UK student charged with rape at fraternity house

By JOE BRAUN
Staff Writer

Lexington police arrested Kevin Wayne McPherson, a second-year UK student, on Friday, charging him with the Oct. 27 alleged rape of a 19-year-old female UK sophomore.

The incident occurred at 1 a.m. at Phi Kappa Psi social fraternity, 447 Columbia Ave., according to police reports.

McPherson was charged with first-degree rape.

"... While in the rear of the building, under the deck, the subject pushed her down and forced her to engage in sexual intercourse," according to the police report based on statements from the female.

The alleged rape took place under a deck behind the fraternity house.

Fraternity President Ted Supulski said all furniture from the house had been placed under the deck in preparation for the fraternity's haunted house.

McPherson, of 192 Greg Page Stadium View Apartments, was arraigned in Fayette District Court on Monday.

"He (McPherson) was arraigned, and that means he was advised of the charges against him," said Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Tamra Gormley.

The case could be sent to the grand jury after a preliminary hearing on Monday.

"We only need to prove probable cause that an offense was committed and that we have reason to believe that this individual committed it," Gormley said.

Gormley said first-degree rape carries a possible sentence of 10 to 20 years in jail.

McPherson's bond was set at $10,000 and he was released on his own recognizance. He has since returned to campus.

Although McPherson declined to comment, Ken Smith, one of his attorneys, said his client will plead not guilty.

"He will be pleading not guilty every time he goes to court, and there will be no guilty plea in this case," Smith said.

The woman received medical treatment for trauma at Student Health Services on the morning of the reported incident, said Ralph Derickson, UK spokesman.

However, Smith said the only additional physical injury reported was a small bruise on the woman's leg. He said she "has indicated the doctor is wrong in what she told him — she apparently is taking issue as to whether the doctor wrote down what she said," he said.

Supulski released a statement yesterday saying, "his (McPherson's) membership with the fraternity at this time has been suspended until the investigation is final. Innocence or guilt is not involved in why he was suspended."

"It's just the proper thing to do," he said.

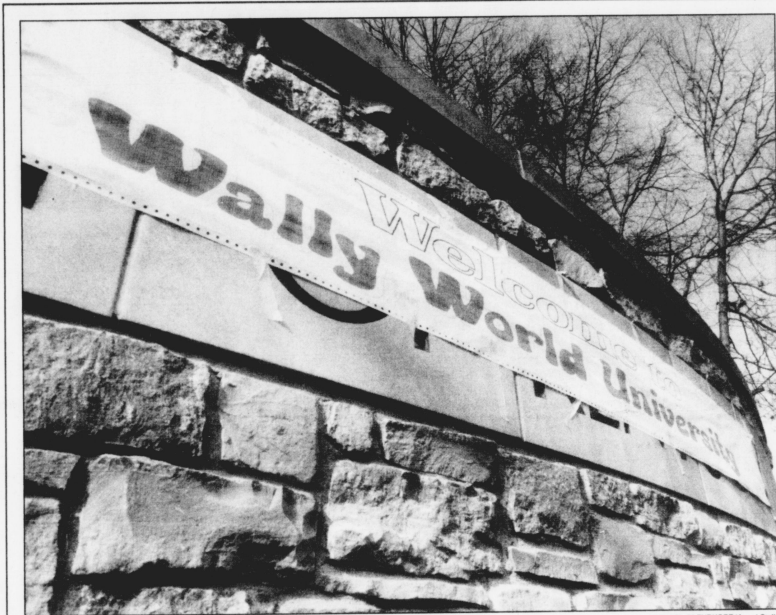

Phi Kappa Psi fraternity, both its national organization and the UK chapter, Supulski said, is opposed to rape or sexual abuse in any manner and is cooperating with police in the investigation.

Supulski said he was not present at the fraternity house when the alleged incident took place, but he was made aware of the charges a

Students volunteer during the holidays

UK students can help others have a truly happy holiday season by taking some time from their study schedules.

Students can offer their time to agencies in Lexington through the UK Volunteer Center for the holidays, located in 206B Matthews Building.

"Any time at all is greatly appreciated. With budget cuts, these agencies are in great need of any assistance," said Sally Moore, director of the center.

However, the decision to volunteer must be taken seriously, she said. A student must be committed.

"Treat it like a paying job," Moore said. "If you can't show up because you have the flu (for example), then call them. They (agencies) are real understanding. They aren't understanding when no one shows up."

Students can volunteer with agencies such as the Salvation Army, the Lexington Child Abuse Council and the Horizon Center through the Volunteer Center.

Most of the organizations need help in donating gifts, food and most of all — time. Many tasks are as simple as wrapping Christmas presents and distributing food.

Several UK student organizations have already begun helping others in the community for the holiday season.

Residence Hall Government and the Student Government Association have joined forces to initiate a food drive for God's Pantry, which collects the food and sends it to needy Lexington families.

Residence halls have various projects for groups in the community. Blanding I, Patterson Hall and Holmes Hall are decorating a Christmas tree for the Kidney Foundation.

Blazer Hall residents have adopted a family and will donate various food items to provide the family with a healthy meal.

Haggin Hall residents will be wrapping gifts for Eastern State Hospital patients.

Students are also encouraged to adopt a child for the holiday season by buying a present through the Circle of Love program.

The Baptist Student Union has been working with the Irishtown Baptist Mission throughout the semester. Students have given their Mondays to work with underprivileged children who need help with homework or tutoring.

The BSU is giving them a party, said Mark Morgan, BSU Community Missions coordinator.

Smith acquitted of two counts of rape

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — William Kennedy Smith was acquitted of sexual assault and battery yesterday in a case that focused national attention on date rape and tarnished the Kennedy legend.

The jury of four women and two men took about 90 minutes to reject the allegations of a 30-year-old woman who said Smith chased her, toppled her on the lawn of the Kennedy estate and raped her under a full moon.

Smith wished a Merry Christmas to cheering supporters outside the courtroom.

"I want to thank the jurors," he said. "My life was in their hands and I'm so grateful."

He also thanked the judge and said, "I have an enormous debt to the system and to God and I have a terrific faith in both of them."

Supporters of the woman condemned the cheering and the verdict.

"This has hurt all rape victims, and you're going to have a lot of victims that won't come forward because of what has been done to this woman," Robin Miller, who heads a group called Families Enraged Against Rape, said outside the courtroom.

"I feel terrible that they're applauding him," Miller said. "It's because he's a Kennedy. This hurts all rape victims."

Abbott, the victims' rights advocate who was the crisis counselor on call March 30, came by the courthouse later.

"I talked to her the first day and I talked to her as recently as last night," Abbott said. "I believed her then and I believe her today."

Smith, 31, had taken the stand on his own defense, adamantly denying the woman's charges. He painted her as a sexually aggressive woman who initiated sex after they met at a trendy night club during Easter weekend.

Smith grinned as the verdict was read and embraced his lawyer, Roy Black. Across the courtroom in the jury box, foreman Thomas Stearns Jr., 62, began to weep. Another juror, Lea Haller, 37, had tears streaming down her face.

There was no other reaction because the judge warned the spectators they would face punishment.

Smith's mother and other Kennedy family members were in the courtroom when the verdict was read. Among those absent was his uncle, Sen. Edward Kennedy, whose name had been sullied by his link to the case. Witnesses testified that he roused his son Patrick and Smith in the wee hours to go drinking at the nightclub where Smith said he was "picked up" by the woman.

After the verdict, Circuit Judge Mary Lupo thanked the jurors, saying, "You have done justice regardless of your verdict."

She noted the trial had been televised live across the country. "This has not been a movie made for TV," she told them. "The TV has come into the courtroom. The only difference between this case and any other is that more people want to see this case."

She told jurors it was up to them whether they wanted to talk publicly about their decision, but "I need to tell you that you are the story now."

As he left the courtroom, Black said he felt "terrific, just terrific."

"I feel great, just great!" said Smith's mother, Jean Kennedy Smith.

In Rhode Island, Patrick Kennedy said: "This has been a very difficult time for my family. I believed in my cousin Willie's innocence all along. The jury's swift verdict will now allow Willie and all of us to get on with our lives."

Smith graduated from Georgetown University Medical School this year. He was to enter a residency program at the University of New Mexico Medical Center in Albuquerque. Officials of the school said they will talk to Smith before deciding anything about his status.

Before the jury deliberating, Lasch called Smith a rapist who inflicted "violence, humiliation and degradation," on the woman. But Black said the sexual encounter was "right out of a romance novel."

Lupo frowned and called down Black, who jumped up to Smith to exchange hugs and claps on the back, despite the judge's order against courtroom outbursts.

"Outside, the accuser's rape counselor said the woman will be able to deal with the verdict. 'She has shown tremendous courage,'" said Denny Abbott.

"You don't always get your justice inside the courtroom," he told her.

Seuss books used as tools for speech

By PEG TEACHEY
Contributing Writer

Russell Henderson, a theatre professor, steps in front of one of his students, smiles broadly and says, "Read, please."

This doesn't seem too much to ask of a college student — especially if the text is a famous book written for young children.

But for students in Henderson's voice production class, this usually-simple task often is difficult and frustrating.

Henderson asks his students to read Dr. Seuss rhymes — to practice diction, eliminate regional accents and develop proper English.

Despite their humorous character, the Seuss readings represent a difficult and very serious business for Henderson and his students.

After the first student stumbles over reading "needle-eating poodles," others freeze as Henderson selects another victim.

The next student clears his throat, takes a deep breath and begins.

He successfully reads through words like "tweeete beetle" and becomes more confident. He reads faster, more sure of himself — and then, UGH!!! He lets his accent slip and drags the letter "a" in the word "batlle."

The word comes forth as from a bleating sheep — "baaaah-le." Giggles float through the room, and students burst into laughter when Henderson asks, "What did you say?" The student laughs with the others and corrects his mistake.

"The precision required is extremely difficult," he said. "When you couple all of that with speed, (Seuss) makes for a good assignment."

Class members examine the tongue-twisting, syllable-silly, rhyming-chiming nonsense of Dr. Seuss (Theodore Seuss Gei-

Two groups sponsor contest to name new homeless center

By CHRISTINE BOTTORFF
Staff Writer

Two organizations dedicated to aiding Lexington's homeless have joined forces, but before they move into a new joint facility, they need to find a new name.

"Our gesture in order to embrace the community is to ask the community to name us," said Debra Hensley, 3rd District councilwoman and head of the board for the Community Kitchen/Horizon Center, Inc.

In the past, the Community Kitchen provided free meals for the homeless while the Horizon Center provided free shelter. These services should be available under one roof by 1993.

The group is holding a contest to pick a new name for the homeless center. Anyone can submit a name, and whoever submits the winning name will receive a three-night trip to the Bahamas, courtesy of Omega Travel and Princess Vacations.

Hensley said local high schools are being asked to get involved, as well as local colleges.

The Bahama trip must be used before April 30, 1992, but this still leaves time for students to use them for spring break, Hensley said.

The deadline to enter a name is Dec. 16, and the winner will be announced on Dec. 19. Entries should be submitted to: Community Kitchen/Horizon Center, Inc., P.O. Box 1725, Lexington, Ky., 40592.

Groundbreaking for the new homeless facility is scheduled to occur May 1, 1992. The center will be located on Loudon Avenue, and substantial completion should be finished by next December.

For more information about the contest, call 254-4527.

Bush watches as Soviet crumbles

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush reacted cautiously yesterday to the turmoil in the Soviet Union amid growing administration concern that the former communist superpower might be plunging toward civil war.

"We are watching it very closely," Bush said, adding that the United States would support reformers "wherever they are" in the Soviet Union. He said he couldn't predict how the rapidly developing events would be resolved.

"They are going to sort these matters out themselves," Bush said.

Secretary of State James Baker will fly to Moscow this weekend for meetings with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev as well as Russian President Boris Yeltsin and other republic leaders.

The president said U.S. officials were watching "extraordinarily closely" who was in control of the vast Soviet nuclear arsenal and that he had received "pretty good" assurances. "I see no reason to alarm the American people," he said.

One day earlier, CIA Director Robert Gates had used words that might well be considered alarming, telling Congress the Soviet Union faced "the collapse of central authority, potentially large-scale civil disorder and unraveling of social discipline — while it still possesses some 30,000 nuclear weapons, the most powerful of which continue to be aimed at us."

The CIA director said the Soviet economy is in free-fall and that shortages of food and fuel, the disintegration of the armed forces and ethnic strife "will combine this winter to produce the most significant civil disorder" since the 1917 revolution.

The Bush administration has tried to avoid any appearance of taking sides in the power struggle between Gorbachev and republic leaders.

Yeltsin and the presidents of Ukraine and Byelorussia announced on Sunday the formation of a commonwealth to replace the Soviet central government. Gorbachev denounced the plan as illegal.

Yeltsin said yesterday that the republics of Armenia and Kirgizia had agreed to join the commonwealth. He said three other republics — Kazakhstan, Tadzhikistan and Turkmenia — would decide today whether to follow suit.

Gorbachev and Yeltsin have recently met with military leaders. After Yeltsin's session with the military brass, a defense ministry official told Tass that the Russian president had offered assurances that he favors unified control over the superpower's 2.7 million soldiers and 27,000 nuclear warheads.

James Schlesinger, a former defense secretary and CIA director, said, "It's been plain since the coup that Yeltsin has the great power within the old Soviet Union and if he decides he's commander in chief, I think that he will win." And, said Schlesinger, victory for Yeltsin in that area "legitimizes the breaking up of the Soviet military."

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said a breakup of centralized authority in the Soviet Union was a good idea.

In an interview on Fox Television, Kissinger cautioned against "nostalgia at the 'good old days' when one man controlled 30,000 nuclear weapons, most of which were aimed at us."

Kissinger said the commonwealth plan put forth by Yeltsin and his allies was "very much in the American interest." He said U.S. critics should "get off their backs."

Schlesinger, meanwhile, defended the administration's desire to help Gorbachev survive as head of the central government.

"We had every incentive, starting with nuclear weapons, to hold the center together," Schlesinger said. But he also criticized the administration for failing to provide technical and material assistance quickly enough.

"We haven't offered them very much of either," he said. "Time is beginning to run out for us with regard to the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe."

Andrei Kolosovskiy is the new Russian representative in Washington.

Asked about Gates' prediction of civil disorder this winter, he said, "I would not be so apocalyptic and pessimistic in my prediction."

sel) with a new appreciation after one of Henderson's demonstrations.

The professor uses "Oh, Say Can You Say?" and "Fox in Sox" as speech exercises to sharpen the use and control of points of articulation such as teeth, tongue and lips.

His students not only have to speak Seuss, but they are required to memorize the rhymes.

Henderson's quick wit and slapstick humor guide the students through the worst of words, and they rise to the challenge, learning to articulate.

An Eastern Kentucky twang turns "forget" into "fergit," Henderson said, doing a hoedown shuffle across the room.

Likewise, an Ohio nasal sound creeping into spoken English can make his eyes bulge, and students get the message that what slipped out of their mouths is incorrect.

"It's made me aware of how I speak and how others speak as well," said Sherry Hamil, an English junior.

At the beginning of each semester, Henderson explains to students that his goal is to teach them to speak English correctly, and his constructive criticism of their language is just that — it's of their language and is not a criticism of their hometown or background.

"It has to be good-natured," Henderson said. "If it's mean-spirited, you're close to where people live. If you attack the way they talk, it's like getting close to their soul."

His critique methods are light-hearted and perhaps unorthodox, but they are effective, Henderson, who has taught voice, speech and acting at UK for seven years, is a UK graduate. He earned his master's degree in fine arts at Trinity University.

A student gave Henderson a handout on "Fox in Sox" five years ago, and he has used it in voice production ever since. Henderson's personal favorite is "Happy Birthday to You."

Henderson is not alone in his love of Seuss. Dr. Seuss books have been a classic for more than 50 years. Before Seuss, the most exciting sentence in a reading primer was "Look, Spot. See Dick run."

Then the magical silliness of Dr. Seuss emerged in "And to Think I Saw It on Mulberry Street," his first book, published in 1937. "Dick, Jane and Spot" paled as a new era in children's books began.

"That is what I am proudest of: that I had something to do with getting rid of Dick and Jane," Geisel said in 1982.

Geisel, who died Sept. 24, published more than 40 books. His last was Oh, the Places You'll Go!

Henderson's class sounds like child's play, test your ability to speak "Seuss" on another passage Henderson uses from Seuss' "Oh, Say Can You Say?" — a tongue-twister book published in 1979.

If your daddy's name is Jim and if Jim swims and if Jim's slim, the perfect Christmas gift for him is a set of Slim Jim Swim Fins.

But if your daddy's name is Dwight and he likes to look at birds at night, the gift for Dwight that might be right is a Bright Dwight Bird-Flight Night-Sight Light.

DIVERSIONS

Holiday season is time to enjoy Christmas TV specials

The holiday season, of course, means extra time to watch TV. With carloads of barely recognizable relatives — including your eighth cousin Herb from Fat Lip, Ariz. — hanging around looking for something to do, why not flip on the old Zenith and roast by a cozy fire as you enjoy the following shows:

• "Bob Hope's Cross Country Christmas Show" To give you an idea of how long Bob's been doing these shows, the first one was held in Bethlehem. Tune in again and see normally talented people read lame sketches off of cue cards. See Bob and Dolores Hope sing "Silver Bells" as phony snow falls in the background. A must for the insomniac. (Dec. 23)

• "The Sound of Mucus — er, Music" A movie that might make you root for the Nazis, this sappy

musical features a parade of songs we've all come to know and hate. This is the 15th time the viewing public has been treated to this epic. If you missed it the other 14 times, here's your chance to miss it again. (Dec. 23)

• "Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer" No cynicism here — this is a terrific special that's sure to conjure up many fond memories of Christmas from your childhood. Unfortunately, it's already been on. It aired the day after Thanksgiving, so be sure to travel back in time (Nov. 29) and enjoy.

• "Frosty the Snowman" Again, a timeless classic that seems to be just as enjoyable today as when it first aired. You know the story (Dec. 18).

• "A Charlie Brown Christmas" Another great "Peanuts" special, this classic first aired back in 1965. Maybe it's the immature kid in me, but I enjoy this show, and the previous two I've mentioned, as much today as I did when I was a mere tot.

Things to watch for in this special: Pigpen's gripping performance as the innkeeper, the funky dance scene and Lucy's demand for disinfected after being kissed by Snoopy (Dec. 20).

• "It's A Wonderful Life" I normally don't like this type of film. They're too sentimental, too sappy (see "The Sound of Music") and a little too cornball for me, usually. This movie is the exception. Funny and moving at the same time (a rare feat in moviedom), this movie deserves its reputation as one of the great films of all time.

A recommendation: If they show it using the "magic" of colorization, turn your TV to black and white. Otherwise, you'll see Jimmy Stewart's teal suit and Donna Reed's charreuse dress. It's a terrific movie, and it should prove all the more moving when you consider the career of the man who made it, the late Frank Capra.

• "Saturday Night Live" One broadcast will be made up entirely of clips from Christmas shows dating back to 1975. Enjoy the sea of drug jokes from the '70s and the funnier, more subtle material from the '80s and '90s. See Chevy Chase fall down a bunch of times. Man, that's funny. (AUTHOR'S NOTE: That was sarcasm.) (Dec. 21)

• "Winnie the Pooh and Christmas Too" This is a new special featuring Winnie, Piglet, Eeyore, Kangaroo and Tigger, too. Though not available for preview, if past Winnie the Pooh specials are any indication, this should be worth seeing (Dec. 14).

• "A Wish For Wings That Work" This is the first animated TV special ever to feature characters from Berke Breathed's "Bloom County" and "Outland" comic strips. This special is the one Yuletide extravaganza I am most looking forward to, primarily because of the high caliber of humor from the two strips.

The script was written by Breathed, and the animation was produced by Steven Spielberg's Amblin Productions. Will O'Connell and Bill the cat translate to the small screen? I'll be there to find out (Dec. 18).

• "Miscellaneous" This isn't really the name of a show, though it would be interesting to see. On TV over the holidays, you can also expect to see reruns of other perennial Christmas movies, including

"White Christmas" with Bing Crosby and "Miracle on 34th Street." Many religious movies will be shown as well. Assorted made-for-TV Christmas films will be seen.

Naturally, for sports fans, dozens of bowl games will dot the dial, in addition to the regular college and pro basketball games, the close of the NFL season and the beginning of the NFL playoffs.

Your favorite weekly sitcoms and dramas will air as well, though the lower numbers of viewers will mean reruns mainly will show reruns.

So kick back, enjoy a glass of egg nog and watch a little TV in between conversations with aunts and uncles about how you're growing like a weed.

Grapes of Wrath discover their niche with 'These Days'

These Days
The Grapes of Wrath
Capitol Records

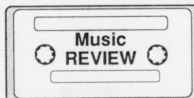

By DAVE LAVERDER
Staff Critic

The saying "You've come a long way baby" may be the best way to describe the Grapes of Wrath's rise to popularity in the contemporary music scene.

The Grapes of Wrath, a Vancouver, Canada-based quartet have etched out quite a niche for themselves with the release of their fourth album, (not counting an EP) These Days.

However, this energetic folk-rock band — which consists of Tom Hooper (bass); his brother, Chris Hooper (drums); Kevin Kane (vocals, guitar); and Vincent Jones (keyboards) — was a long way from Abbey Road when they signed with their first record label, Nettwerk, in the early 80's.

On These Days, the band achieves a powerfully passionate and notably harder-rocking recording than their previous album. These Days features Kane's dreamy lead vocals and the absolutely brilliant and tightly interwoven harmony vocals, which, especially on melodic folk ballads like "Consequence," are somewhat reminiscent of (gasp!) John Lennon and Paul McCartney.

This may appear somewhat of a lofty comparison and maybe it is, but the obvious influence of the Fab Four appears in the vocal arrangements.

It should come as no surprise then that Englishman John Leckie (XTC, the Stone Roses, the Posies) engineered the recording at Vancouver's Mushroom Studios. Leckie, who was the house engineer in the late '60s for the likes of Lennon and George Harrison, took the band to London to mix the album.

The band spent three weeks mixing at Abbey Road Studios, which was a pilgrimage of sorts for the band, who are longtime admirers of the Beatles.

The group spent an inspirational evening at the Beatles' famed Studio Two, knocking down a few local lagers, and striking up a few Fab Four tunes.

The Beatles' influence is most felt on "You May Be Right," in which the melody and spotless vocal arrangements bring remembrances of "Hey Jude."

While it is true that certain influences of the Beatles are felt, the Grapes of Wrath are a unique and separate entity, and in no way regurgitate the Beatles' style.

"You May Be Right" is a slow burner, emitting the Grapes of Wrath's new tough skin and rougher edges. It is like a musical chameleon. It begins with crunching, distorted power chords and a searing slide guitar, changing what appears to be a hard-rocking ballad, and mystically transforms it into a strange trip of psychedelia.

The Grapes of Wrath have strong ties to literature, although Chris Hooper, a film buff, caught the band's name in a movie book and not on the cover of Steinbeck's classic novel, The Grapes of Wrath.

The band began as a mirror image of the hard time, western bound "Okies" that John Steinbeck so vividly detailed in his 1939 book.

The title of their debut album,

September Bowl of Green, was taken from a Truman Capote novel.

On These Days, "A Fishing Tale," owes its existence to a bizarre short story by Tom Hooper. "A Fishing Tale" is a flashback to the Hooper brothers and Kane's teenage punk days in the group Kill Figs.

Although there is not an actual title song on the album, the title seems to capture the spirit of this captivating collage of punk, rock and folk songs, by one of the better vocal bands in the contemporary music scene.

It is definitely an album for "these days."

Foreign Language Immersion Program (FLIP) is a unique educational opportunity. This program offers instruction in Spanish 40% of the school day. It is housed at Maxwell Elementary School, a multi-cultural educational setting, close to the University of Kentucky, which allows walking field trips to different educational programs.

The goals of FLIP are:

- Fluency in Spanish appropriate to age level;
- Cross-cultural understanding; and
- Achievement in all subjects comparable or surpassing achievement of students in English-only programs.

In the first year, FLIP children out-performed their age group by a significant margin. FLIP has a dedicated staff and multi-cultural school setting that encourages children to embrace the world.

Despite controversy, Gov. Jones endorses president of WKU

Associated Press

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. — Western Kentucky University President Thomas Meredith, who is at the center of a growing controversy, received an almost unqualified endorsement yesterday from Gov. Brereton Jones.

And a university regent has accused some colleagues of being on a "witch hunt" as auditors review expenses incurred by Meredith and his wife.

"At this point, I have 100 percent confidence in Dr. Meredith," Jones said. "I think that he not only is a competent president, I think he's way above average. He's the type of person that we need to support and to give the right kind of positive signal to."

A committee overseeing an audit of some WKU accounts submitted a list of audit requirements Tuesday to the university's auditing firm. Nearly all of the expenses were incurred by the Merediths.

It includes an itemized list of university employees hired since Aug. 30, 1988, when Meredith took office; a detailed listing of where interest earned on the university's General Fund goes and how it's used; a list of honorariums and other fees authorized by Meredith since August 1988; travel expenses for Meredith and his family since he took office; and entertainment expenses incurred by the president.

Regent Stephen Catron of Bowling Green, who attended the committee's meeting as a spectator, accused some of his fellow regents of being on a "witch hunt."

Some community leaders said Tuesday that a group which previously spoke in support of Meredith plans to meet again in the next few days to discuss firing another salvo at the regents.

Ray Preston of Henderson said in an interview Tuesday that the regents "seem determined to nipitck (Meredith) to death ... to run off one of the best presidents Western's ever had."

Preston, for whom Western's $10 million student health and activities center will be named, called Meredith "the deciding factor" in his 1990 decision to give the university its single largest donation. The amount is between $750,000 and $850,000, but Preston has declined to allow public release of the actual amount.

Meredith, in Frankfort on Tuesday for Jones' inauguration, said he hadn't received any information from the committee and couldn't comment on specifics.

"I welcome any audit of any expenditures," he said.

Regent Fred Travis of Glasgow, a member of the audit committee who said he supports Meredith, objected repeatedly to a limitation on the audit request's label, "Items to be audited ... covering the period 8-30-88 to present."

He said many of the practices being questioned began several administrations ago and that any review by the auditors should cover those years.

Regent Patsy Judd denied after the meeting that the audit was aimed at Meredith.

"That's not my conclusion at all," she said. "Food Services is losing money and we need to find out why and fix that."

Economy threatens charities

Associated Press

Demands are up, but donations are down at some charitable and public service organizations preparing to make this a better Christmas for Kentucky's needy families.

Playing the part of Scrooge is the economy, which has prompted many people to cut back on contributions.

"Our donations have been on a decline for the past two years," said Maj. Charles White, coordinator for the Salvation Army in the Louisville area. "As the economy gets tighter, we get more requests for assistance."

White said Christmas kettle contributions are running slightly ahead of 1990 "but that's because this is the centennial for that program. It also was helped by a 100-hour telethon."

He said that "lots of folks are jobless and barely able to keep a roof over their head. We have appeals from at least 6,000 families."

At the Family Service center in Paducah, public contributions also are down, said Sharon Zimmerman.

She said one bright note is the Sponsorship program, under which companies come in and select families that they will help.

In Lexington, some charitable groups are finding that their contributors' pockets simply are not as deep this year.

"My sense is that the people who used to send us $10 are sending $5 now, or maybe $1," says Nancy Lester, executive director of the Community Kitchen/Horizon Center, which serves the homeless and people who are at-risk of becoming homeless.

A mass-mail appeal in November helped "even out" the Horizon Center's financial needs, Lester said. But donations of Christmas presents for distribution to clients still are running low, she said.

Toys for Tots, the Lexington Fire Department's 60-year-old program to provide Christmas toys for needy youngsters, has hit an all-time low, officials said. The program relies heavily on donations of toys, but this year they are not coming in.

"The new and used toy situation is terrible," said the fire department's Lt. Bart Powell. "We kind of anticipated a shortfall this year, but nothing this severe."

The pace of giving also has slowed for the city of Grayson's Project Merry Christmas, said project secretary Robert Caummissar.

"We're in a recession, and the people who are still working are afraid that maybe they won't be sometime soon," Caummissar said. The program is about $4,000 short of its projected $13,000 need.

"We've sent letters inviting about 1,000 needy people to come in and pick up something like $13,000 worth of food, toys and stuff. These folks are going to show up expecting to receive something, so we're going to have to come up with that somehow."

Christian Social Services, a Morehead-based group that provides a variety of social services, is $2,000 behind on contributions, said spokesman Mary Westcott.

"We'll have to cut back a bit on what we do for Christmas because we depend on some of that money for programs the rest of the year," she said. "Contributors seem to be saying, 'We wish we could do more, but this is the best we can do right now.'" few days after Oct. 27.

He also said he believes the victim and the suspect had not met before the evening of the incident, but said he had seen her in the fraternity house on prior occasions.

Smith said the alleged victim has returned to the fraternity house on "two separate occasions," since the rape allegedly took place. He said several people reported to him that she returned on the nights of the Phi Kappa Psi haunted house.

McPherson has "readily agreed" to take a police polygraph test, Smith said.

UK Police are conducting an investigation with Lexington police.

David Stockham, dean of students, said while the issue is one of great concern, his office is not actively involved with the police investigation.

"We're aware of the case. It is currently in the hands of police and we will let the case be taken to its conclusion before there is any University involvement," he said.

"The student could be charged under the student code under that offense assuming it's not an allegation and indeed the facts are borne out."

Stockham would not discuss possible punishments.

Kentucky Revised Statute

510.040 Rape in the first degree

- (1) A person is guilty of rape in the first degree when:
- (a) He engages in sexual intercourse with another person by forcible compulsion; or
 - (b) He engages in sexual intercourse with another person who is incapable of consent because he:
 - (i) Is physically helpless; or
 - (ii) Is less than 12 years old.
- (2) Rape in the first degree is a Class B felony unless the victim is under 12 years old or receives a serious physical injury in which case it is a Class A felony.

Rape in the first degree: KRS 510.040 presents three factual situations in which an accused is deemed guilty of rape in the first degree. Subsection (1)(a) prohibits sexual intercourse with another person by forcible compulsion as that term is defined in KRS 510.010(2). The essential element under subsection (1)(a) is the use of force. Force is not restricted to physical force but includes the threat that overcomes earnest resistance and places the victim in fear of immediate death, physical injury or kidnapping of himself or another person. The ages of the defendant and the victim are immaterial. Except in cases of statutory rape, evidence of the victim's prior unchastity is relevant and admissible on the question of consent. ...

KRS 510.040 will make little substantive change in former Kentucky law. The penetration requirement is the same, and no corroboration is required.

However, KRS 510.030 allows a defense that the defendant at the time he engaged in sexual intercourse did not know of the facts or conditions responsible for the victim's incapacity to consent, including age.

Paying for college has never been easy.

But you can make it a lot easier. Join the Army National Guard and see a world of benefits. Like up to $5,000 in education assistance. Plus an additional $2,000 enlistment bonus. Plus a minimum salary of $11,000 over the course of a six-year enlistment.

There are big bucks for college in the Montgomery GI Bill.

All for about two days a month — and two weeks a year.

You'll discover many other benefits, too. New dimensions of experience and training. PX and commissary privileges. Retirement benefits and low-cost life insurance. Even opportunities to travel on military flights when space permits.

And most important: you'll be there when people in your community need your help most.

That gives you a good feeling. Along with four years of college assistance.

For one weekend a month, and two weeks a year.

Give Pitino a chance to fulfill his promise and stay at UK

It's that time of year again. It's the season for Christmas wish lists, and this year my No. 1 gotta-have, can't-do-without item is probably the same as UK coach Rick Pitino's.

No, it's not another set of cuff links to go with my newest Armani (sigh). It's not an all-expense paid trip to Minneapolis for later in March.

Sure, all those things are great. But all I really want from Santa this year is to see the end to all of the rumors and all of the stories about Pitino's imminent departure from UK — once and for all.

It's at the point now that I pick up the Lexington Herald-Leader and the Kentucky Kernel in fear each morning, ready to scream if I see the words: Pitino denies he will leave UK.

But as reliable as old Santa is (21 years without failing to come through), this one may be tough for the old guy to pull together so late in the season.

In the past 12 months, Pitino "reportedly" — and I use the term loosely here since we are talking about New York media — has been offered jobs with the New Jersey Nets and New York Knicks. The Kernel also has learned the Harlem Globetrotters are about ready to make an offer. They are the only team left in the Big Apple who hasn't done so already.

Pitino, to his frustration, has gone to great lengths in his unsuccessful attempts to dispel the rumors. Most recently, he has addressed the issue of his leaving in:

-his postgame radio show Tuesday after the Southwest Texas State massacre;

-yet another feature story in Gentlemen's Quarterly magazine;

-an interview with CBS for their "At the Hall" segment during intermission of the Indiana game Saturday; and

-an unscheduled press conference, which was called last month to reassure top recruit Roderick Rhoades that Pitino would fulfill his current contract (which, by the way, extends through the 1995-1996 season).

Bobby KING

But despite all of the trouble poor Rick has gone to, he still hasn't convinced everybody he is serious about this.

Maybe he has been going about it all wrong. Maybe he should try to enlist a medium that the people truly believe in, say, the National Enquirer for instance.

I can see the headlines now: PITINO TO STAY FOREVER AT KENTUCKY: "I like it here. I even own a horse," Coach says."

Unfortunately, given Pitino's exploration of America that has been unequaled since the days of Lewis and Clark, that probably would seem more ridiculous than WOMAN GIVES BIRTH TO BABY ELEPHANT — NATURALLY.

I mean, let's face it, the best job in America in the 1980s has been the one Pitino's Century 21 agent has had. He spent two years at Boston University, two at Providence College, and two at the Knicks.

So now that Pitino is in his third year at UK it shouldn't surprise anyone that people are looking for signs that he may be itching to leave. That's a lot of moving, a lot of new homes. And think of what he has done for U-Haul. They probably make long-range plans around his moves. Maybe it's more than just a coincidence that the economy has been sliding the past year or so. Pitino hasn't moved in a while. That cuts into profits. People lose jobs.

So what's a guy like Rick, who wants to make people believe he finally wants to plant his roots for a while, supposed to do? He could testify before the Senate, pleading his case that he won't break his contract. But, as we have seen, those Senate things can get ugly, especially if they talk to the people from Boston, Providence or the Knicks.

Two things I don't understand in all of this is: a) Why does Pitino continue to cry about hearing his name mentioned for every job opening that comes up? and b) Why does the entire Commonwealth shudder with each of these questionable reports?

As far as "a" is concerned, Pitino should realize that he created this problem himself by keeping a bag packed in the closet for every plum job that came his way in the last decade.

As for "b," why should we be surprised? This was part of the Pitino package. Many Kentuckians probably believed that just because this was UK, those rumors would never surface. Well, you were wrong.

Personally, I believe Pitino will fulfill his current contract and then probably hit the road again. My only basis for that opinion is the fact that he has held the entire free world that he promised sophomore sensation Jamal Mashburn and Rhoades that he would see them graduate.

It is one thing to back out on a contract, but quite another to break a promise to an 17-year-old kid. If he did that, his credibility would be shot for good.

The bottom line in all of this nonsense, though, is that UK will survive if Pitino leaves just as it did when Adolph Rupp retired. There will still be a basketball team and it will still win many games.

So sit back and enjoy Christmas and don't worry about whether Rick Pitino will be here when Santa comes next year. And Santa, if you're reading the Kernel, the milk and cookies will be there, pal. The question is, can you come through for me?

Morehead Eagles no easy prey for Cats

By JOHN KELLY
Assistant Sports Editor

Morehead State basketball is a scaled down version of the run-and-gun style made famous by Loyola-Marymount.

Morehead is averaging 104 points per game and tallied 135 against West Virginia State in its season opener. In the following game, the Eagles scored 130 points against Thomas Moore College.

High-scoring Morehead relies a great deal on their three-point shot, more than any team UK has played this season, Pitino said. And UK is preparing to see the same kind of three-point barrage tonight in its matchup with Morehead at 8 in Louisville Freedom Hall.

"This will be our toughest test at defending the three," Pitino said.

But UK sophomore Jamal Mashburn isn't worried about Morehead possibly running off 130 points against UK.

"We're not looking to match them," Mashburn said. "We're basically looking to stop it. We don't want anybody to score 130 points. I really doubt that any team could score 130 points with the type of defense that we play."

UK coach Rick Pitino, who had joked before the Indiana game that his team might have to try to slow Morehead down, said yesterday at practice that his team is not worried about playing an up-tempo game.

"We don't mind getting caught in a shootout," Pitino said. "Don't get me wrong. We're not going to score this game down. We've got to be conscious of defending the things they do well. If we run up and down with them and don't defend the three and don't stop (Brett) Roberts then we're going to have a difficult night."

Roberts is Morehead's workhorse. Averaging 30.6 points, he leads Morehead in three pointers with 13. He scored 47 points in the Eagles' victory over UNC-Greensboro.

Mashburn echoed the idea that a fast-paced game is not something that UK has a problem with.

"We're conditioned to do that at the beginning of the season," Mashburn said. "We do a lot of running and we don't want to slow it down. That's our type of game."

Reds bolster lineup by adding Montreal's Martinez, Ruskin and minor league player

By JIM DONAGHY
Associated Press

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — Cincinnati continued its flurry of winter meetings activity yesterday by trading right-handers John Wetteland and Bill Risley to Montreal for outfielder Dave Martinez, reliever Scott Ruskin and a minor-leaguer.

Wetteland, 25, was acquired along with pitcher Tim Belcher on Nov. 27 when the Reds sent outfielder Eric Davis to Los Angeles.

Since the end of the season, the Reds also have added pitcher Greg Swindell and infielder-outfielder Bip Roberts.

Martinez, 27, hit a career-high .295 for Montreal last season with seven homers and 42 RBIs. He batted .352 over his final 52 games in 1991.

"We feel we have improved the club in almost every area," Reds general manager Bob Quinn said. "We still may do a few more things, too."

Martinez, 27, has excellent speed and is a superb defensive center fielder.

Ruskin, 28, was 4-4 with a 4.24 ERA in 64 games for the Expos. The left-hander joins Rob Dibble and Norm Charlton in the bullpen.

helping to make up for the loss of Randy Myers, who was traded to San Diego for Roberts on Sunday.

"Give everybody in this organization credit," Reds manager Lou Piniella said. "We have worked hard since the end of the season to make this team better."

Cincinnati is projected to have one of the best starting rotations next season with Jose Rijo, Tom Browning, Swindell and Belcher.

"There will be a lot of competition for jobs in the outfield and that's always healthy," Piniella said.

The Reds also acquired infielder Willie Greene in the deal. He hit 12 homers at Class A West Palm Beach last season. Wetteland, a hard thrower, was 4-3 with a 2.79 for Class AAA Albuquerque of the Pacific Coast League. He was 1-0 in six late-season appearances for the Dodgers. Wetteland will be a candidate for a spot in the Expos' starting rotation.

Risley, 24, was 5-7 with a 3.19 ERA in 19 games for Class AAA Chattanooga and 3-5 at Class AAA Nashville.
