

Relocation funds wanted

Tenants fight services cut

By JAY FOSSETT
Staff Writer

When Ken Jeffers, a UK political science professor moved into the Pimlico Park Apartments on Centre Parkway he had use of laundry facilities, a swimming pool, a clubhouse for parties, and other niceties of apartment living.

Today, however, those luxuries are off limits for Jeffers and the other tenants of his building. And residents say that if Lexington's Housing Authority doesn't take some sort of action about that and the increase in crime in the area, they may file a court action.

The tenants claim the loss of facilities and the alleged increased crime rate began with the Nov. 28, 1978 purchase of six of the complex's seven buildings by the Urban County Housing Authority for use as low-rent, subsidized housing.

As such, 17 of the building's 27 tenants have formed a group seeking the relocation benefits that were given to those whose buildings were turned into low-income housing.

Last night the group met with the Austin Simms, the housing authority's executive director, and Joe B. Turner, another housing official, to express their dissatisfaction about the way the authority has handled the situation.

For instance, Jeffers and the tenants of his building, which is still owned by William B. and Ben Moore, were told by their landlords that services — such as the laundry and swimming pool — would be provided as before.

But Jeffers said they haven't been because the housing authority said the facilities belonged to the residents of the new housing program, not the tenants of his building.

Meanwhile, Jeffers said, the leases have been continued — at the same rent. And residents of his building aren't eligible for relocation funds the people whose units are now low-income were given.

Simms refused to comment on the complaints, but said the Urban County Housing Authority will review the leases of the 17 persons in the group, and reach a policy decision in the next 30 days, which is required by law.

At the meeting, the group brought to light several cases which it said supported its position.

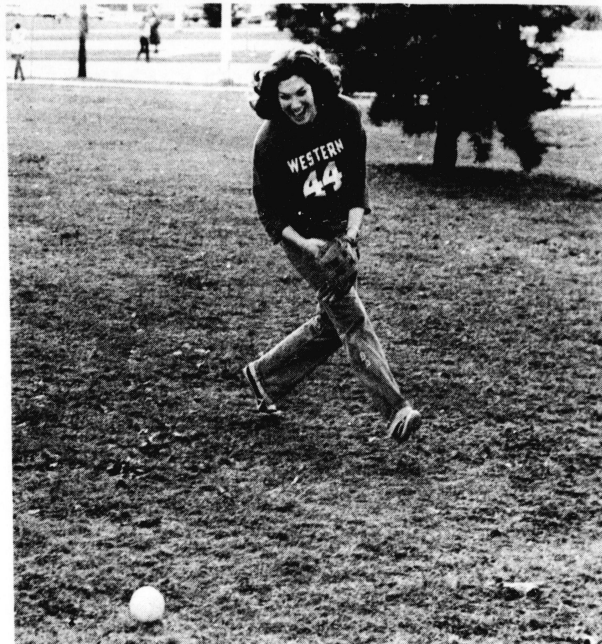

One such case is the federal Group for Relocation Act of 1970, which said "if federal money is used to buy real property in whole or in part for a project, the individual whose property was purchased is eligible for relocation payments."

Jeffers said additional research led him to a Louisiana case in which the phrase "whole or in part" was interpreted to include "people who were not physically displaced from their dwelling unit, but rather had part of their property acquired."

In addition, Jeffers researched the Landlord Tenant Act and found that it defined leased premises as "facilities held out for the use of tenants."

Jeffers said he got the impression through newspaper articles that Simms and the housing authority thought the group did not have a valid claim.

"Hopefully," said Jeffers, "with the new evidence, they (the local housing authority) will realize they violated federal regulations. If not, we'll just take our argument to the federal housing authority."

Service area expansion called costly, unpopular, unnecessary

By TERESA YOUNG
Staff Writer

A Better Goals for Lexington spokesman yesterday argued for maintaining the present size of the urban service area, instead of increasing it by five square miles, as is suggested in a proposal he claimed the Fayette County Growth Task Force favors.

Martin Solomon Jr., a group member and director of the UK computing center, supported his argument against expansion of the service area by saying it was expensive, unnecessary, unpopular with the public and opposed by consultants Freilich and Tichler, Marcou.

He presented these five reasons for holding to the present boundaries during a United Campus Ministry luncheon at the UK Koinonia House.

Better Goals for Lexington, a citizens organization, polled Fayette County residents concerning growth and development in the area. Solomon said the opinion survey showed that only 49 percent of the people were aware that Lexington is currently updating its comprehensive land use plan.

"The poll also showed that 96 percent of the responses wanted to maintain the country and rural characteristics of the land outside of the (service area)," he said. "The majority of the people in the community are against an increase of size in the (it)."

He said the task force had received petitions, bearing more than 1,000 signatures, asking to retain the current boundaries of the service area. Also, he said, the majority of those who attended the public hearing conducted by the task force spoke out against increasing the size of the service area.

The task force is considering two growth proposals. Trend development calls for limiting the size of the service area, while the capital induced pattern proposes a five-square-mile expansion.

Population and population density constituted another reason for halting development, he said. Four different population levels have been estimated for Fayette County by the year 2000. The largest one — 329,160 — was estimated by the Urban County Government's Planning Division. "Fayette County can comfortably take any population increase estimated in the next 20 years without development" in the service area," Solomon said.

He accused the task force of ignoring the two consultant reports. He quoted Robert H. Freilich, one consultant, as saying that if any substantial supply of agricultural and horse farm properties was converted to urban development it would cause irreparable injury to remaining owners and to the public at large.

The report by consultants Tichler, Marcou said an increase in the service area would increase the cost of Lexington's transit line and decrease public access. It will make housing less affordable, have an impact on historic preservation, urban design and reinvestment in existing neighborhoods, according to the report.

"The statement made by Freilich and the report by Tichler, Marcou are promptly being ignored by the task force," Solomon said.

He also pointed to the financial cost to Fayette County taxpayers. The Tichler, Marcou report estimated that the cost of the municipal government would increase $7.7 million and the public school system cost would increase $28.7 million, if the capital induced method is instituted. "The taxpayers will pay for the increased cost," said Solomon.

"The task force will vote again in April on their recommendation to be sent to the Planning Commission. The public needs to let their opinion be known," he said. He suggested that people write their council member, one of the members-at-large, the mayor or the members of the planning committee to help keep the service area from being expanded. He said it would be beneficial to ask the present council members hard questions about their opinions of planning and growth.

Hornback tries for WKU spot

By SAIT TARHAN
Staff Writer

UK Vice President of University Relations Ray Hornback is among 15 candidates from an original 150 nominees being considered to replace Dero Downing as president of Western Kentucky University, sources there said yesterday. Downing, who was president of WKU for 10 years, resigned last September for health reasons.

The College Heights Herald, WKU's student newspaper, said last week the school's Board of Regents' screening committee will release the names of the top four or five candidates in about a month. The paper said some sources have indicated Hornback will be among them.

These candidates will be asked to come to WKU to meet with students and faculty.

Hornback said yesterday he received a letter several months ago saying he had been nominated for the presidency. He refused to say who nominated him.

Hornback has an A.B. in journalism and political science from UK, and a Ph.D. in higher education from Indiana University. He is an Indiana University Fellow — that university's top academic designation. He was vice president of university relations at Morehead State University before coming to UK five years ago.

The criteria for WKU's presidency states a preference for doctorates with teaching and administrative experience. Among others being considered are Paul Cook, WKU's budget director, James Davis, WKU's vice president of academic affairs and Kern Davis — who is considered the favorite — a native Kentuckian and Centre College graduate who is director of the Interdisciplinary Institute at the University of Florida.

Alan Judd, a reporter for the College Heights Herald, said rumors in Bowling Green have it that the new president will not come from the present WKU administration. "Traditionally, Western has stayed inside its boundaries, but in this case, the opinion is that it would be good 'just for a change' to choose someone outside the university. It's really hard to say."

A BILL TO STIFFEN ABORTION REQUIREMENTS has been pre-filed for the 1980 General Assembly. The measure would prohibit abortion after the sixth month of pregnancy unless a woman's health is endangered. Certification in writing by two physicians would be required. Where a physician is considering performing an abortion after the second trimester, he would be required to certify in writing that the fetus is not "viable" and cite the medical reasons. The bill defines viable as more than 24 weeks old.

CONCERNED ABOUT WHAT IT TERMED the small but unresolved threat to health posed by radiation in low doses, a White House task force yesterday called for a reduction in Americans' exposure to man-made radiation, particularly medical X-rays.

The task force, in an 800-page series of draft reports, said most of the 240 million X-rays given to Americans annually are beneficial, but "many are unnecessary and can be eliminated."

It urged doctors to be cautious in ordering X-rays and encouraged patients to keep their own personal records of X-rays and take X-rays with them when they switch doctors.

The government should work with the medical profession and use its Medicare and Medicaid reimbursement clout as needed to bring about "a comprehensive radiation reduction program for the healing arts," the task force said.

The report on low-level radiation exposure was issued by the Interagency Task Force on Ionizing Radiation, which was formed by President Carter last May in response to reports of high cancer rates among those near nuclear bomb test sites and atomic facilities.

PRESIDENT CARTER'S SISTER, Gloria Spann, is free on personal recognizance bond after being accused of illegal harmonica playing. "Obviously, I have less talent than I thought," Mrs. Spann commented.

She, her husband Walter, and two other persons were arrested Saturday night at the McWaffe restaurant, said Americas, Ga., police. Mrs. Spann said she and a dozen friends had gone to the restaurant and one of the group dared her to play the harmonica.

Police got a complaint from the restaurant's assistant manager, who said patrons couldn't hear the jukebox, according to police officer Mae Davis.

Mrs. Spann was charged with disorderly conduct and others in the party were charged with failure to leave when officers requested, officer Davis said.

PRESIDENT CARTER REVEALED A STANDBY GASOLINE PLAN yesterday as a last-resort emergency measure and other fuel-saving actions, stating that he has no present intention of putting them into effect.

Carter said at a news conference he does not want to impose stringent restraints on fuel use which could impose economic hardships and higher unemployment on the nation, but that it is wise to have the plans ready just in case they are ever needed.

The president said he would send Congress proposals early next month for additional measures, presumably less stringent, which he might use to ease the impact of shortages resulting from the current loss of Iranian oil production.

The plan is to be submitted formally tomorrow to Congress, which then has 60 days to approve or disapprove them. They would not take effect unless the president declared a national energy emergency and they could be blocked by a negative vote of either house of Congress.

A SHARP RISE IN GASOLINE PRICES could initially hurt state tax receipts, a state revenue official warned yesterday.

"If the prices go up drastically, it will hurt consumption," said Paul Tanner, director of research in the state revenue department.

The state gasoline tax is on a per-gallon basis, currently nine cents, thus reduced consumption would cut revenue, Tanner said.

Some observers in the gas industry have predicted gasoline prices of up to one a gallon in Kentucky by late summer or early fall.

However Tanner feels consumption would rise again after an initial drop.

B-ball recruiting opens; fans should stay out

The announcement of Derrick Hord's intention to attend UK is a reminder that one of the most intense hunting seasons in America is now reaching its peak: the courting of high school basketball stars by the many universities who would like dearly to see these young men at their schools next year.

It is also a reminder to both schools and their "loyal" fans that the NCAA has strict rules on how recruiting should be done, and enforces them as well as it can. If UK is to get more players of national-class caliber like Hord, they're going to have to be careful.

In some cases, punishment can be swift. The University of Cincinnati was recently warned not to sign one high school player it had heavily recruited. There was already information that rules had been violated, that the player had received illegal inducements.

Two years ago, UK got burned when the NCAA imposed two-year penalties for recruiting violations, both inside and outside of the athletic department.

UK was limited to three basketball scholarships for the last two years, and the football team was barred from post-season competition. If the University had not cooperated with the NCAA and run a thorough self-investigation, the penalties would have been much worse.

That investigation found, among other things, that over-enthusiastic fans are often responsible for putting a school in trouble. Without any official connection to the school, fans were guilty of making illegal offers to athletes. Violations that ranged from giving free meals to offering a thoroughbred for a present may all be committed without a school's knowledge or consent, but the athletic programs will still bear the consequences if the actions are discovered.

It's a poor UK booster who would put the University in jeopardy by taking illegal risks. Unless their assistance is requested, fans should leave the recruiting up to the schools. If UK were to get hit with another probation, the talents of super players like Hord would go for naught. Let's play by the rules.

All agreed

After reading the editorial entitled "SG Med senator's charges are a little late to be valid," (Kernel, Feb. 23) concerning my opposition to the Student Center expansion and the way it passed through the Student Senate, I realized that my major point had been misunderstood. The fault is my own, and one of semantics.

When speaking to the Kernel, I consistently argued that there had not been enough discussion on the floor of the Senate to make passage of the SC expansion endorsement valid. Indeed, discussion in the form of presentation to the Senate by Vice President for Business Affairs Jack Blanton, UK Architect Warren Denny and members of the Student Center Board were thorough if equivocal, and the question period after their presentation was adequate. My apologies to these people if I implied otherwise.

Correctly stated, my complaint is that the issue was only on the floor for one half hour of DEBATE among the senators, and fully half of this time was spent arguing an amendment considering SG supervision of the expansion, and then the debate was limited to the amendment topic only. There was plenty of time between the Dec. 11 meeting of the Student Senate and the Feb. 5 meeting "for the senators to gather opinions from students," but because the debate was ended so quickly (over my voiced objections) these opinions were not expressed at the time. I took the opportunity of the next meeting of the Senate to convey the feelings of my college.

Buzz English, senator from the College of Business and Economics, spoke in favor of the SC expansion. He said that our Student Center is a "joke" in comparison to other schools. The same argument may be made for Seaton Center or the Coliseum pool. The proposed Student Center expansion offers no facilities that are not already available on campus. If we must spend in excess of $10 million over the next 30 years (17,000 full time students x $20/year x 30 years), let's at least be sure most of us are in agreement on how to spend it.

Regrets

The Committee to Defend the Eleven announces with regret that it has canceled its showings of The Battle of Chile, scheduled for this Wednesday.

We especially regret that we were unable to give people more notice of this cancellation before the film was shown at the Kentucky Theatre last week. We expected that a letter giving such notice would be published in the Kernel last week, but for whatever reason, it never appeared. We apologize to anyone who passed up the downtown showings with the intention of seeing ours.

When the Kentucky Theatre's most recent schedule appeared with the announcement that they would be showing The Battle of Chile a week before we had scheduled it, we felt we had no choices but to cancel. Though we did not expect to raise funds with the film series, we could not afford to lose any, and we were afraid we simply would be unable to compete with the Kentucky's showings.

The Battle of Chile is an intensely moving experience as well as an educational one, as those who have seen it will testify. It is a powerful document of the consciousness and dedication of the Chilean people's movement and of the shameful role our CIA played in abetting the fascist takeover in that country. It is a film that every American should see, and we will do what we can to see that it returns to Lexington in the near future.

The 'Sterno'

SG press agent answers Fields' column with his own portrayal of 'Kernel' office

BY MICHAEL BREEN

It was a dark and stormy night. The Kentucky rain lashed down in blinding sheets; thunder and lightning cracked and boomed.

Stupid Blubberment President Gene Prewall and I left the Student Center. We had just finished a commentary for the Kentucky Sterno, the campus newspaper. We made our way through Patterson Plaza and arrived at the Journalism Building, soaked.

"Where do we find Cheese Mayme?" I asked Gene.

"The corridor was dark.

"I don't know," said Gene. "Let's go that way, there's a light."

As we approached the light, a faint hum steadily grew into a god-awful racket. At the end of the corridor, we turned left into the Sterno newsroom.

"Gaaah!" said Gene. "Let's leave."

I couldn't believe it either. The Sterno newsroom looked like Halloween at Bellevue's mental ward. The room was packed with people. Two girls were screaming in a corner, people were banging away at typewriters. A guy with glasses sat at a desk, tearing at his hair; a book flew through the air, just missing Gene. Another person was setting fire to a wastepaper basket.

"Go on in," I yelled at Gene. We waded into the melee.

A guy with a moustache trotted by, and I grabbed him.

"Hey," I said, "Where do I find Cheese Mayme, the Minorities and Martyrs editor?"

"Oh, he's not here. He's out covering the Campus Faith Healers protest."

"Who are you?"

"I'm Walter Tuna, the Farts editor. That's short for fine arts. You can call me half-baked, all my friends do."

"Look," said Gene, "we've got a commentary from the Stupid Blubberment for the Sterno."

"Yeah," Tuna said, "How'd you like that snazzy article Ace Shields ran on you all?"

Um, it was okay... look who do we give this article to?"

Give it to Tom Lark." Tuna pointed to his left. "Look, I've got to go and misreview another jazz album."

I saw Lark seated, his feet propped up on the desk. He pulled the cork out of a bottle of Wild Turkey with his teeth and took a long pull.

"Eeahhh," he said, squinting his eyes. "Time to get the Sterno out."

I looked at Gene, and we both walked over.

"Whaddaya need?" Lark asked.

"We've got a commentary from Stupid Blubberment," Gene said.

"Oh, you're from SB," Lark said. "Lemme see it."

He looked it over.

"Well, hiech, hieugh, it'll need some editing. Hey Space, c'mere."

A thin guy, whom I recognized as Space Derringer, Sterno Editor, walked over.

"Yeah?" he asked.

"Space, this here is a SB commentary, and it needs some 'editing,' hiech, hieugh."

"That night class in remedial English has done a great job this year. I'll take it right over."

"Hey!" I yelled, but it was too late.

Space ran off down the hall, waving the commentary.

"Hey Tom..." Gene said.

Before he could say anything, a

Lark handed him the bottle and he took a long pull.

He calmed some.

"I swear to God," Gooke panted. "This business gets to you. I'm starting to run out of warped and twisted things to write. I haven't had a nightmare in two days!"

Who gives a damn?" I asked.

Cooke looked at me. An evil grin came over his face and a little foam trickled from the side of his mouth. He ran back to his typewriter and started banging.

Suddenly, the noise grew louder. People started throwing more books and paper... Lark's head was tilted straight back, guzzling Turkey... a funny smell crept into the room. Five people started dancing a fertility.

I looked at Gene. He looked at me.

A girl ran up. "Tom, listen to this filler for the back page: 'Reading the Sterno is good for constipation'."

"Great!" Lark said. "We can put it next to the ad for the campus-wide plasma festival at Commonwealth Stadium."

I pulled at Gene.

"Let's go," I said.

"But what about the article?"

"Forget it, let's beat it."

girl shaking with excitement ran up.

"Tom! Listen to this great front page article. 'Man drowns in pudding vat' by Sue Titter."

"Great," Lark said. "Did you check your sources and get some quotes?"

"Oh, I forgot."

"Make some up," I offered. Her eyes became slits. "Yehhh," she said, and ran off.

Gene looked at me. Suddenly a shadow loomed out of the periphery.

"Duck Gene!" I yelled. A typewriter flew across the room and crashed through the window. Splinters and pieces of glass flew everywhere.

"Aaahgawd!" yelled the guy who had been tearing his hair. He stood there panting heavily. "I just can't think of another way to say I'm not writing another column this week."

It was Yon Gooke, the Sterno's syndicated columnist and neurotic.

"Tom, give me a hit," he whimpered.

"HEY EVERYBODY!! CHINA JUST INVADDED VIETNAM!"

A frizzy-haired girl ran around the room, waving a dispatch.

"Tomorrow's headline!" Lark yelled. "Let's blow it up into..."

I dragged Gene out into the hall. "Cripes, that place is out of joint!"

"That's their problem," I said. We headed down the corridor at a trot. I could hear the rain outside.

"Hey Gene," he said. "How ya doin'? Whadja think of that SB article?"

"Ahhh, it was okay. You kinda distorted some facts."

"Part of the business, pal. Hey listen to what my next article is on... Human sacrifices in the Catholic Church..."

Gene and I took off running, into the rainy, windswept night.

Allman Brothers' album to be released

Enlightened Rogues will be the first album by the Allman Brothers in over three years. The LP was recorded at Criteria Studios in Miami and was produced by Tom Dowd, who also produced some of the group's earlier works, including Idlewild South. Live

At Fillmore East, and Eat a Peach.

The Allman Brothers Band now consists of Gregg Allman, keyboards and lead vocals; Dickey Betts, guitars and lead vocals; Jai Johanny Johanson, drums and percussion; Butch Trucks, drums and percussion; David "Rook" Goldflies, bass; and "Dangerous" Dan Toler on lead guitar.

Goldflies and Toler are new to the group, replacing Chuck Leavell and Lamar Williams, who are now with Sea Level.

Guests on Enlightened Rogues include percussionist Joe Lala, Jim Essery on harmonica, and Bonnie Bramlett and Mimi Hart on background vocals.

A major tour of the United States is expected to begin in April.

Tom Smothers claims his show was first to be 'dope-conscious'

According to comedian Tom Smothers, The Smothers Brothers Show was the first dope-conscious television show ever aired.

Smothers, in an interview in:

the latest issue of High Times magazine, called some of that show's jokes "high comedy." His theory at the time was "if everybody in the audience is high and I'm high, then we will all be in sync."

He said the show was faken off the air in 1969 at the behest of the Nixon administration, and that he and his brother Dick were victims of the White House Plumbers.

"It was decided that we could not be on under the Nixon administration. In fact, it was April that we went off, and he had been inaugurated in January... it would come down from Nixon to CBS... Bob Wood, the new president for CBS, would say, 'Knock 'em off. Get them off.'"

"We were cancelled and later found out we were under surveillance by Tony Ulasevich and the Plumbers." Smothers says the Plumbers at one point had attempted to set him up for a dope bust.

In Smothers' view, his weekly prime-time program "still stands as the ideal show of the most exciting time of this country's last 30 or 40 years."

Florida, Alabama kick-off SEC tournament

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—Cellar-dwelling Florida faces fourth-seeded Alabama at 1:00 p.m. (EST) today when the Southeastern Conference renews its postseason basketball tournament for the first time in 27 years.

Three other first round matches are on the opening day's agenda of a tournament that will qualify the champion for the National Collegiate Athletic Association playoffs beginning at various sights next week.

Kentucky, the defending national champion and winner of 13 of the 19 SEC tournaments played before the 27-year-lull began in 1952, faces Mississippi and conference scoring king John Stroud at 3 p.m.; Mississippi State takes on Georgia at 7 p.m. and third-seeded Vanderbilt, this year's Cinderella team, tangles with Auburn at 9.

Eighth-ranked Louisiana State, the league champion which saw an eight-game winning streak snapped by Mississippi State Saturday, is seeded No. 1 and Tennessee, riding a six-game winning string, is seeded No. 2. Neither LSU, 22-4, nor Tennessee, 18-11, will see action until Friday night's semifinals.

Thursday night's quarter-final match-ups have the Alabama-Florida winner facing the Ole Miss-Kentucky victor in the upper bracket with LSU, and the State-Georgia winner tangles with the Vandy-Auburn winner to see who meets Tennessee.

The tournament champion will draw an automatic berth in the NCAA event, moving either into the Midwest

Regional, traditional spot of SEC champions, or the East

Regional. It's possible that two conference teams will enter the national playoffs, but new-

NCAA regulations would place both teams in the Midwest and/or-East regional to prevent both from reaching the national finals.

Baseball team hopes for best with returning experience

By JOHN CLAY
Assistant Sports Editor

Although "Old Man Winter" insists on hanging around a little bit longer, it won't be long until we'll be hearing the crack of the bat instead of the skid of the tire. Baseball is just around the corner.

In fact, it is sooner than that for the Kentucky Wildcats as they open up their 1979 season at Ouisville on Sunday.

After suffering through a 20-25 campaign last year, Coach Tuffy Horne got the pink slip and UK hired Keith Madison, 27, an assistant coach at Mississippi State. For Madison there are two challenges — rebuilding a program and proving that, as the youngest major college baseball coach, he can do the job.

"Every coach wants his own program," said Madison recently at a practice session. "I think it is a challenge being the youngest coach in the nation."

One problem which led to Horne's downfall was the inability to recruit or the lack of interest in local players; a problem that Madison hopes to correct.

"There is no doubt that there have been some real quality players in this area but that is no guarantee that the same kind of players will always be here," says Madison.

"I look at it like this, if a player is good enough for the SEC, we definitely want him. We think that UK has a lot to offer the top players in Lexington and the state. We will make every effort to recruit the top local players."

Madison, who brought along John Butler, another former assistant at Starkville, feels this year's Cats do have the talent to improve on last year's record.

"Florida won our division last year and they will have to be favored this year with the other teams in a dogfight for the top two spots and a position in the playoffs (Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, Vanderbilt and UK make up the Eastern division) I think our pitching staff will have to show improvement if we are to challenge for the top two spots.

"If we can hit .285 again as a team, as they did last year, and improve on our 4.95 ERA, we'll have a real good chance of making the playoffs.

The Cats do boast some impressive talent including third baseman Steve Roberts, who was drafted by the San Francisco Giants this summer but decided to finish out his senior year. Madison describes Roberts as a good hitter (.340 with 10 HR's) with a good arm. Also Madison will be counting on second baseman Chuck Long who hit .346 last year. Both are considered All-Conference candidates.

Madison says that his outfield is very young with the oldest player being junior Freddie Smith. Back are sophomores Steve Williams and Jim Leopold to go along with newcomers Mike Botkin and Bill Barker.

Catching is set with senior Gary Kula who hit .346 last year.

The ace of the pitching staff is senior Joe Georger, who Madison expects to have an excellent year. Another plus for the staff will be Tim Brandenburg (who was a high draft choice by Kansas City in High School).

While the weather will have some effect on the Wildcats — they play only two home games in the month of March, practice sessions have not been a major problem.

"We have been practicing at Tattersalls (a horse barn on North Broadway where various sales are held) since the last week in January," explained Madison. "Actually this has been good for us because we have been able to hit in the dirt while most schools have to hit on gym floors."

The Cats first home contest will be next Tuesday, when they host Georgetown.

Hord announces intention to become a Wildcat

(AP)—Kentucky basketball coach Joe B. Hall apparently scored a recruiting coup yesterday when Derrick Hord, one of the nation's most highly sought prep stars, said he would sign a national basketball letter of intent with the Wildcats.

Hall was present when Hord, a 6-6 forward, made the announcement at his Bristol, Tenn. home.

Moments later, in a telephone interview with Lexington radio station WLK, Hord said he "felt real comfortable" with the people he had met in Lexington.

"I enjoyed the fans, the alumni, and the overall people in general," he said.

Hall prevailed over North Carolina Coach Dean Smith and Tennessee Coach Don DeVoe in the battle for Hord's services.

"I really thought about it for a long while and I prayed about it and I just felt this was the best choice for me," Hord said.

Hord's high school coach, Bob Chambers, said the youngster deserved his billing as one of the top five prep players in the country.

"Hord is the most complete basketball player in high school that I've ever seen," Chambers said. "He's a great passer. He's very unselfish and plays a complete game."

"He's been an outstanding shooter for four years, but he also has outstanding defensive potential. He's not limited in any phase of the game."

UK Wheelcats win four

The UK Wheelcats won four games this weekend, improving their conference record to 16-0, and overall record to 27-5. The wins came at the expense of the Louisville Rollers twice, 42-31 and 50-33, and Wright State University twice, 59-38 and 48-42.

The Wheelcats, champions of the Bluegrass Conference, enter a regional playoff game against Southern Conference runner-up Birmingham this Saturday at Lexington's Castletown Community Center.

Wednesday

James Jones' masterful pre-World War II novel of men and women caught in an emotional triangle with the U.S. Army, concludes with the last episode of the three-part miniseries FROM HERE TO ETERNITY, Wednesday, Feb. 28 on NBC-TV. Natalie Wood and William Devane star as Karen Holmes and Sgt. Mill Warden, lovers who start an affair out of anger which turns into love.

The novel, which won the National Book Award in 1952, was the biggest book to come out of World War II and was widely read for its vivid love scenes and brilliant descriptions of men under stress.

In filming the striking sequences, three planes made over a hundred passes on Schofield Barracks to recreate the Dec. 7 morning attack on Pearl Harbor. The passes were as close as 50 feet above palm trees and rattling windows.

A squad of special effects men spent three days to set out the bombs or explosive charges, used to depict thousands of bullets striking across the quad.

China shows no intention of evacuating Vietnam

Bangkok, Thailand (AP) — China reported yesterday that Vietnamese troops launched several counter-invasions into Chinese territory in the previous few days but were driven back each time.

Intelligence sources here said China appears to show no intention of withdrawing from Vietnam and has even moved to reinforce its troops along Vietnam's northeastern front, where some of the Vietnamese incursions reportedly took place.

In his bluntest comment on the 10-day conflict, President Carter asked China yesterday to undertake "a speedy withdrawal" from Vietnam. The request was in a message given to top Chinese leaders by Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, who is visiting Peking.

In Washington, Carter said at a news conference that he has made known to the Chinese his "firm disapproval" of their invasion but said it would be counterproductive to terminate the new found bilateral relations with Peking.

The Vietnamese, meanwhile, claimed that they wiped out 2,200 Chinese soldiers in four days, 800 of them Monday in clashes along the northeastern coastal front.

In the northwest, Vietnam reported its troops were locked in combat with the Chinese 15 miles inside Vietnam along the banks of the Red River, the vital water corridor to the capital of Hanoi.

The official Chinese news agency Hsinhua reported yesterday from Peking that a battalion of Vietnamese troops attacked a commune on the Kwangsi border Sunday, but Chinese soldiers and militiamen fought back, wiping out some of the invading troops and driving the rest back across the border.

This was the first time during the border war that Hsinhua has reported a Vietnamese invasion of Chinese territory. The official agency has carried only a few items about the war, mostly accounts of Chinese soldiers described in heroic terms. It has carried no detailed accounts of fighting, and no Chinese casualty figures.

Western reporters have been barred from covering the war on the various fronts. Most information comes from Chinese and Vietnamese broadcasts.

Hanoi claims to have killed more than 16,000 Chinese since Peking invaded Feb. 17. Intelligence sources consider that figure inflated.

China has not given casualty figures, but in Tokyo, Japan's Kyodo News Service classified Chinese reports list about 17,000 Vietnamese "wiped out" in the first week of fighting. The news service attributed its information to Chinese sources in Peking. The official Voice of Vietnam Radio said the most concentrated fighting was in the Cam Duong province along the northern reaches of the Red River corridor, the vital river, rail and road link.

Because solid training makes strong management, and we look to promote from within — to executive store management level, or to related management positions.

We're 63 stores and growing. Big, but not so big our people are just numbers. We're personal. If you're interested in a retail store management career, talk with us.
