Congress to receive Bush's $1.23 trillion budget for '91

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush prepared to send Congress a $1.23 trillion 1991 spending plan yesterday that his budget director said contains no general tax increase and which he predicted will be "criticized unfairly" on Capitol Hill.

BUSH

With many details already known about the budget, which will be released today, Democratic lawmakers are complaining that it fails to address the deficit seriously and that its defense cuts are too timid. But yesterday White House Budget Director Richard Darman blasted what he said was "an awful lot of hypocrisy" and "posturing" by lawmakers about the administration's plans.

"We're about to start an annual ritual, which is regrettable," Darman said. "Our budget will be criticized unfairly. People ought to sit down and do serious work."

The spending plan, for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1, claims to reduce next year's shortfall by $36.5 billion, cutting it to $63.1 billion, according to officials who spoke on condition they not be identified.

The savings include $13.3 billion in minor new taxes and fees, and cuts in defense and domestic programs, the sources have said. The $63.1 billion deficit falls just below the $64 billion ceiling required by the Gramm-Rudman balanced-budget law.

It will be the smallest shortfall proposed by a president since President Reagan sent his first spending blueprint to Capitol Hill in March 1981, when his budget for fiscal 1982 contained a $45 billion gap.

But Democrats say that Bush's budget relies on unrealistic optimistic assumptions about economic performance, such as the spending plan's expected estimate that the economy will grow by about 2.6 percent this year.

That drives up the amount of revenues the administration can project collecting and makes the amount of needed deficit reduction appear smaller.

Critics also say that Bush's $303.3 billion defense spending proposal — a 2 percent cut when compared to the costs of inflation — is too high considering the political and social changes in Eastern Europe.

Senate Budget Committee Chairman James Sasser, D-Tenn., predicted "a very chilly and negative reception on the Hill" for Bush's spending plan.

"It's clear the administration is still not serious about deficit reduction," he said last week. "Their spending priorities are misdirected. And they still are directing too much to defense."

"The bottom line for everyone to ask is, 'Is it real, is it fair, is it balanced?'" House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif., told reporters Friday. "He's

Lexington fire officials investigating cause of fire in M.I. King elevator

By RHONA BOWLES
Contributing Writer

Lexington fire officials are investigating a small fire that occurred early Friday morning in an elevator in Margaret I. King Library.

The fire started in the ceiling of an elevator in the library's south wing, according to Ralph Derickson, director of the UK News Bureau.

There was "some sort of material in the grating that caught fire, burnt through the plastic grating and fell to the tile floor," Derickson said. No one was injured in the fire

"When the door opened ... I took the extinguisher and used it and put out the fire."

Alvaro Zuniga, sophomore music major that caused a few hundred dollars worth of damages, Derickson said.

The Lexington Fayette-Urban County Government Division of Fire Arson Investigation Unit is investigating the fire as a possible arson incident, Derickson said. The fire was discovered around 8:30 by Alvaro Zuniga, who was waiting for the elevator.

"When the door opened I saw smoke and then the fire. I took the extinguisher and used it and put out the fire," said Zuniga, a sophomore music major who works in the library's deli.

Zuniga said he extinguished the fire by the time the fire department arrived.

"It was a small fire," he said. "I used the sprayer for about two or three seconds."

The building was evacuated for about 15 minutes, according to UK Police Chief Wilson H. McComas.

UK presidential search may decide Lohman's political future

By C.A. DUANE BONIFER
Editor in Chief

Last Wednesday night former Student Government President Cyndi Weaver returned to tell the SGA Senate that the decision to exclude Sean Lohman from UK's presidential search committee was a threat to student rights.

By not including the student body president in the search, Weaver said that the student body's political clout with administrators could be significantly reduced.

But not only students stand to lose from the decision — so does SGA President Sean Lohman.

Prior to last Tuesday's Board of Trustees meeting, Lohman appeared to be politically invincible, as far as campus politicians go. He had handily won last year's SGA election and no strong opposition had surfaced this year, yet.

However, Board of Trustees Chairperson Foster Ockerman's decision to exclude Lohman from the presidential search committee, decreased the SGA president's political stature significantly, opening the door for someone to seriously challenge him for the presidency later this spring.

Although Lohman's anti-Wilkinson stance has won approval with some campus leaders, many UK students probably would support an SGA presidential candidate who has a better relationship with the Governor's Mansion and the Wilkinson's appointees on UK's board.

Lohman has been a strong advocate of student rights and against those who he's perceived to violate them. But up to this point, Lohman has not been terribly successful with the administration and the governor.

Lohman organized a rally to keep then-UK President David Roselle last semester, but even a crowd of more than 400 people could not persuade a stubborn governor to commit to more funding to higher education.

And last week, Lohman failed to secure a spot on the presidential search committee, as a three-year medical student with no UK undergraduate experience was chosen over him.

Any popular student leader, preferably one from the greek system who has a lot of financial support, at this point could wage a strong battle against Lohman in March.

Lohman received the endorsement of the Greek Political Association last spring, but his fraternity — Phi Kappa Psi — is relatively small and is still rather young.

Lohman's opposition could claim that his criticism of Wilkinson has done more to damage UK students with the governor than advance their causes.

And should Weithington become UK's president — which appears to be the case — a candidate could claim that Lohman destroyed any 'Temptation' expected to stir little controversy on campus

When Martin Scorsese's "The Last Temptation of Christ" was released in August 1988, it was met with a wave of protests, demonstrations and petitions that caused the film's distributor to pull it from many of the nation's movie theaters.

The film will make its big-screen debut in Lexington at the Worsham Theatre Wednesday night, but few picketers are expected.

The film is part of the UK Student Activities Board spring cinema schedule.

The Worsham Theatre may be the first theater in Kentucky to show the film, according to SAB President and acting Cinema Chairman Michael Bowling.

Universal Studios could not be reached to confirm that fact.

Bowling said he doesn't think the film will provoke the kind of heated response it generated when it was first released.

"I really haven't heard a word about it," Bowling said. "It kind of surprised me. But I'm sure that some people will express an opinion before too long."

Bowling said he believes that the tempest has died down because the film has appeared on cable televi-

Montana named MVP as '49ers win 4th Super Bowl

By DAVE GOLDBERG
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Joe Montana and the San Francisco 49ers proved yesterday that they have just one competitor — history.

In the most dominant performance ever at a Super Bowl, the 49ers by scoring the most points ever routed the Denver Broncos 55-10 to become the first repeat NFL champion in a decade and tie the Pittsburgh Steelers as a pinnacle of Super Bowl perfection with wins in four attempts.

Montana had five touchdown passes, three to Jerry Rice, breaking a Super Bowl record for TD passes on a day in which he also set a record with 13-straight completions.

He also set five Super Bowl career records, including his third Super Bowl MVP award. Montana, completing 22 of 29 passes for 297 yards, left the game with nearly 11 minutes to play.

In four Super Bowls he has thrown 11 touchdowns and no interceptions.

For Denver quarterback John Elway, it was a day of futility, ending with his third Super Bowl defeat. He missed eight of his first 10 passes and was intercepted twice and fumbled once and finished the day 10 of 26 for 108 yards.

By halftime, San Francisco led 27-3 and the Broncos were destined to tie the Minnesota Vikings Super Bowl record of no wins and four losses.

No. 13 Gym Kats upset Friday by West Virginia

By JONATHAN MILLER
Staff Writer

The UK gymnastics team was upset by the West Virginia Mountaineers at Memorial Coliseum Saturday night.

The Mountaineers, ranked 17th in the nation, edged the 13th-ranked Wildcats 182-15-182.10.

The Wildcats suffered from falls on the balance beam and had to do without the services of senior Cindy Jasper.

Jasper, a senior, sprained a finger last week during practice and had to miss Saturday's meet.

"We would've done much better if Cindy was able to compete," said UK junior Donna Oeffinger.

UK's one mistake came when freshman Tricia Wills fell off of the balance beam.

West Virginia's Kim Ruppert won first place on the balance beam, the only event she entered, with a score of 9.40. The Mountaineers outscored the Wildcats on the beam 45.40-44.20.

"We came into this match emotionally flat after losing to (third-ranked) Florida," said UK coach Leah Little.

The Mountaineers' Maureen Poppmann tied Wisniewski for first place on the vault with a 9.55 score. The Mountaineers edged the Wildcats in that event, 46.3-46.1.

Sophomore Aime Winn led the Wildcats on the parallel bars with a score of 9.5. UK won the event by outscoring the Mountaineers 45.6-44.8.

Cats beat Ole Miss despite ice cold start in the first half when they blew an early 13-point lead.

"The place where we got hurt was the 15 turnovers in the first half," Murphy said. "All we had to do was play a little better in the first half and we would have had a lead to play with."

"And then the game would have been totally different."

UK senior guard Derrick Miller, the Wildcats' leading scorer, was as cold as any of his teammates. He hit only 6 of 18 field goal attempts, including 4-15 from 3-point range. But he kept shooting.

"It was just amazing the way that our shots, which were good shots, just would not fall in the first half," said Miller, who finished with 17 points. "I thought maybe that somebody had put a curse on our goal or something."

"The coach just told us to keep shooting the ball and that they would fall. And they did."

Coming into Saturday's game, Pitino devised a defensive scheme to limit the number of shots that All-America candidate Gerald Glass would take. The Cats double-teamed Glass every time he touched the ball.

UK held Glass to just 11 field goal attempts, but he still hit seven and scored 23 points. Glass also grabbed a game-high 15 rebounds.

"We knew we couldn't let him dominate the game like he can," said UK center Reggie Hanson, who scored 18 points, grabbed 11 rebounds, handed out five assists and made four steals. "We trapped him, in particular, every time he got the ball. Even with our defense concentrating on Glass, he such a great player that he scored over 20."

But with all eyes on Glass, the Cats forgot about freshman Joe Harvell. The 6-7 forward, who was averaging 10 points coming into the game, made UK pay for their forgetfulness.

Harvell scored the Rebels' first 17 points, including four 3-pointers, and paced his team to a 17-4 lead with 15:42 remaining in the first half. Harvell finished with a game-high 25 points.

"He was unbelievable," said UK forward John Pelphey, who scored nine points and grabbed seven rebounds. "We knew he was a good shooter, but not that good. He really hurt us bad."

Pitino and his staff received the biggest job. Graduate assistant coach Billy Donovan scouted Ole Miss and Harvell's 3-point shooting ability was not on the report.

"I turned to Billy the kid and said, 'Good job Billy,'" Pitino said. "He replied, 'He's taken only 14 3-pointers all year.' But I said 'You've got to anticipate that Bill.'" After trailing 23-12 with 13:53 left in the first half, the Cats went on a run. They scored the next 12 points to take a 24-23 lead with 9:15 remaining.

Keying the run for UK was point guard Sean Woods, who scored six of his eight points in the run. And Woods, who had started every game, did it coming off the bench.

"I was determined not to let (not starting) get me down," said Woods, who had four assists in only 22:31 of playing time. "I just came in and did the best I could. Hopefully, I will keep doing the things Coach (Pitino) wants me to do."

In the second half, the Cats built a four-point lead with 13:09 remaining, then scored the next 11 points to take a 65-50 lead with 9:50 left.

From that point on, Ole Miss never got closer than 13 points.

Harvell shocked UK with Rebels first 17

loose rebound at the Ole Miss end, smoothly driving through defenders and still at warp speed leaving from the paint, double-pumping and laying the ball in over two defenders.

There was Deron Feldhaus, scrambling with three Rebels for a loose ball, coming up with it, and getting rid of it to a teammate.

There was the scoreboard reading 24-23 in UK's favor.

The Scrambinos became the Scrambinos, and they never trailed again.

The game was a testament of Pitino's style and his team's heart. They showed everyone that a little talent and a lot of hard work will take you a long way.

"The way to negate the other team's rebounding is to make them react to your press," Pitino said. "We stayed at three different levels on the press."

The Scrambinos wound up with 41 deflections, a school record.

They forced 29 turnovers in the game, and capitalized on most of them.

They dismantled the Ole Miss offense. They put the stop on powerhouse Gerald "World Class" Glass, who had only six points in the first half.

The Rebels, during the Cats' first-half comeback, were completely taken out of their game. The tenacious press and swarming zone left them with bumbles, stumbles, misses and desperation fouls.

"We just did not handle the ball," Ole Miss coach Ed Murphy said. "We had a lot of problems with our receivers."

"They've got a good press. They are committed to that kind of basketball, and they are good at it."

Woods certainly proved to be the majority of the 24,102 screaming fans in Rupp Arena that he could "do it." When Woods entered the game, the Cats were facing a nine-point deficit. Six minutes later they were up 24-23.

During the chaos created by UK's press, Woods served as a controlling force.

"They have to be the generals on the court," Pitino said of Woods and fellow point guard Richie Farmer. "I don't care if they only get two points each, they are the leaders on the court."

"Their job is to make everyone else play better."

Woods and Farmer played well, but Woods showed why he has been the starting guard so far this season.

The Father's Son: After the first timeout, called by UK to regroup after Smokin' Joe bombed them, Allen Feldhaus was recognized on center court for his playing days at UK during the 1950s.

Then his son, Deron, resumed his playing in the '90s.

"I'm glad he's reached a point of consistency," Allen Feldhaus said of his son. "Used to, he seemed to have good nights and nights, and I think he's steady."

"I just enjoy watching him play."

Watching Deron Feldhaus play is enjoyable for anyone who likes to see a basketball player who will do whatever it takes to win.

Feldhaus was possibly the most stable player Saturday, as he banged and muscled for 21 points and 11 rebounds. Not flashy and rarely spectacular, Feldhaus lives and rebounds by a strong work ethic and sound basketball sense.

The Bottom Line: After the game, Pitino answered a general question about his squad's season.

"I'm just concerned with wins, period. Progress is victory at home, and then you take your lumps on the road."

UK presidential search may decide Lohman's political future

chances of having a good relationship with Wethington by voting against him for the interim presidency.

Lohman could counter by saying that he does not oppose Wethington, but allowing Wethington to be interim president hurt UK's ability to attract top candidates.

Lohman also could point to his good relationship with several state lawmakers, including Democratic Rep. Ernesto Scorsone, who represents UK.

Lohman also could claim that he was largely responsible for preventing an alleged plot by the state's university presidents to significantly raise tuition last fall.

University presidents asked the Council on Higher Education in June to come up with alternative ways to set tuition, and that was inferred by Lohman and other student government presidents as a plot to significantly raise tuition.

University presidents never attempted to raise tuition after the story was publicized, and Lohman claimed that his efforts to discourage them ensured that.

While Lohman may have had some influence on the university presidents, it is not entirely clear that he was solely responsible for stopping presidents from raising tuition.

Had presidents wanted to raise tuition, they probably would have done so in a summer CHE meeting when student leaders are less active.

Most SGA presidential candidates have made up their mind to run for office by Thanksgiving. At this point, no clear opposition to Lohman appears to have surfaced, which is an advantage for Lohman. But anyone who is willing to oppose Lohman and cozy up to Wilkinsons supporters might find some success in gathering support.

Jim Hill, the CHE student representative and a third-year law student, privately has been very critical of the way Lohman has acted during the presidential search.

Hill, who was appointed to the CHE by Wilkinson, has the political savvy and astuteness to advise a candidate against Lohman this spring without getting too close publicly to SGA.

Lohman's statements in the last week would appear to have ruined any chances of having a good relationship with Wilkinson and his allies.

In the past, Lohman usually has tried to mend his ways with political enemies, but a conciliatory attitude probably would hurt him at this point.

If Lohman is to prevent someone from defeating him this spring, he has to be strongly outspoken to the entire presidential search process, branding it a puppet committee that is susceptible to Wilkinson's political whims.

The next two months will determine Lohman's leadership quality as the president of UK's student body, and for someone who aspires to state politics, it also could determine his political career.

Bush to take '91 budget to Congress promised that kind of budget, but I think we're going to see something that's very different."

It is known that Bush will seek to trim $8.5 billion from projected growth of the Medicare program for the elderly and handicapped by cutting payments to doctors and hospitals, not by shrinking benefits to patients.

Other cuts are expected in agriculture spending and in payments to retired federal workers.

Bush's defense proposal — which includes some nuclear weapons spending by the Energy Department — is an increase over this year's $296.3 billion in outlays, or the funds that actually will be spent this year.

But the way budget deficits are calculated, the $303.3 billion proposal counts as about $4 billion in savings, the amount by which it lags behind inflation.

Darman said that over several years, military reductions could result in more than $200 billion in savings compared to earlier projections.

"What's unfortunate in this case is everybody's assuming that that's right this moment, and they plan to spend it 10 times over," he said.

Other details that official and congressional sources have provided about the budget include a proposal to gradually stop using the massive Social Security surpluses to make the overall federal deficit look smaller. It is the administration's answer to a plan by Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., to reduce the retirement system's surpluses by cutting the payroll tax.

Veto of China bill hurts U.S. policy, Chinese students

The Senate's decision Thursday to sustain President Bush's veto of a bill protecting Chinese students from deportation may mark a victory for Bush administration over the Democratic-dominated Congress, but it may prove costly in the long run for U.S. foreign policy.

Since the Beijing government ordered its troops to slaughter thousands of pro-democracy protesters June 4, the Bush administration's actions toward the Chinese leadership has not reflected a nation that is supposed to value human rights.

Rather, the Bush administration has been more concerned with securing current relations with the Chinese government than it has with putting diplomatic pressure on Beijing to grant greater freedoms to the pro-democracy forces.

The bill vetoed by Bush was designed to ensure that students in the United States would not be forced to return to China to possible political reprisals when their visas expire, and to allow them to work while in this country.

Bush publicly renewed his promise Thursday that the 40,000 Chinese students in the United States would be fully protected even without the legislation.

"No student, as long as I'm president, will be sent back," he said. "We will continue to urge China to respect the human rights of its citizens."

But many Chinese students at UK are understandably nervous about their future with Bush in the White House.

Republican Sen. John Chafee of Rhode Island told his colleagues Thursday that the president knows a good deal more about China than most senators.

Although Bush was the U.S. diplomat to China during the early 1970s, we wonder what he actually learned.

While "kowtowing" to Beijing may ensure that the United States has a strong relationship with the current Chinese leadership, how will Washington be received if the pro-democracy leadership comes to power. Then the United States truly would find itself in deep doo-doo.

City of crime

You never know who to trust in the modern world

Is it really safe to live in America these days? With all the crime that has been reported by the media a person needs to know more about protecting themselves. There is no way to get around it. Face it, crime is everywhere.

I remember one day in 1988 when one of Florida's worst serial killers, Ted Bundy, was granted life imprisonment by a Florida judge instead of the death penalty which he was originally sentenced. None of the Floridians could believe it and most were outraged. Later that year Bundy finally was executed.

The most recent sad story was the one that involved a father who was imprisoned seven years ago for setting his son on fire. The boy is now living a somewhat normal life with his mother, but his father has just recently been released for good behavior and all the work details that he did.

The boy is now 13 years old and has burns over most of his body. The father was required to relocate away from his wife and son.

His son held a news conference which was carried by CNN. During the news conference, he told reporters, "I never want to see my father, and I really cannot forgive him for what he did to me."

Can people really say that justice has been done in either of these cases? What is the use of putting the person back on the streets to commit another crime?

The whole thing may happen again. If a person commits a crime and then goes to prison for a certain amount of years, then gets off on parole for good behavior, has justice really been served?

Lexington Police Detective Pat Taylor said: "Each case should be evaluated on its own. When a person goes before the parole board, the person then has to go through a system of checks and balances. It is usually a 'yes' or 'no' answer, depending on the type of crime that is involved."

How can we be sure prisoners are rehabilitated? Some prisons have a military-type program that is supposed to be like the U.S. Army. Prisoners have to meet certain requirements in order to be in that program.

If a person is in the special "military" program at that particular prison, a prisoner committing a crime after being paroled knows that he has the same Spartan life-style to look forward to. Most prisoners try to avoid fights and things that would get them into trouble because they prefer the special programs to normal incarceration.

Special prison programs like the military programs may offer the prisoner a chance to be somewhere other than behind bars, but neither of them guarantee society that the person will not try something else. What can a person do to control crime in their area?

Detective Taylor said: "Establishing a neighborhood crime watch helps the police because the people who do the observing are usually the eyes and the ears for the police."

Taylor said that police need people to be more observant by getting a good description of the person and details of the situation.

Some neighborhoods and people in apartment buildings have a crime watch program in their area. They start by calling their local police station and the police will set up a day in which an officer will come and talk to the group of people about how they can start a crime watch program in their area.

Certain neighborhoods are lucky enough to have a guard gate with a guard on duty. Other neighborhoods have a security guard who drives around the neighborhood most of the night.

The only problem is "who watches the watchman." If a crime is committed, who says that it is not the security guard you're trusting to protect you and your belongings?

Or maybe I'm just paranoid.

Wally's Gang, UK Presidential Search Committee.

The Board of Trustees approved the 10-member search committee that will interview candidates for the UK presidency, and interim President Charles Wethington appears to have little to worry about. In addition to Board Chairman Foster Ockerman, four of the five trustees who were appointed to the committee were either appointed or reappointed to the board by Wilkinson. UK Student Government Association President Sean Lohman, who opposed Wethington being named interim president, was left off the search. The committee has promised an honest nationwide search, but how many potentially qualified applicants are going to buy that?

Teel Who? Teel Bruner.

Although he spent his undergraduate years in Danville, Ky., attending Centre College, and has been a UK medical student for three years, UK Board of Trustees Chairman Foster Ockerman felt that Teel Bruner was qualified to represent undergraduate interests on the presidential search committee. And George Bush said that Dan Quayle was qualified to be vice president, but no one really believed him, either.

Publish Or Perish. Tenure.

A group of theatre students met with College of Fine Arts Dean Richard Domek Friday morning over theatre professor Patrick Kagan-Moore being denied tenure. Although Kagan-Moore is popular among students, the group said that he might have been denied tenure because he was not published enough. While it is important for faculty to do research and be published, the controversy surrounding tenure should cause the University to rethink what its priorities should be in some areas: research or students.

That's Entertainment. Student Activities Board Cinema Committee.

One thing the Worsham Theatre has not been known for is showing a wide range of films. Most semesters the theater usually showed little more than second-run films at discount prices. But this semester, the list of films at the Worsham Theatre include "The Trouble With Harry," "Romero" and "Do The Right Thing." Playing this week is "The Last Temptation Of Christ," marking the first time the film will be shown in Kentucky.

Letters

French bread can never be rye

In Scandinavia around final exam time, student rate each other's preparedness by stating whether they are a "french bread" or a "rye bread" student. It sounds a little silly at first, but with a little investigation it makes good sense.

French bread in Scandinavia is mostly air. It does not take much effort to crush a whole loaf into the size of a golf ball. Rye bread, on the other hand is a very tough and sturdy loaf. I once took a freshly baked loaf and stood on it (with both feet) and it did not collapse. A loaf of french bread takes two to three hours to make. A loaf of Rye bread takes three to four days.

In the past couple of weeks I have been observing the biggest loaf of french bread I have ever seen since Jimmy Carter. That loaf is Sean Lohman. Lohman has been bad mouthing the Board of Trustees at the University of Kentucky for some time now. And I think it is time to stop Sean Lohman before he causes permanent damage. In the eyes of the Scandinavians, the trustees are "rye bread" people. One of Lohman's main ingredients is his ego, squeeze it out of him and there is nothing left. Since when does he, or any of the other students for that matter, know what it takes to be a university president? So far all we have heard is what Lohman wants, not what the university needs.

Lohman has only shown us how un diplomatic and insensitive he can be, to those very individuals who could teach him a great deal. In a time when UK is trying to open doors to education, Lohman is running around shutting them. Did Lohman and his gang ask us (the real student body) what we wanted before he started severing those delicate lines of communication? So what if Ockerman was appointed by Governor Wilkinson, he is a good man and a hard worker.

The people of the committee are very capable of selecting an excellent president for the university. Bolstering Lohman's ego by putting him on the search committee will only complicate things even more. To Ockerman's committee selection I say, "Amen!"

David Hasler is a Arts and Science sophomore.

Kernel Topic: The Superbowl

Yesterday America celebrated one of it's major holiday's — "Superbowl Sunday."

For American males — and some females — the Superbowl is a rite of passage. The first time you sit down with your father to watch the Superbowl, something changes in your relationship. You're "one of the guys." However, if you are supporting opposite teams, the change could be in your allowance.

The origin of the Superbowl is lost in mystery.

Some Americans believe that it started as a football game to advertise a national beer convention. It stimulated so much sales for the companies, they decided the National Football League should have it every year.

Another theory is that it goes back to an ancient Indian cult. The sects of the Indian religion each took an animal as its symbol. In the winter of each year they would get together, put on helmets and tripped one another. And that's how we get the game of football — the Superbowl which was their great gathering each year.

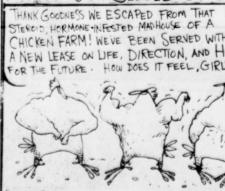

The Superbowl,

however, it came about, is now a phenomenon as big as New Kids on the Block. It has even spawned a sequel of sorts, The Budbowl. Who will win, Bud or Bud Light.

Scientists and researchers would do well to study the mystic of a game that can make people miss work, church or any appointment, to sit in front of a television and drink beer. Maybe the Superbowl with all its mystery is in some way the eighth wonder of the world.

Who knows? By the way, congratulations to the winning team.

'Last Temptation' causing little controversy on UK campus

tion and is available on video. Nevertheless, SAB has chosen to keep a low profile about the film by appointing Bowling as the film's sole spokesman. Most of the opposition to the film in 1988 came from Christian groups who were upset over Scorsese's interpretation of the life of Jesus Christ.

"The Last Temptation of Christ," Martin Scorsese's controversial film about Christ, will make its big-screen debut in Lexington this week at the Worsham.

But campus religious groups who oppose the film plan to ignore it this time in hope of not drawing any more attention to it. "I don't want to get into promotion because it fuels a controversy," said David Burton, Campus Crusade for Christ religious adviser. "I can't say that I like the idea very much and I have reasons for that. I think it's in very poor taste. Anytime you denigrate a religious figure you're going to have opposition." Twila Grene, Baptist Student Union religious adviser, is equally reticent to give the movie any exposure through loud protests. "We aren't concerned," Grene said. "It's not that good a movie. I'd rather not express an opinion about it. I think it's good to have the freedom to express opinion about something like this. But because of that it got more attention than was due." But not all campus religious organizations are opposed to the film. "I think that if a person as a director presents such a story, then it should be shown," said the Rev. Dan Noll, pastor of the Catholic Newman Center. "It has helped me and other people to appreciate what Christ said."

Bowling said. "Obviously we didn't want to offend people," he said. "There didn't seem to be much objection to it. Some people said they were personally opposed to it but wouldn't have a problem with it being shown." "I think that everybody went on the idea that if you don't want to see it, then you don't have to." SAB tried to get the movie last year, but it wasn't available in non-theatrical release, Bowling said. "The Last temptation of Christ," will be shown at the Worsham Theatre in the Student Center Wednesday through Sunday at 7 p.m. Tickets are $1.95.
