Body Similar To Old Senate Is Established

Reorganization of the University's administrative set-up has been announced for the second time within two years.

The report of Dr. Herman L. Donovan, president of the University, to the Board of Trustees, dated April 6, outlined a plan intended to draw the demarcation line more clearly between administrative and educational policy-making functions.

The plan has been approved and adopted by the Board.

Changes To Enlarge Faculty Present alterations of the administrative organizations recall those made in the spring of 1941, when the board reported that "the record-breaking changes caused excitement and reversion after a period of adjustment."

The 1941 plan abolished the student Senate and established in its place a faculty composed of the president, committee members, the University deans of all colleges, dean of the graduate school, director of the summer school, and deans of men and women.

This reorganization was adopted despite some student and faculty opposition and has been in effect since.

Outlined By Committee Outlined by a special committee of 15 members appointed in September to investigate the University's administrative organization, the new plan will expand the Faculty to include certain ex-officio members and also forty persons of various ranks and positions or above who shall be elected by the professional staff.

According to Dr. Donovan, "it is desired that the membership of the Faculty be composed of both the administrator and the teacher. The purpose of the reorganization is to give administrators the opportunity to work together for the welfare of the institution."

Objective of the proposed organization, as set forth in the committee's report, is to make possible an effective formulation of basic policies and a clear definition of functions. In order that the fundamental purposes of the University may be best achieved.

Functions Separated First, administrative or executive functions are separated as completely as possible from educational policy-making.

All administrative and executive functions, including all budgetary, financial and business matters and including the authority to suspend the University staff of the rank of assistant professor or higher.

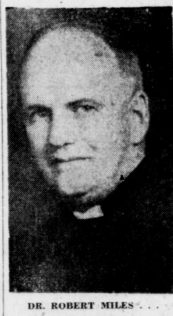

Educational policy-making, on the other hand, is made the responsibility of the University Faculty. It is to be composed of both administrative officials and a number of elected members of the instructional staff of the rank of assistant professor or higher.

"It has seemed wise to enlarge the membership of the present Faculty in order that the administration and staff may be kept in closer touch with each other, in order that the fullest advantage may be taken of the wisdom and special abilities of members of the instructional staff, in order to insure the largest amount of coordination of the various colleges and divisions of the institution, and in order to promote the most cooperative and democratic administration of the University," the committee explains.

Membership of the Faculty will consist of the president, dean, dean of the graduate school, dean of each college, dean of men, dean of women, registrar, compiler, director of extension libraries, president of the Student Government, and association, seven representatives of literature, philosophy, and arts, seven of social studies, four of biological sciences, one of athletics, one of military science, seven of agriculture, one of home economics, five of engineering, one of law, three of education, and three of commerce.

Provision is also made for a University Assembly which shall consist of all officers and employees of the institution. This body will have no administrative or legislative powers, but will serve as a medium of expression for all members of the staff, regardless of rank, and will offer to the president an opportunity to address all employees.

All changes will become effective September 24, 1943, the opening of the fall quarter.

DR. ROBERT MILES

... will be the first speaker in the YM-YWCA forum series.

LOGIC DISCUSSED BY DR. KUIPERS

Logic with regard to its place and function among the sciences and philosophy was discussed by Dr. John Kuipers, head of the philosophy department, Tuesday night in the second lecture in the series by outstanding arts and sciences professors.

Attempting to show how the exact methods of mathematics have been applied to logic, Dr. Kuipers asserted that logic in its modern form is largely a product of the last 100 years.

He discussed some of the discoveries made in the field during this time.

Dr. Charles Barkenbus, professor of organic chemistry, will be the next speaker in the series when he lectures on "Particles of Matter: An Inquiry Into the Nature of Understanding of Nature," on Thursday, April 22.

Ginocchio Named Head Announcer Of Radio Studios

Betty Anne Ginocchio, arts and sciences freshman from Lexington, has been named head announcer of the University radio studios. She replaces Lewis Savin.

Betty Anne is the first woman ever to hold the position of head announcer at the studios.

She started performing on the University station while she was a freshman at University high school. Her activities have included acting, engineering, producing, recording, and script writing, all in addition to announcing.

Are You Capable Of Opinion?

Dear Students:

This is the first mention we have made of the fact that The Kernel is under new management. We purposely made no statement of an editorial policy when we took over the reins, as we knew that such an editorial would be quickly tossed aside by readers.

But after three weeks of sitting in the front office directing the manufacture of the "student" newspaper, we have begun to wonder if the paper and the opportunity for expression in it belongs exclusively to Kernel staff members or to the student body as a whole.

Former editors had told us that the way to sit a student opinion was to write on controversial issues. We began our quest for reaction with an editorial on the Student War Fund. There was no money in it. What was to be done? Nothing, according to the lack of comment which we received.

"Are We Worthy Of This Country?" we asked in another article. We pointed out that contributions of time and effort toward the war effort were negligible on the campus. Students accepted the fact by their silence.

It has always been the policy of The Kernel to be a clearing house for student opinion. We thought it unnecessary to reiterate this stand. We are wide open to suggestion and enthusiastically willing to print any letters which might come to us.

The last communication The Kernel had from a student was on February 16 when Givens Dixon protested against a big name band. We had had letters since then, but it is interesting to note that they have all come from servicemen. It seems that a man must go out and fight for freedom of speech and the press before he begins to appreciate them.

We assure you that this will be our last harangue on the subject. Too much wordage on the theme might have the devastating effect of awakening somnolent student minds to the point where they would begin to have opinions.

The Editor.

College Credit Problem To The Fore

Colleges should act now to prevent blanket granting of academic credit to men and women returning from the armed forces such as occurred after the last war, according to recommendations by the American Council on Education.

The Council, stating that part of the reason for this blanket credit granting was that the opponents to it during the war of 1914-18 had no alternative plan, offers concrete suggestions for giving legitimate credit for military training after this war.

The Council recommends that colleges and schools have their accrediting on the results of tests given by the United States Armed Forces Institute, the former Army Institute. These tests, the Council report points out, are now given not only to determine the results of correspondence courses given by the Institute itself, but also to measure all educational experience of the returning servicemen and women. The Institute is set up to send to any college which requests it, a complete "competency profile" or every person in the various branches of the Army and Navy. The Council recommends that colleges place returning students on the basis of these profiles, but judging entirely by the individual colleges' academic standards.

Included in the Council plan is a recommendation that colleges which allow credit for ROTC, physical training, hygiene, or free electives "may well consider granting direct credit" for military training received in these subjects.

This program, the Council report emphasizes, is proposed to meet the immediate needs of returning casualties, the number of which at present is "by no means negligible," and also to set up the machinery for coping with the larger problem of mass demobilization when the war is over.

The Council stresses that its plan is merely to provide factual information "to be utilized by the individual institutions in the light of their own policies with regard to placement and credit, and not to dictate to schools or colleges."

The Easter Parade Is Almost Here

We see by the papers that it's almost Easter. We didn't glean that information from the front page. We were informed of the approaching event by the columns of advertising tucked away in the society and sports sections.

The perennial display of Easter finery has made its appearance again.

But before we are moved to spending that last check from home on the latest fashion, looking so appealingly out at us from the newspaper columns, it would be well to read all the copy.

A prominent part of every advertisement is two lines reading simply "Buy War Savings Stamps and Bonds."

The clothing stores are as aware of the war effort as anyone else. Their desire is for us to buy only what we need, and to put what money we have left into the sacred investment in the world, the United States of America.

This month the entire attention is falling to the call for the second War Loan. The committee at the University has exceeded its $5000 quota for sales this year by over $1300. Their accounts must be closed by May 1.

We can do more, however. We have only begun to show that we are willing to sacrifice present pleasures for future ones, a small sacrifice indeed. If we spend our money wisely this spring we may not be among the best-dressed in the Easter parade, but we will have that warm feeling that comes with the knowledge that we have done our part.

University Is Now Prepared To Meet War-Time Changes

By Joseph E. Hutchinson

The University's education system has a new "officer" for the duration of the war, one that may be changed to meet any occasion.

Dr. Leo M. Chamberlain, Dean of the University and registrar, says that the new "officer" will enable the University to meet a decrease in enrollment or an increase in the number of soldiers coming to the campus.

The University started this quarter by wearing its educational "hair" up. This was by cutting down on the numbers of sections in some courses and the dropping of other courses entirely from different departments.

"The decrease in enrollment has made the long lists of sections unnecessary," Dr. Chamberlain says, referring to the courses offered in the schedule book for the fall quarter. "When the old schedule book was printed last summer, we could not foresee the changes which have since been made," he adds.

A student may find that some of his required courses have been or will be eliminated from his department. If he wishes, according to Dr. Chamberlain, he can take the courses by appointment with the professor who has the course or with the head of the department.

An upswing "offshore" has other advantages for the University. It permits the condensing in size of the departments not absolutely essential to the war effort, frees a number of classrooms and laboratories for soldier trainees on the campus, and advances when a professor goes to the armed services.

"A number of the departments use some of their classrooms and laboratories only once or twice a day," Dr. Chamberlain explains. "By cutting the number of sections,

Sartorial Elegance Or Not?

What The Boys Have To Say About The Girls Left Behind

By Mary Lyle

"I Johnny comes marching home!"

There have been several articles on how girls feel about the boys leaving the campus. It is interesting now to know how those boys feel about leaving the girls on the campus.

Jack Casner, senior in education and in advanced ROTC, says that the question of how the girl should act socially depends entirely on their relationship, whether they are planning to get married or are just dating steadily.

Omar Ratliff, senior in arts and sciences and also in advanced ROTC, says he won't worry too much about the girl he leaves behind if he has her undivided attention before he leaves, and if she thinks about him morning, noon, and night. He doesn't expect a letter a day, though, since he dislikes writing himself.

Neither of the boys objected to girls getting more education than themselves. Jack said she might need it later in life, so he doesn't mind if she goes ahead and gets her master's degree. "But she shouldn't try her extra scholastic education to try to dominate the home."

Omar believes that a good cultural education will help the atmosphere of a home. "It's nice to know your wife could work if it half way through it."

WISE . . . and otherwise

By BOB AMMONS

We realize, of course, that the government is pretty well occupied these days. What with the war, rationing, and Clara Booth Luce, it is obvious that Washington pretty near has its hands full. But just the same, we think there is a serious domestic problem which must have action at once—drastic, unflinching action.

We mean the moron joke situation.

In all the welter of confusion which grips this nation today, one fact stands out in stark emphasis: the moron jokes have got to go.

Like Japanese beetles, seven-year locusts, and Mississippi river floods, these damned intervals upon this nation a mania of Cate Savings. And then, O friends, the country suffers the comments of the damned until some act of God brings the plague to an end. Once it is Knock Knock, Who's There? then it was "handies," with such nifty little finger dramas as "Quintuplets Taking a Shower" and its sequel, "One of them, Bending Over for the Soap."

Two years ago it was Confucius Say.

Now, far be it from us to object to anyone having fun; but folks, after about two or three weeks these spears of Cate Savings cease to be funny. They drag on and on until they are no longer whimsical but merely absurd. It eventually comes to the point where people begin telling Confucius Say's just to will smirk when he sees such monstrosities as this in last Sunday's Courier-Journal:

Joe Moron was in town the other day for three weeks. He's mad at his neighbor and wants to drive a Greyhound bus.

Or this:

Young Cuthbert Moron has bought a new straddler so he can go to high school.

Or this:

Mostly Moron hasn't washed his face for three weeks. He's mad at his neighbor and wants to give him a dirty look.

A couple of years ago, some savior of his country put an end to the Confucius Say epidemic by providing the wearied listener with a handy come-back: "You know what Confucius' brother said? Confucius talk too damn much." We have hope that soon someone will think up a moron squelcher like that. If not, we guess we'll just have to wait until the middle listeners become incensed enough to wreak physical vengeance on the narrator, and thus put an end to moron jokes by ending the moron jokes.

Just how things will come out, we cannot say, but we are certain, beyond a particle of doubt, that the day of the moron joke is past. We know that because we have one infallible bit of evidence: the professors have started telling them.

What Goes On There . . .

By JANET EDWARDS

Now that the co-eds on the University of Tennessee campus have moved into the fraternity houses some big changes have been made in both looks and management of the previous homes of male students. The ping-pong and pool tables in the Phi Sigma house have suddenly acquired ruffles and a most unfamiliar scent of gardenias is exceedingly noticeable.

"The Virginia Tech" sends the French formula for writing love letters. "Begin without knowing what you are going to say, and end without knowing what you have said."

According to a West Virginia columnist, war brings in new customs even in rushing. One severely served rushes chewing gum at a recent party, but it was reported that they lost their prospective pledges to the group that put butter on their sandwiches.

A professor at Western Reserve University in Cleveland once said: "Sixteen had bought none; eleven had bought one; ten had bought two; and only three had bought three."

"The Daily Athenaeum" informs us that a military uniform appeals to the feminine eye. Military clothes are cut and made according to standard sizes, and a man in uniform usually carries himself straight and tall—(At least he should!). Anyway whatever the reason, it is generally admitted that "you can't say no to a soldier," and there is a deafening roar of women's voices screaming, "Who wants to?"

Temple University gives us a new name for the Nazi invaders of the French capital: "Parasites."

A campus poll at Sarah Lawrence College discovered that although nearly all women students predicted clothes rationing in the future, the average girl was not purchasing any more than usual in the line of clothing to the question: "How many pairs of shoes have you bought since January?" The results showed that out of the forty girls,

"I'm telling you out ten minutes early, but go quietly so as not to awaken the other classes."

A military review in the Auburn Cadet Corps, the Marine Corps Cadets, and the Naval Aviation Cadets, participated was held before the ambassador made his speech.

Revenge was sweet when initiates of Beta Omega Sigma were forced to entertain laughing co-eds and remittance actives for an hour at Duke University, and the thirty initiates were put through a tough 60 minutes. After running a mile and a half course during which time motorized actives pelled them with eggs, the unfortunate pledges began a consumption of meringue pie, most of which went into the eyes and nose!

Pastel Shades Ban Sleepers

By Dorothy Jack Ecklar

"My lord, I'll never be able to go to sleep in this class now. That hideous yellow border around the blackboard would keep any fellow awake!"

"Zoots! Who had a nightmare and dreamed this idea up?"

"Gad! To think that we have to look at that awful green color . . . and just before lunch, too."

Such were the comments of students upon entering the classrooms in Frazer Hall after redecoration in the building. However, after one has stayed in a room for a while, he realizes how truly relaxing the color of the room is, as well as a promoter in helping him to maintain attentiveness to class discussions and lectures.

The dark, gloomy palk, classrooms, and offices have become alive with color and are now bright, cheery, pleasant, meeting places.

Pastels Dominate

Each room is painted in a different color . . . all pastels. One room is blue with red borders around the blackboards; another is pale green with yellow borders; another is peach with dark blue blackboard borders; and still another has pale yellow walls combined with green.

A great improvement has been made to Fraze hall where history, sociology, philosophy, and physical education classes are held, and many students have suggested that it wouldn't be bad for a number of other buildings on the campus to have their "faces lifted."

Every branch of the Armed Services uses the telephone. One of a series, Submarine. Five thousand miles from home Bill — Torpedoman — is keeping a date. Weeks of waiting, days of watching, hours of hiding under the sea, all for the moment when he reports over his wartime telephone, "All tubes ready, sir!" There'll be other dates, Bill—better ones—in the kind of world you're fighting for.

'Cats Bow To Vandy Twice As Baseball Season Opens

Kentucky Defeats Due To Wildness

Vanderbilt's flashy Commodore swept their two game Southeastern Conference series with Kentucky's Wildcats at Nashville Friday and Saturday by scores of 11-3 and 10-4.

Defeat for the Kentucky nine was due to the wildness of the pitchers, the loose fielding of the infielders and outfielders, and the inability of the batters to connect in the clutch.

In the first frame the Commodore jumped on Vernon Jones for five rallies, enough to win the ball game. Although Jones fanned ten Commodores, he walked nine ten and was charged with four wild pitches.

Walters led Vanderbilt's twelve-hit attack by getting four for four. He was closely followed by first baseman Mills, who collected three hits in five tries.

The boys from the Bluegrass had little success in connecting with the slants of lanky Ed Graham. Parker and Bauer collected five of the six hits that Graham allowed, with Parker showing the way with three safeties. Six 'Cats were struckout victims and two received free passes to first.

Although the 'Cats were only charged with three errors, their defensive play was very ragged.

In the second game, as in the first, Vanderbilt's supremacy at the plate and on the mound was the deciding factor in their 10-4 victory.

Ryan Ballenger razzed the 'Cats to four widely scattered hits. However, he often ran into streaks of wildness, as evidenced by the seven base on balls and one hit batsman that he allowed.

Bob Herbert, who worked on the hill for Kentucky, was wild and sluggish solidly in the clutch. He was nipped for eight hits and allowed eight base on balls.

Catcher Tommy Owens was the sparkplug of the Commodore's attack, knocking in five runs. He started the fireworks in the opening round by doubling to score Seoby and Clark. He also punched in runs in the fourth and ninth. Captain Clark and Bill Brynagton also displayed potency at the plate, each collecting two hits.

The 'Cats' four hits were equally divided among Bauer, V. Jones, Cutchin, and Parker.

SPORT TALK

By Stuart Snyder

First-sacker Milt Tocco was elected captain of the baseballers in Nashville, although he was absent on the trip. One of the most potent anti-siders on the team, Tocco bats left-handed but throws right-handed, being unusual in this respect because nearly all first basemen are lefties. Coach Bernie Shively said that he expects him to bolster greatly the nine's defense.

After the double defeat at the hands of the Vanderbilt Commodore, Coach Shively is of the opinion the Wildcats need plenty of fielding practice, and the pitchers plenty of work on control.

Elmer Noah Mullins, hot corner guard, or Gus Green, outfielder, will assume catching chores because Ace Parker suffered an arm injury during basketball season, which lessens his effectiveness behind the plate. Parker will be moved to the outfield.

A game is scheduled today at two o'clock with Darnell hospital of Danville, and tomorrow with the Fort Knox aggregation. Fort Knox is expected to be very strong this year because they have plenty of professionals from which to select.

Because of transportation difficulties no games will be played with Ohio State this season, and Eastern State Teachers college has cancelled its games because of lack of players. Marshall will replace Tennessee on the schedule, appearing here next Friday and Saturday.

contributions in his book to the historical records of Lexington for he has recalled in a charming way happenings of the early nineties when he and men of his type pioneered in the organization of medical societies, building hospitals, and dared to use anti-toxines, amputations and the X-ray. These were days of marvelous experimentation and it took men of brain and consecration to carry them through.

LETTER WRITTEN BY 'HOOT' COMBS

Former Student Tells Of Comrades

A letter concerning former University students who had died on the field of battle in North Africa was received recently from Lieut. Carl 'Hoot' Combs by the Lexington Herald-Leader.

Combs, a football and basketball star while a student at the University, told of a visit to the graves of his fallen friends.

"Yesterday, I visited the cemetery in the city of Oran and found the graves of some of my classmates of the class of 1941," he wrote. "I had read about the deaths of George Lawrence and John Cole in an issue of a weekly American magazine, but I found the grave of one other classmate whose death I hadn't heard about."

"It was the grave of Virgil Beasley, who graduated from the law school there at the University and got his commission and, in the same week, his orders to report to the army."

"George and Virgil lie side by side along the other fallen comrade in a beautiful cemetery on the southern outskirts of the city of Oran," he explained.

A game is scheduled today at two o'clock with Darnell hospital of Danville, and tomorrow with the Fort Knox aggregation. Fort Knox is expected to be very strong this year because they have plenty of professionals from which to select.

Because of transportation difficulties no games will be played with Ohio State this season, and Eastern State Teachers college has cancelled its games because of lack of players. Marshall will replace Tennessee on the schedule, appearing here next Friday and Saturday.

The preface was written by the author. If it had not been so, another writer would have paid tribute to Dr. Pryor in far more generous terms. He really deserves much more than he has given himself. His thoughts are happy ones as he drifts along in his story but the bravery with which he faced those earlier days and the sacrifice he made were destined to bring rewards of highest merit and England, Germany, Italy and France as well as many learned societies paid tribute to his work. When he was invited to present his paper abroad, fortunately he could accept, and many of his travel days came with that well earned leisure after he retired. His travel stories are interesting and given in detail.

A gentleman of the old school and of the modern school, living much more fully than many of his contemporaries each year of his life, he has done a worthy deed in putting his memoirs to paper and while this review is better by far than the subject deserves it is written and published in the Kentucky Kernel with pride and pleasure in the opportunity. —MARGUERITE McLAUGHLIN
