus preparing for later life.

Since wartime conditions have reduced the number of chapters since Pearl Harbor, exactly three years ago, from approximately 2322 of 1989 member fraternities, remaining fraternity men have found it difficult to continue activities. Perhaps the most important step which the National Interfraternity Conference has taken since the chapters were so reduced in membership is to request that all forms of hazing involving mental or physical torture, including paddling, be banned by all colleges and universities throughout the country.

In a world where development of such possessions are so important why not hang onto them by the same manner which has already proved successful:

It's All Over Now—But He Deserves More

Before we completely toss the football uniforms back into lockers packed with moth balls and maybe even forget that UK had a team this year, there is one more little thing that could be mentioned.

Here already is one attempt to improve the status of the college fraternity.

Since September we've all been watching a cocky little quarterback. The number on his blue jersey was 34 and he is Norman Klein, at one time All-Kentucky back from the Louisville Male eleven. Sportswriters had him picked out as being good mainly because he played a consistent game and just naturally held the team together when the odds weren't encouraging.

A graduate of the University, criticizing the arguments taken in defense of organizations said that the facts suggest that the development of the individual as a result of fraternal affiliations has never been pointed out. "That, of course is an error," was the reply, "since it is the one and only argument that the fraternities have ever been able to trot out as a vindication of their existence. However, when one is conversant with the first, fourth, sixth and the wife pulling entailed in selecting members, it is immediately apparent that superior social development is a prerequisite for membership rather than a result of it."

When he was chosen for third string on the All-Southeastern Conference team this week the disappointment so plainly shown on the faces of all who heard the news was pretty evident. It's not that we aren't all proud that the made the honorable mention and shared boys along with Wash Serini, who was rightly placed on the first string, but we would like to have seen him gain a position on that first team, too—and receive all the honors that should have been his.

Yet a decalog of fraternity policy, which was adopted by the forementioned conference, give Measuring Up!

1. Many of the University boys overseas are wild to hear the latest news from home. Are you too busy cigarette-hunting, studying to be great brains, or trying to lure some seventeen-year-old into asking for a date now and then, to break down and write? There are thousands of names and addresses in the Alumni Office just waiting to go on the outside of an envelope with your letter in it. We realize that some of the soldiers on isolated islands, and in hospitals would really be too busy with bridge games, dances, and too to be interested in hearing about our old dull existent back home, but we could make an effort to write, especially during Christmas.

Reet Pleet

Our men in uniform say over and over that when they are out on the town they like to have the lady on their arm look her very prettiest in a formal gown. U.S.O. hostesses repeat this fact by saying the girl in the long dress is a real morale builder on the dance floor. The fall season in New York has attracted more people in formal dress for the first nights and the openings than at any time since the beginning of the war, and a quick glance at the girls in the long dress is a real morale builder on the dance floor. Five news service teletypes, ready-to-read wires, and a CBS book of "War Words" makes for authentic reporting, yet few men reach the news mikes without five years' apprenticeship on 50,000-watt stations. John, young, blonde and handsome, set his course to radio news while still in Northwestern University, following up with voice training in Chicago. Seven years' association with radio news, two of which have been with WHAS, John has witnessed release of world-shaking news . . . Pearl Harbor, the Allied invasion, and his recent reporting of election returns throughout the night, are but three examples.

... and then came the highways

AMERICA'S growth has largely followed the routes of American railroads. They penetrated the wilderness and created wealth for the Nation. Around these efficient arteries of transportation grew great cities, busy industrial centers and prosperous farming communities.

Subsequently, fine highways were constructed. The railroads not only carried most of the materials to build these modern thoroughfares, and spent large sums for separation of grades at crossings for public safety, but have actually contributed greatly in taxes for highway construction and upkeep. In 1943, for example, about $800,000 of I&N tax payments were allocated for highway purposes in the 13 states through which it operates.

Highway separations at railroad grade crossings have become increasingly important as faster-moving vehicles have multiplied. Originally, railroads were—and in some states still are—required to bear the largest part of the cost of such separations, although the public has always received the greatest benefits. Certain states have now recognized that equity calls for a fairer distribution of the costs.

The Old Reliable is proud of its 94-year record of public service and its contributions to all phases of Southern progress. It looks to the future confidently, provided that just laws and reasonable regulation will permit it to continue its usefulness in the further development of the South.

They're Waiting For Santa

By John Violette

Pat is a curly-haired five-year-old girl with pleading blue eyes and a smile that tugs at your heart. And there are others just as lovable at Pal—the little fellow across the long, white room who pushes himself up to a half-sitting position on his bed and asks for his mother, trying hard to hold back the tears. And the eleven-year-old just over by the big, bare window, who reads comic books— anything that comes her way. In this way she passes the day, but the nights are long and lonely and the nurse changes a tear-stained pillowcase each morning. You see, she can no longer skip rope, or play house, or go to school. She has had polio.

And the frail little girl in the bed next to Pat— she got a rubber doll last Christmas, that cried when you pushed on its tummy. She laughs, but not like Mary Helen. Mary Helen is just that girl who doesn't know about Christmas, and running and playing. She never heard of Santa Claus.

When you first go in the hospital they don't know you, but it doesn't take long. They hide their faces or those that can, will turn over. When you say hello you'll hear from across the room a timid answer. A mop of disheveled blond curls will appear over a Mickey Mouse book and a small boy will ease his hands down from his face. Son they are talking and laughing with you, asking you questions, telling you how Mary Helen cried when the nurse put her peck back on. And when you have to catch your bus they make you promise to come back— soon. Some little girl will bite her lip and ask you to stay just a little longer and you miss your last bus but you really don't mind.

Polio has struck these children with viciousness, confining them to hospital beds and smelly, nauseating salt packs. They are given the best of attention and care but they have been robbed of the outdoors and a real childhood. Medical science is doing all it can to ease their suffering, but . . . doctors can't work miracles even for Christmas.

Pat has been at the hospital for seven weeks now. She says she is going home for Christmas. She doesn't remember last year; she has never heard the choir chant its "Noel, Noel," nor has she been told of the coming of the wise men. "But I . . . I'm going home for Christmas! The doctors aren't so sure. If you have a few free hours during the holidays, stop by the Shriner's.

Journalism Majors Continually Draw Off Assignments

Pre-med students have conventions, engineers don't have to think about laying out to prospective bridge builders, and lawyers need only think about briefing private cases— but journalism majors find themselves continually drawing off assignments. That's why it was both amusing and interesting to mingle amidst a group of two-kentucky and eleven delegates to the Kentucky High School Press Association last weekend and make a psychological study of their reactions at finding themselves working with other journalists—ah, college journalism.

Their two days were full; for besides the general task of getting assignments from the newsroom, finding out that they were supposed to enter five or six contests, asking where Room 54 was, attending a party of sorts of roundtables, bumping into English majors who merely stared in amazement at finding so many white-lagged, "bobby-soxer" individuals destroying the daily "calm" of McVey hall, typing stories, asking where McVey hall was, handing in copy asking if this was the University of Kentucky, and attending sweater swings—they interviewed important personalities on the campus.

Perhaps Adolph Rupp would have wondered what the interviewees meant when she quoted him as saying, "Oh, it will all come out in the wash," but generally speaking all delegates—even the ones who made the trip all the way from Hazard and Harlan— showed the enthusiasm which really made the convention a success.

They all covered their assignments and they all turned in copy to the best of their ability, but one of the best pieces of writing evident in the prize-winning editorial of a young Highlands high school editor—"We have contributed to five great war loan drives to bid them 'over the top.' The next campaign is on—the victory drive has been launched. This may be the final stroke against the enemy; it may bring the G.I. Joe back home again. Don't stop now— open wide the purses and smile when you find that your answer has been sent to 'flap S.O.S.'"

"Remember, my face is my fortune; my face is my fortune. . . Oh, I'm sorry, can I lend you five?"

What is geometry? A little acorn grew and grew and one day he woke up and said Geom-e-try. "Johnny, your lessons aren't done today. Where did you go last night?" "To the movies with a girl, teacher."

"Get out of this class for a week. And you, Tommy, where did you go last night?" "Out parking with a girl." "Go home and stay there two weeks. Oscar, where are you going?" "Teacher, my school days are over."

please Bring . . .

. . . a doll "I set of dishes" a little brother . . . Just about everything this little girl might ask for will be decked around our Christmas trees this year, for in spite of war there will be plenty of gifts and good will. They symbolize all the Saviour teaches, all of the Four Freedoms, all we're fighting for.

Soldier In France Acts As 'Middle-man' For Pen Pals

An American soldier in France has served as a means for establishing contact between a University coed and her French pen-pal from whom she had not heard since the European war began. The coed is Phyllis Freed. She is a senior, a Modern Languages major, and her home is in New Jersey. This is the story in her own words.

"Last Wednesday my roommate, Huguette Balzola, and I were talking about France, one of our favorite subjects. The conversation brought to my mind a pen-pal that I once had, a girl named Odette Roche who lived in Marseilles. About six years ago, while I was studying French in high school, I wrote to a "pen-pal society" and received Odette's name and address. We began a correspondence, and from that time on we were close friends despite the distance in miles between us.

"When war broke out the letters from Odette came to a sudden halt. Years had passed and I received no word from her. As a matter of fact, the first time in ages that I happened to think about Odette was last Wednesday. And then, the next day I received a letter forwarded to me from my home, from an American soldier unknown to me. He explained that he was stationed somewhere in France and that he had met a girl named Odette Roche. She had asked him to write to me for her, so that we could once again become pen-pals. Since mail between French civilians and Americans is not yet permitted, this soldier serves as a middle man. He wrote that Odette's home had been destroyed and that things had been pretty hard for her."

Nerve Systems for Battle Wagons

When U. S. warships go into action, telephone equipment transmits orders instantly, clearly. For the huge battleship "Wisconsin," Western Electric supplied two systems using equipment designed by Bell Telephone Laboratories.

1. Sound powered telephone system—with 2200 instruments connecting all battle stations. These battle phones operate on current generated by the speaker's voice, so damage to the ship's electrical power supply cannot interrupt communications.

2. Battle announcing system—with 20 transmitter stations and over 300 giant-voiced loudspeakers.

Helping to supply "battle talk" equipment for use at sea, on land and in the air is providing important work for many college graduates—both men and women—at Western Electric.

We View Exams As Mighty Seniors On The Last Lap

By Myrtle Weathers

How a senior looks at exams... cross-eyed!

And we aren't kidding either. We have been around here for three years, now, and have taken exams at least nine times. This time will make ten, winter quarter 11 and the last one! That is the bright spot in our lives as we think about studying.

Studying in a dormitory presents its problems, but it isn't too bad. The main difficulty is finding a place to study. It seems that our friends always beat us to that cozy little nook we thought was hidden away. Evidently it wasn't!

But after we finally settle down with two packs of cigarettes, even in these times, three pillows for support, and sixty-odd textbooks, we find that we just can't concentrate. We get sleepy. And we wish that we had started just one night sooner. And we still have that term paper to write....

But there is something chummy about exam periods. "Noisy hour," which is really just a half hour from 10 to 10:30 p.m., means more than ever to us as we snatch a quick game of bridge. We stand around waiting for 11:30 so we can drink hot coffee (black, of course) and eat doughnuts. That always inspires us for another three hours or so.

Then we look around us, and see seven people beating a typewriter to beat the deadline on term papers. They have a habit of even catching up on seniors, though we should help. We breathe a sigh of relief when we think that we finished one yesterday!

We think about closing our books at 3 and falling into bed. We'll get up at 5 for a quick review. Then it comes to our minds... why go to sleep when we can't sleep? We can't forget those two exams we slept through when we were freshmen. So we'll just pack, and watch the sun come up, and have a quick review, and take that darn exam and get it over with!

But as seniors we look at it this way... since we've been through it nine times before, we can take it! Anyway, we'll have three weeks to sleep when we get home!

Campus Group Honors Warrington

D. O. W. Warrington, speaking on "Confusions of Equality and Confusions of Love" told an audience of Freshman club and Uppercass "Y" members Tuesday night, "We must understand and like differences. The spirit of God that makes varieties can work with them and bring about harmony. We can't sing war on earth forever; soon we must begin to sing peace and good will."

Jean Lyons gave the devotional service. Betty Sue Scott and Frances Bass sang a Christmas carol, and Jim Tucker introduced the speaker.

Prisoners Want To Study

By Doris Singleton

Many American students find that the hours they spend with their books are too long, and the books in the library too many. It may be hard for them to realize, or believe, that their fellow students behind barbed wire, war prisoners for the duration, can write, "Please send us difficult books. We have time enough to spend a day on a page."

Among the 6,000,000 prisoners of war held in many countries are tens of thousands whose university studies were interrupted by the war. Others, with or without degrees, are men of student interest. Most of them are desperately bored with prison life, their minds rusting away and their spirits depressed, fit victims for the dread "barbed wire disease."

The WESP, World Student Service Fund, is an organization which operates primarily in the colleges, universities, preparatory schools, and theological seminaries of the United States in order to raise money for student war relief. Its help sends to students and faculty members who are victims of war the books which they so desire.

The European Student Relief fund does a specialized piece of work designed to help students, or men with student interests, to continue their studies behind barbed wire. The initiative came from the men themselves, who, after the adjustments of the first few weeks in prison camps, began small discussion groups, seminars, lectures, with the leadership provided from their own number.

Lately, the working law of averages provided professors and graduate students in almost every camp. But help was needed from the outside, in the form of books, notebooks, pencils, and finally, some assurance that the work being done might some day eventuate in a degree.

Here the organization has done great work. From 1941 to July 1944, more than 140,000 books were sent into prison camps in Europe alone. Most of these books were especially requested by a student with whom personal correspondence was carried on. Recently large quantities of paper have been supplied from Sweden, since paper is almost unobtainable in Germany.

The visits of the traveling secretary to a camp have often been a help in organizing the "university of captivity," with a regular schedule of classes six days a week, and a curriculum comparable to that of a liberal arts college. In cooperation with other bodies, the organization has helped to make possible the sending of examinations into the camps for British prisoners of war in Germany from Oxford, Cambridge, and the University of London. The external degree of the University of London can even be awarded for work done in person camp.

The greatest problem of the prison camp is mental. Men are immobilized for the duration, soldiers out of luck, mostly forgotten by their fellows. It is sooner said than done that they are subject to "barbed wire diseases"—that malady of the spirit which starts as simple listlessness and ends with such complete withdrawal from the life around them, that neurosis or psychosis is the final outcome.

The only preventive is that men shall have something to do with their minds and hands, some interest in life, and some feeling that people still remember them, still care about them. The best service that the organization renders is in its contact with prisoners as persons, in its efforts to find for a man just the thing he needs to give him interest in life and to keep his spirit strong.

Many persons wonder how help gets to Europe. The money is cabled from New York to Geneva, not sent by mail. The money is sent under permit granted by the United States Treasury department. Books are shipped in shipping space allotted by the Red Cross and the YMCA. Upon arrival of the money, reports and audited statements are received from Geneva. In addition, a cabled receipt can be obtained either from Geneva or from the telegraph office.

It has been estimated that probably 100,000 prisoners of war are held in Japan, of which a minority are Americans. These prisoners were in 45 camps proper—occupied China, the Philippines, Formosa, Indo-China, Manchuria, Thailand, Burma, Malaya, and Java.

It has been extremely difficult to work out arrangements for welfare work among these prisoners, due in part to the great geographical distance involved. The International Red Cross and War Prisoners' Aid of the YMCA have been undying in their efforts to send aid to prisoners in the Far East. Japan has permitted funds to be transmitted for the purchase of supplies for the camp. This purchase is effected in Japanese-held territory by Swedish and Swiss representatives of these two organizations.

Supplies have been shipped to the prisoners on both sailings of the diplomatic exchange ship Gripsholm, and have been received in the camp. It now appears as a possibility that a relief ship will ship between a Russian port and Japanese-held territory, carrying relief supplies sent from the United States and Canada to the U.S.S.R.

The Bookstore Is Essential

By Carol Rauch

Where would we go to drink cokes, get one) almond Hershey bar, wait for the cigarette man, and see the AST men if it were not for the Campus Book Store? We should all be very grateful to James E. (Jimmy) Morris, the manager, for furnishing us with all of these essential things.

The bookstore was first started in the basement of the women's gymnasium, and in 1930 was moved to McVey hall, where it resembled a library stack room. There was a very narrow aisle for students to stand in while they made their purchases, Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The house will be decorated with greens and Christmas tinsel and gifts will be exchanged by all members of the sorority. Pledges will have charge of decorating the Christmas tree.

Marie and Emily Jones, co-social chairmen, will make all further arrangements for the party.

Instead of following the customary tradition of inviting five needy children to the Christmas dinner, the money will be donated to the Lincoln Junior high school.

When Mr. Morris became the manager in 1931, many changes were made. He moved back some of the book shelves, put down a new floor covering, increased the variety of foodstuffs for sale, and bought a stock of stationery and school supplies. Since 1931, he has made yearly improvements by adding "color" machines, installing fluorescent lights, and building a fiction library. Last week he began selling tooth paste, soap, and underwear to the AST men stationed on the campus. Last week he installed a seat for "park-bench" philosophers.

We are wondering what will come next. Will it be a copy center with overstuffed chairs, thick carpets and soft music playing, or will it be the installation of a juke box and dance floor? Whatever it is, we are sure UK students will profit by it, as they have by every thing that Mr. Morris has done so far.

Dr. Pence Spaul of the mathematics department discussed "A Trip Through Kentucky Gardens" illustrated by floral prints at the meeting of the Campus club at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Union building.

Miss Ida Lee Turner, secretary to the Arts and Sciences college, was named president of the faculty and staff group; Miss Elizabeth Sloan, secretary to the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, was elected vice-president; and Miss Jane Earle Middleton, secretary to the College of Commerce, was named secretary-treasurer.

Dr. Alberta Server of the Commerce Languages department assisted in the club's program.

Knox And Berea Bow To 'Cats In Opening Basketball Meets

Reserve Strength Marks '45 Roster

With two victories against service teams behind them, Kentucky's Wildcats look like a good ball club, but the real tests are yet to come when they meet big-league college clubs like Ohio State and Notre Dame. That seems to be the consensus of opinion and speculation around the gym where the boys work out daily from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m.

Flashes of the long-shot brilliance that shined the 'Cats into their all-time 20-1 win-loss record last year came through Saturday night against Fort Knox in the play of Tingle and Parkerson. Groza, lanky center from Martin's Ferry, Ohio, performed ably Monday against Berea's Navy five. But Groza, 1-A in Army classification, is Coach Adolph Rupp's biggest headache, for he is uncertain how long he can keep the stellar center, Wilbur Schu, short on court practice because of football, played a hard, consistent game against Berea, excelling especially in following up and rebounding.

John Stough, 5'11 1/2" guard, played a hard, fast game against both opponents. Possible regulars later in the season are Bill Chambers and Jim Howe, late of the football team and still lacking practice. Rupp has played nearly every man on the squad in the tiffs against service clubs to give them experience and later in the season when Kentucky tackles more formidable opponents.

The Berea game, sparked by the yelling and defiance of the Navy V-12ers on the sidelines, was Kentucky's all the way, except for a few minutes in the second half when sailor Bob Lindsay scored seven straight points. Parker for the 'Cats played his usual light defensive game and credit for good performance goes also to big forward Wilbur Schu.

Parkerson scored the first Kentucky marker when the game was second, on a typical long-net-swing. Richard Glennon for Berea retaliated and Parkerson answered with a toss from mid-court which made it 4-2. Then Groza snatched Tingle's long miss for a crisp and followed it with a marker from the pivot spot, 8-2. A field goal and a free throw by Berea brought it to 8-5 before the Wildcats combined to push through twelve more points, six of them on neat rebounds by Schu, plus two on Parkerson's long shot and two on Tingle's rebound.

Parker replaced Tingle, and Groza and Schu put through crisp, well-holding Berea to one field goal, making the score 24-10. Campbell and Stough and Tingle replaced Groza, Stough and Parker as Lindsay tossed in a free one for the sailors, making it 24-11. Another gratis loss by Campbell, and a third free throw by Berea brought it to 24-12. Tingle tossed in a long one, and followed it by another on a way-down-the-court

From The Bleachers

By Betty Tevis

A few minutes before game time, Alex John Groza, big center who has been called better-than-Brannum, hopped off the train and announced to Coach Adolph Rupp that he had been classified 1-A. Groza will play in the next few games, but will probably be replaced in the line-up by Sparkman or Campbell, both of whom looked more than adequate in the season's opening two games. Groza, taller than Brannum, has been a strong man in the 'Cat practice sessions, and many writers had talked about him "off the record" as another Kentucky All-American.

Two former Wildcat All-Americans were present to see Kentucky's wallop Fort Knox. French DeMoisey, now superintendent of the homes of reform at Greendale, refereed the game. DeMoisey, brother of Truitt who was a 'Cat pivot last year before entering the Marines, was a center in '34. The other big name was Andy Anderson, now an insurance executive, who watched calmly from the second row. Anderson was a teammate, in 1935, of Leroy (Big Boy) Edwards, all-time basketball number two—second only to Stanford's immortal Hank Lusetti.

Judging from the "cager beaver" playing of almost every man in the season's opener, and from the three-deep contenders for every position on the squad, there must exist a keen competition for those five posts among the twenty-odd men on Rupp's 1944-45 roster. That competition will probably be keener as the season progresses and the footballers gain more experience. Probably too there will be frequent shifts in the lineup.

The rumors have been flying fast, but here is the official statement: Tom Mosley has been "dismissed from the squad for disciplinary purposes."

Berea's coach told Kentucky's Adolph Rupp after the game that his boys played the best game they would turn in all season. It was the encounter the Navy boys had been waiting for—and they fought with a determination and spirit that earned the praise even of the Wildcat team and fans. Six of the players were Kentuckians: Edgar Lewis and James Collier from Frankfort, James Parham from Fulton, Alphonse Stanczyk from Bridgeport, Howard Snider from Bridgeport, and Robert Berry from Maysville.

Did You Know It's Yours?

By Mildred Long

To many students in Commerce, Engineering, or Home Ec., or Language—outside the Journalism department, the Kentucky Kernel is a page or two of campus news which they take from their postoffice boxes every Friday morning, skim lightly and discard. Although your college page is larger than most of the results weekly newspapers in Kentucky's small towns, few students realize what a prosperous business they own. And you students do own The Kernel. The entire $80,000 plant was bought and paid for by University students.

It's your paper—your way of expressing and forming opinions—your way of keeping the alumni informed as to what's going on here. The circulation is large. Besides the campus population, some 5,000 grads receive it regularly, and each week copies are mailed to many high schools, colleges, and libraries in the state. In a quarter's edition of the paper go enough stories of your activities, your plans, your names, to fill a book.

Although The Kernel is published by and benefits the Journalism department, it attempts to print in the best newspaper style, and with the highest possible standards, what you want to read. It has found that the intellectual level of the average newspaper reader is that of a 12-

Wanna Stop That Habit?

By Myrtle Weathers

It really might be easy to stop smoking cigarettes, or even a pipe, if you are tired of haunting various stores for tobacco. For, according to an Associated Press writer, directions for a cure of smoking were outlined in 1917 by the Bureau of Moral and Hygiene Education.

One quick cure was about 19 cents worth of gentian, sassafras, lovage, licorice, flag and marshmallow, mixed and chewed like gum. Or you could smoke dry tea in a clean pipe, or steep fern in a clay pipe.

The immersion school was not quite a rapid cure, because it puts you on a 14-day schedule. Each night you were to fill the bathtub half full of warm water, wrap lightly in a sheet, and climb in. Then you turn on the hot water until the tub is very warm, and stick it out for 20 steaming minutes.

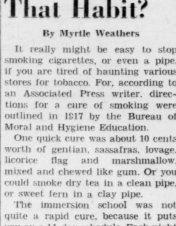

But this isn't all the cure. Minute instructions were given to let all the water run out of the tub, rise slowly and let yourself "drip off," dry with a heavy, turkish towel, and go to bed under very light covers.

Then there is the cure which, besides eliminating the desire for tobacco, will also give "quick relief for all forms of nervousness." Just 10 cents worth of chamomile, made into a tea and taken at meals, will do the trick.

But, when you aren't within distance of a cup of tea, it is advisable to carry with you a little box of pulverized ginger and take a pinch, whenever other people's smoke seems to tempt you.

We could ask, is it worth it all? Which is more vital to us—our health, (which we would certainly lose trying those cures) or our throats?

That Famous Automatic Pilot

Ever wonder what an automatic pilot looks like? Well, here's one of the two-unit contraptions being inspected by Navy Capt. Joseph S. Evans at General Electric's Schenectady, N. Y., plant under the guidance of aeronautics and marine engineer C. M. Young. The pilot sets the course and the "pilot" does the work. So? Sometimes.

Are You An Ole-Timer Yet?

By Jansita Hendry

Freshmen, here's your answer as to when you will be considered an ole-timer on the campus. The days will come when you cease to be looked down upon by glowering upperclassmen as green, ignorant, hardy people to be merely stumbled over. Confidently, it's a long, hard process. So, if you are still feeling mighty glum about the whole situation, it's normal and get a case for an psychologist, yet.

One of the very first signs of "becoming-in-the-know" is, no less, than realizing that every one of those beloved, and very expensive, possessions called books are not to be carried to class every day. Some professors do require it, but a valuable hint is to discover who those professors are, thereby, lightening some of that burden you lug around all day.

Some of the things that may seem trivial to you now, but will give you peace and assurance later, are such things as: recognizing pins and insignias of different kinds; knowing the B.M. and B.W.O.C.; when to wear those sloppy clothes; and when to lounge in the grill. After all, some hours are for classes. You'll stop asking upperclassmen for room numbers in the halls of learning. When you become a veteran, you no longer look for room numbers, you just naturally know where the room is from using it so often.

A last very important sign of an ole-timer is the realization that the library is for dates, a little studying and fine sleeping quarters.

And then, my child, you are a veteran.

It can't pay for the midnight oil that is burned on Wednesday night, or the worry wrinkles caused, if they did not get a tremendous kick out of getting The Kernel out.

It's your Kernel... read it!
