Dear Bob:

Forwarded herewith is a resume of my latest paper. The locale is near a little town of Castleton on the east bank of the Hudson, the time, last Friday, & the temperature at 5th. According to the State Trooper, I was curled up sleeping on the shoulder of the road (infantile regression.) The next day I was taken before a justice of peace & sentenced to 30 days. All of which is old hat & scarcely noteworthy. However, who knows but that I may yet establish some sort of record for stamina or determine the boundary of judicial patience.

Incidentally, I didn't even catch a cold from my ab fresco nights. It appears that I am going to survive
