Welcome to the

CHATTAHOOCHEE National Forest GEORGIA

Welcome to Your National Forest

The Chattahoochee National Forest is a part of the National Forest System, managed by the U.S. Forest Service. It is located in the southeastern part of Georgia, and is one of the largest National Forests in the state. The forest is home to a wide variety of plant and animal life, and is a popular destination for outdoor recreation.

The forest is divided into several management units, each with its own specific goals and objectives. These units include the Chattahoochee River, the Tallapoosa River, and the Flint River. Each unit is managed to provide a balance of timber production, wildlife habitat, and recreational opportunities.

Management

The U.S. Forest Service manages the Chattahoochee National Forest in accordance with the National Forest Management Act. This act requires the Forest Service to develop and implement a management plan for each National Forest, which outlines the forest's long-term goals and objectives.

The management plan for the Chattahoochee National Forest is based on a variety of factors, including the forest's location, size, and resources. The plan also takes into account the needs of the local community and the state of Georgia.
