MEMORIAL RESOLUTION

Ira Evan Massie

Ira Evan Massie, retired Agronomy Extension Specialist, died January 6, 1987. He was 67.

A native of Scott County, Kentucky, he received his B.S. and M.S. degrees from the University of Kentucky. He began his career with the College of Agriculture Certified Seed Program in 1953, after which he worked in Agronomy Extension until his retirement on June 30, 1983.

Mr. Massie's contributions to the College of Agriculture's tobacco extension program included dissemination of research information to the tobacco growers through the use of field trials and demonstrations, meetings with growers and other individuals interested in the production of tobacco, and use of mass media such as radio, television and printed publications. He was a pioneer in the use of mass media for tobacco extension, having a weekly program on WKYT-TV known as "Tobacco Talk" for approximately twenty-five years. He also made extensive use of weekly radio broadcasts on several stations. After his retirement from the University, he continued his weekly television programs on WKYT-TV until approximately two months before his death. These programs covered many areas of agriculture as well as tobacco.

*Absence explained

Mr. Massie served on several tobacco related committees throughout his career including the Industry Sales Committee, Kentucky Farm Bureau Tobacco Committee, Council for Burley Tobacco, Burley Farmer's Advisory Council and the Governor's Commission on Agriculture. He was also a consultant to the Tobacco Institute in Washington, D. C. and to corporations involved with tobacco, for which he traveled world-wide.

Mr. Massie served his country in World War II with the United States Marine Corps Air Force for six and one-half years as an aerial photographer in a long-range reconnaissance squadron in the South Pacific. He was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal with several Oak Leaf Clusters for his efforts in World War II.

Memberships in agriculture honorary societies include Gamma Sigma Delta and Epsilon Sigma Phi. He received the Meritorious Service Award from the Epsilon Sigma Phi Society.

Other awards he received during his career are the Certificate of Service to Agriculture from the Kentucky Department of Agriculture and he was appointed a Kentucky Colonel by two Governors of Kentucky.

Mr. Massie was a member of Calvary Baptist Church in Lexington, serving as Superintendent of Sunday School for several years and as a member of many other committees in his church.

Professor Hiatt requested that the resolution be entered into these minutes and that a copy be sent to Mrs. Massie.

Chairman Frye recognized Professor Hubert Martin, Jr., Department of Classics, who read the following memorial resolution on Lawrence S. Thompson, Professor of Classics.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTION

Lawrence S. Thompson
1916-1986

On April 19, 1986, Lawrence S. Thompson, Professor of Classics at the University of Kentucky and Honorary Member of the Council of the Bibliographical Society of America, died unexpectedly in his sixty-ninth year, still in the midst of an amazingly varied and productive career as scholar, teacher, and humanist. An inaugural member of the University's present Department of Classical Languages and Literatures when it was established in 1970, he had previously served the University for eighteen years (1948-1966) as its Director of Libraries and was, in addition to being a librarian and a classicist, also a Germanist, a Scandinavian scholar, a bibliographer, an editor, and a publisher. Until the day before his death, he was energetically engaged in activities associated with virtually every area of his professional knowledge and academic interests.

Professor Thompson came to the University of Kentucky in 1948 as its Director of Libraries. He brought with him an educational and professional record that included an A.B. and Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina, an intervening M.A. from the University of Chicago, an A.B.L.S. from the University of Michigan, and experience as a librarian at Iowa State College and as head librarian at Western Michigan College. His career as a librarian was temporarily interrupted during the war years by a period of service as a special agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, with assignments in New York City and Latin America. The range of his academic and personal interests is reflected in the diverse list of professional and antiquarian societies in which he maintained an active membership. This list includes, among many such organizations, the Filson Club, the Kentucky Folklore Society (of which he was President in 1965), the Grolier Club, the Association Internationale de Bibliophilie, the Southeastern Library Association, the Bibliographical Society of America, the Society for the Advancement of Scandinavian Studies, and the Classical Association of the Middle West and South. Both the Southeastern Library Association and the Council of the Bibliographical Society recognized his scholarly achievements and professional services by awarding him an honorary membership.

In the citation announcing the latter award, it was Professor Thompson's distinguished performance as book-review editor for the Bibliographical Society's Papers that was selected for special commendation. He was also the editor of innumerable bibliographic compilations, among which are the multi-volume New Sabin and such varied titles as, for example, Bibliography of French Revolutionary Pamphlets and Bibliography of Classical Dissertations in Germany, 1947-1972. But Lawrence Thompson the scholar was far more than only an editor and a bibliographer, as significant as his accomplishments in these areas were; for he wrote much, and he did it with ease and grace. In the process, he established himself as an international authority in the areas of the making of the book and the transmission and preservation of the written word. To cite an outstanding example of his scholarship, the vast series of articles, many of them quite long, which he has published in recent years in the Encyclopedia of Library and Information Science constitutes a monument of humane learning. For many years to come, these articles will be read and consulted -- and will long remain a point of primary and major reference for anyone seriously interested in the history of printing or the history of libraries.

Professor Martin requested that this resolution be entered into the minutes of the University Senate and that copies be sent to Professor Thompson's children.

The Senate stood for a moment of silent tribute.

Chairman Wilbur Frye made the following announcements and remarks:

"The results of the first ballot for the Board of Trustees election are in. The three nominees with the highest number of votes were Mary Sue Coleman, Biochemistry with 164 votes; Ward Crowe, Veterinary Science, 237 votes; and Marcus McEllistrem, Physics, 142 votes. A second ballot will be prepared soon and sent out for your voting on these three candidates.

Connie Wilson, the retiring Board of Trustee member, will present her Trustee report at the next Senate Meeting on March 9.

April 16 is the date selected to honor President Singletary on his retirement. Please mark your calendar for that afternoon. Tentative plans include dedication of the Center for the Arts, a brief Convocation, a reception and perhaps other activities that have not been planned yet. Also, to honor President Singletary on his retirement, Brad Canon will write a Senate Resolution which will be embossed in a plaque and presented to President Singletary at a future Senate meeting.

The Presidential Search Committee is meeting often now and is into an intensive phase of the search. We seem to be making splendid progress."

The Chair recognized Professor Donald Leigh (Engineering Mechanics), Chairman of the Committee on Honorary Degrees, for the presentation of the honorary degree candidates. Chairman Frye reminded the Senate that the names were to be kept confidential until they had been approved by the Board of Trustees. Following Professor Leigh's presentation, the Senators unanimously approved the acceptance of the four (4) candidates for recommendation to the President.

The Chair recognized Professor William Lyons, Chair-elect of the Senate Council. Professor Lyons, on behalf of the Senate Council, moved approval of the proposed change in University Senate Rules, Section V-2.4.1 and 2.4.2 Attendance in Class and Excused Absences. Professor Lyons said the policy was not one aimed at requirements. When the Senate made the policy for excused absences, there was confusion over what the rule meant. He said some instructors used attendance in calculating grades. He said the proposed rule was not designed to suggest that instructors use attendance in their grading policy. The policy states, "If attendance is required or serves as a criterion for a grade in a course, a student shall have the right to petition for a "W" if he or she has excused absences in excess of one-fifth of the class contact hours for that course." The proposal was circulated to members of the Senate on January 16, 1987.

The Chair said the proposal needed no second since it came from the Senate Council. The floor was opened for discussion of the motion.

Chairman Frye recognized Student Senator Cyndi Weaver who offered an amendment to the proposed change. The amendment would delete the words "attendance in class" in the second paragraph. The following would be inserted:

"participation in class activities, absences at announced or unannounced examinations"

"No instructor shall adopt a policy imposing a reduction in grade on the basis of class attendance."

On page 2, she said that "attendance" should be changed to "participation."

The amendment was seconded. Chairman Frye recognized Vice Chancellor Donald Sands. Dr. Sands felt the proposed amendment was going in the wrong direction than where the University should be going. The Southern Association is moving toward requiring stiffer measures of achievement. He said the academic reputation of the University is being improved. Meanwhile, twenty-five percent of the freshman class does not return. Capable students are failing classes. He encouraged faculty to take attendance, especially in 100 level courses, and to abolish the myth that it does not matter if one goes to class. In response Student Senator Cyndi Weaver said it was difficult for her to see that for a student to sit in his/her seat and be graded would upgrade the academic standards of the University. She felt there were two reasons that a student would go to class. First, if the student wanted to participate in the activities going on in the class or secondly, the lecture is valuable to the student. Her argument was that a valuable lecture had a built in part of the student's grade already. She felt to penalize a student on the basis of whether or not he/she is sitting in a chair is a very poor standard.

Professor Hans Gesund (Civil Engineering) agreed and said he did not have an attendance policy. However, he was sick and tired of everybody infringing on the prerogative of the instructor to decide policies for his/her own classes. He said the instructors should run a class the way that instructor sees fit. He did not feel that 1199 faculty members should be put in a straitjacket because there may be one poor one. He felt it was very much a matter of academic freedom. He was against making any more rules about conduct in classes.

Student Senator John Menkhaus from the College of Fine Arts said the amendment was not to remove any power from the faculty, but it was to increase the academic quality of the classroom. He wanted students to participate in class more. He said facts and figures should not be taught as much as the process in which to gain those facts and figures. He said he had problems when a professor read the textbook and there was no discussion.

Professor William Lyons (Political Science) asked for clarification on 2.4.2 Excused Absences and wanted to know if that section was to be deleted. Student Senator Weaver said 2.4.2 referred to all excused absences. Professor Lyons said if no instructor under any condition could ever base a grade on attendance then another section cannot state that attendance is required and serves as a criterion for a grade in a course.

Professor Ronald Atwood (Curriculum and Instruction) said if all the courses at the University were dull, uninteresting and faculty read to students from a book, then the recommended policy would be necessary, but he did not believe that was true. He said there were courses that had practical experiences in them. He liked the notion of having students involved in class. He did not understand how students could participate if they were not in class.

Professor Michael Cibull (Pathology) did not see how a professor reading from the textbook had anything to do with the proposed amendment to the rule which applied strictly to attendance. He did not feel that problem in education could be answered by amending just one rule. He endorsed the point about leaving it to the prerogative of the instructor to make decisions on whether or not class attendance is required.

Professor James Kemp (Animal Sciences) said in the College of Agriculture many of the classes were hands-on classes and most of the teaching was done in small groups in laboratory style. There is no way to participate if a student does not attend. Therefore, he felt the proposed amendment had no place in the proposed policy on attendance. Student Senator Weaver said a student could not participate by not attending class, but a student could be forced to attend a class that had no participatory requirement. She added that the point was that an instructor could grade on participation. Obviously a student must attend to participate. Ms. Weaver read a letter from a student which stated the problems that some students have in trying to attend class, work, take care of a home, etc. The letter stated, "To be double penalized by a strict attendance law would seriously harm students in those situations." Ms. Weaver said that she was not asking faculty to reduce their academic standards but to take into consideration faculty that do not have that high of an academic standard. She did not want faculty to use an attendance requirement as a crutch.

Professor Allan Butterfield (Chemistry) spoke in support of Professor Sands' remarks. It seemed to him the genesis of the argument is that in some isolated cases there may be those who are not doing their best job in presenting material to the students. He felt those should be handled on a case-by-case basis. He added, "To tie our hands by this rather rigid policy seems absolutely incorrect." Some classes at the University have to be huge. It would be impossible to have participation every day in those classes. He felt that the University is trying to retain the students from the freshman year and to do that students simply have to attend classes, especially physics and chemistry and the other sciences.

Professor Paul Eakin (Mathematics) was confused about what participation is. He said in some classes homework was due every day. If a student did not attend class, he/she would lose credit for that day's homework. He wanted to know if that was participation. Student Senator Weaver said if the instructor's policy was that a student must come to class to hand in homework, that was not disallowed in the amendment. She said participation was class activity. Professor Eakin said coming to class was a responsibility and a collective enterprise. He said it was information flowing from one participant to another.

Professor Alan Perreiah (Philosophy) also felt there was a problem with what participation means. It seemed to him that it should either mean the same thing as attendance in which case the amendment was irrelevant and should be defeated or it means something different. He said many students participated in class by proxy. They simply send someone to the lecture. He said that could be called participation and the only way to put a stop to that was to have education where there is a personal commitment. He said one of the most important things that goes on in education is overhearing what other students are saying. He felt much was lost when students were not in class. He was opposed to the amendment.

Professor Lisa Barclay (Family Studies) felt the meaning of participation in the amendment was extremely vague. She did have a class requirement whereby a portion of the grade would be determined by participation. Students did not think that was fair so she changed the requirement to class attendance. She takes off for a certain number of unexcused absences. She said she was now being asked to go back the other way.

Student Senator Jody Hanks (Business and Economics) pointed out what the amendment was saying is that it is the students' responsibility to make sure that they come to class. If a student misses class, he/she would be the one to suffer. He felt a participation policy would encourage students to attend class. What the students wanted to get away from was forcing class attendance. He said students should be treated as adults.

Professor Constance Wood moved the previous question. Motion was seconded and passed unanimously. The amendment failed in a voice vote.

In discussion on the original motion Professor Carolyn Bratt (College of Law) questioned the last statement in 2.4.2 which stated, "If attendance is required or serves as a criterion for a grade in a course, a student shall have the right to petition for a "W" if he/she has excused absences in excess of one-fifth of the class contact hours for that course." She wanted to know why the student had to go through a formal procedure if he/she has complied with the excused absence policy and notified the professor ahead of time. Professor William Lyons (Political Science) said the only excused absences the instructors know about upfront pertained to religious holidays. It is conceivable that a student would hit the one-fifth contact hour point sometime after the formal drop period. A student could later in the semester petition to his/her dean for a withdrawal for an extraordinary reason.

Professor Gesund had trouble understanding the need for the rule because if a student had been ill, had a series of deaths in the family, going on trips--physical or metaphysical nature--or have a religious holiday every Tuesday, that student can petition for a "W" in any case under the present rules. He did not feel there should be a need for the additional proposal. He had trouble with the instructor having to let the student have a fifth of all contact hours off for excused absences before anything can be done. He felt one-tenth was already generous. He said classes should come first, therefore he was against the proposal.

Student Senator Lisa Corum (Communications) said that what the proposal was trying to clarify was many students had trouble coming to the one-tenth time in the previous rule. She added there are times when working students simply cannot attend class, and there are students who work to put themselves through school. She felt that the one-fifth class participation was good and should be passed. Student Senator Weaver said it was entirely possible that because of excused absences a student might suffer when those absences reached close to one-fifth. A student would suffer on the exams due to not being in class. She said that would be double penalizing a student.

Professor Gesund had no problem with giving students a break except in those courses of a laboratory nature. If a student is absent, the work of the group to which he/she is assigned is severely handicapped. He said there had to be some pressure on the students so that they would come to class regularly. Student Senator Weaver said if students had excused absences they were not in class because they could not be there. She said instructors could dock those students all they want, but that will not make the students be in class.

There was no further discussion on the motion which passed in a voice vote. The proposed change as submitted by the Senate Council follows:

Note: Underlined portion is new; delete bracketed portion.

V. 2.4.1 Attendance and Completion of Assignments

For each course in which the student is enrolled, the student shall be expected to carry out all required work including laboratories and studios, and to take all examinations at the class period designated by the instructor.

Each instructor shall determine his/her policy regarding completion of assigned work, attendance in class, absences at announced or unannounced examinations, and excused absences in excess of one-[tenth] fifth of class contact hours (see Rule V-2.4.2 below). This policy shall be presented in writing to each class at its first or second meeting. Students' failure to comply [complete assignments, attend class, or be present for examinations in accordance] with the announced policy[ies] may result in appropriate reductions in grade as determined by the instructor [except in the case of excused absences].
(US: 11/11/85)

2.4.2 Excused Absences: (US: 11/11/85)

The following are defined as excused absences:

1. Illness of the student or serious illness of a member of the student's immediate family. The instructor shall have the right to request appropriate verification.
2. The death of a member of the student's immediate family. The instructor shall have the right to request appropriate verification.
3. Trips for members of student organizations sponsored by an academic unit, trips for University classes, and trips for participation in intercollegiate athletic events. When feasible, the student must notify the instructor PRIOR TO the occurrence of such absences, but in no case shall such notification occur more than one week after the absence. Instructors may request formal notification from appropriate university personnel to document the student's participation in such trips.
4. Major Religious Holidays. Students are responsible for notifying the instructor IN WRITING of anticipated absences due to their observance of such holidays no later than the last day for adding a class.

Students missing work due to an excused absence bear the responsibility of informing the instructor about their excused absence within one week following the period of the excused absence (except where prior notification is required), and of making up the missed work. The instructor shall, if feasible, give the student an opportunity to make up the work missed during the semester in which the absence occurred, if feasible. The student shall be given the opportunity to make up exams missed due to an excused absence during the semester in which the absence occurred, if feasible. In those instances where the nature of the course is such that classroom participation by the student is essential for evaluation, the instructor shall, if feasible, give the student an opportunity to make up the work missed during the semester in which the absence occurred.

[If, in the opinion of the instructor, excused absences in excess of one-tenth of the class contact hours or the timing of excused absences prevents the student from satisfactorily completing work for the course, the instructor shall counsel the student about the options of an I grade or withdrawal from the course for that semester.] If attendance is required or serves as a criterion for a grade in a course, a student shall have the right to petition for a "W" if he or she has excused absences in excess of one-fifth of the class contact hours for that course.

Background and Rationale:

The current absence policy was adopted by the University Senate on 11 November 1985, but some problems have arisen following implementation of the rule in the Spring Semester, 1986. The Senate Council asked the ad hoc Student Affairs Committee, chaired by Professor Michael Brooks, to examine the "trouble spots" of the rule and report to the Senate Council. That report was presented on 4 December 1986. At that meeting the Senate Council voted to recommend the above proposed revisions of the rule.

Section V - 2.4.1 as proposed will require each instructor to inform the class at its first or second meeting what his/her policy is regarding completion of assigned work, attendance in class, absences at announced or unannounced examinations, and excused absences in excess of the one-fifth of class contact hours. Furthermore, 2.4.1 and 2.4.2 will be inapplicable unless the instructor informs the class in writing of his/her policy in this regard at the first or second class meeting. In accordance with announced policies, the instructor may appropriately reduce a student's grade on account of any of the above, including excused absences.

Thus, the major effect of this proposal, if adopted, will be to allow instructors to limit the number of excused absences, which cannot be done now, to one-fifth of the class contact hours. However, the instructor is obliged to allow the student who is over the limit on excused absences to petition for a W grade.

Implementation Date: Fall Semester, 1987

NOTE: The change will be forwarded to the Rules Committee for codification.

Chairman Frye recognized Professor William Lyons for the second action item on the agenda. On behalf of the Senate Council, Professor Lyons moved approval of the proposed addition to University Senate Rules, Section VII - 6.0, Faculty Code. He said the proposal gave those filing a complaint in good faith the same procedural and substantive rights presently guaranteed the accused. This proposed addition was circulated to members of the Senate on January 19, 1987.

The motion required no second, and the floor was opened for discussion. There was no discussion and the motion, which passed unanimously, reads as follows:

Proposed Addition:

VII 6.0 a. In all proceedings under this Code, a complainant has the right:

1. to be heard as to her or his complaint;
 2. to receive a copy of any responses from the accused to the complainant's charges;
 3. not to be penalized academically or professionally for filing or processing a complaint in good faith under this code.
- b. With regard to all proceedings of the Committee, the complainant has the right:
1. to receive a copy of all rules and procedures governing the actions of the Committee in sufficient time to familiarize herself or himself with them;
 2. to have counsel or other advisor present, to question the witness(es) of the accused, and to present evidence and/or witness(es) in her or his own behalf in all Committee processes;
 3. to challenge the impartiality of anyone sitting on the Committee and to have up to two of the members of the Committee replaced.

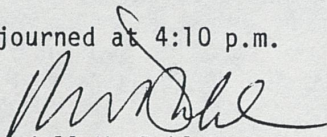

Rationale:

In a recent case of alleged sexual harassment, it was discovered that the Faculty Code section of the Senate Rules does not extend to a complainant the same rights allowed the accused faculty member. Because the complainant in this case was denied the counsel privilege granted to the accused, the serious, well-founded charges against the faculty member were almost dropped. Changes in the rules, however, are needed in cases other than those involving sexual harassment. In our present litigious atmosphere, the University regulations and policies should equally protect all parties involved in a complaint and an appeal. Otherwise, serious infractions may go unreported because the complainant feels isolated and vulnerable to reprisals or legal action.

Although these changes would guarantee the complainant the privilege of counsel during the proceedings, they would not obligate the University to provide legal counsel or other advisor for the complainant. They merely extend to the person making the complaint or accusation the same procedural and substantive rights presently guaranteed the accused.

Implementation Date: Immediately

The Chairman declared the meeting adjourned at 4:10 p.m.

Memorial Resolution

Lawrence S. Thompson
1916-1986

On April 19, 1986, Lawrence S. Thompson, Professor of Classics at the University of Kentucky and Honorary Member of the Council of the Bibliographical Society of America, died unexpectedly in his sixty-ninth year, still in the midst of an amazingly varied and productive career as scholar, teacher, and humanist. An inaugural member of the University's present Department of Classical Languages and Literatures when it was established in 1970, he had previously served the University for eighteen years (1948-1966) as its Director of Libraries and was, in addition to being a librarian and a classicist, also a Germanist, a Scandinavian scholar, a bibliographer, an editor, and a publisher. Until the day before his death, he was energetically engaged in activities associated with virtually every area of his professional knowledge and academic interests.

Professor Thompson came to the University of Kentucky in 1948 as its Director of Libraries. He brought with him an educational and professional record that included an A.B. and Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina, an intervening M.A. from the University of Chicago, an A.B.L.S. from the University of Michigan, and experience as a librarian at Iowa State College and as head librarian at Western Michigan College. His career as a librarian was temporarily interrupted during the war years by a period of service as a special agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, with assignments in New York City and Latin America. The range of his academic and personal interests is reflected in the diverse list of professional and antiquarian societies in which he maintained an active membership. This list includes, among many such organizations, the Filson Club, the Kentucky Folklore Society (of which he was President in 1965), the Grolier Club, the Association Internationale de Bibliophilie, the Southeastern Library Association, the Bibliographical Society of America, the Society for the Advancement of Scandinavian Studies, and the Classical Association of the Middle West and South. Both the Southeastern Library Association and the Council of the Bibliographical Society recognized his scholarly achievements and professional services by awarding him an honorary membership.

In the citation announcing the latter award, it was Professor Thompson's distinguished performance as book-review editor for the Bibliographical Society's Papers that was selected for special commendation. He was also the editor of innumerable bibliographic compilations, among which are the multi-volume New Sabin and such varied titles as, for example, Bibliography of French Revolutionary Pamphlets and Bibliography of Classical Dissertations in Germany, 1947-1972. But Lawrence Thompson the scholar was far more than only an editor and a bibliographer, as significant as his accomplishments in these areas were; for he wrote much, and he did it with ease and grace. In the process, he established himself as an international authority in the areas of the making of the book and the transmission and preservation of the written word. To cite an outstanding example of his scholarship, the vast series of articles, many of them quite long, which he has published in recent years in the Encyclopedia of Library and Information Science constitutes a monument of humane learning. For many years to come, these articles will be read and consulted -- and will long remain a point of primary and major reference for anyone seriously interested in the history of printing or the history of libraries.

Wanda Todd.

UNIVERSITY SENATE COUNCIL
10 ADMINISTRATION BUILDING

16 January 1987

ME

TO: Members, University Senate

FROM: University Senate Council

RE: AGENDA ITEM: University Senate Meeting, Monday, February 9, 1987. Proposed change in University Senate Rules, Section V - 2.4.1 and 2.4.2 Attendance in Class and Excused Absences. If adopted, the change will be forwarded to the Rules Committee for codification.

Note: Underlined portion is new; delete bracketed portion.

V. 2.4.1 Attendance and Completion of Assignments

For each course in which the student is enrolled, the student shall be expected to carry out all required work including laboratories and studios, and to take all examinations at the class period designated by the instructor.

Each instructor shall determine his/her policy regarding completion of assigned work, attendance in class, absences at announced or unannounced examinations, and excused absences in excess of one-~~tenth~~ fifth of class contact hours (see Rule V-2.4.2 below). This policy shall be presented in writing to each class at its first or second meeting. Students' failure to comply [complete assignments, attend class, or be present for examinations in accordance] with the announced policy[ies] may result in appropriate reductions in grade as determined by the instructor [except in the case of excused absences]. (US: 11/11/85)

2.4.2 Excused Absences: (US: 11/11/85)

The following are defined as excused absences:

1. Illness of the student or serious illness of a member of the student's immediate family. The instructor shall have the right to request appropriate verification.
2. The death of a member of the student's immediate family. The instructor shall have the right to request appropriate verification.

3. Trips for members of student organizations sponsored by an academic unit, trips for University classes, and trips for participation in intercollegiate athletic events. When feasible, the student must notify the instructor PRIOR TO the occurrence of such absences, but in no case shall such notification occur more than one week after the absence. Instructors may request formal notification from appropriate university personnel to document the student's participation in such trips.
4. Major Religious Holidays. Students are responsible for notifying the instructor IN WRITING of anticipated absences due to their observance of such holidays no later than the last day for adding a class.

Students missing work due to an excused absence bear the responsibility of informing the instructor about their excused absence within one week following the period of the excused absence (except where prior notification is required), and of making up the missed work. The instructor shall, if feasible, give the student an opportunity to make up the work missed during the semester in which the absence occurred, if feasible. The student shall be given the opportunity to make up exams missed due to an excused absence during the semester in which the absence occurred, if feasible. In those instances where the nature of the course is such that classroom participation by the student is essential for evaluation, the instructor shall, if feasible, give the student an opportunity to make up the work missed during the semester in which the absence occurred.

[If, in the opinion of the instructor, excused absences in excess of one-tenth of the class contact hours or the timing of excused absences prevents the student from satisfactorily completing work for the course, the instructor shall counsel the student about the options of an I grade or withdrawal from the course for that semester.] If attendance is required or serves as a criterion for a grade in a course, a student shall have the right to petition for a "W" if he or she has excused absences in excess of one-fifth of the class contact hours for that course.

Amendment by Cynthia Weaver

Excused Absences: 2/1987
16 January 1987

Background and Rationale:

The current absence policy was adopted by the University Senate on 11 November 1985, but some problems have arisen following implementation of the rule in the Spring Semester, 1986. The Senate Council asked the ad hoc Student Affairs Committee, chaired by Professor Michael Brooks, to examine the "trouble spots" of the rule and report to the Senate Council. That report was presented on 4 December 1986. At that meeting the Senate Council voted to recommend the above proposed revisions of the rule.

Section V - 2.4.1 as proposed will require each instructor to inform the class at its first or second meeting what his/her policy is regarding completion of assigned work, attendance in class, absences at announced or unannounced examinations, and excused absences in excess of the one-fifth of class contact hours. Furthermore, 2.4.1 and 2.4.2 will be inapplicable unless the instructor informs the class in writing of his/her policy in this regard at the first or second class meeting. In accordance with announced policies, the instructor may appropriately reduce a student's grade on account of any of the above, including excused absences.

Thus, the major effect of this proposal, if adopted, will be to allow instructors to limit the number of excused absences, which cannot be done now, to one-fifth of the class contact hours. However, the instructor is obliged to allow the student who is over the limit on excused absences to petition for a W grade.

UNIVERSITY SENATE COUNCIL
10 ADMINISTRATION BUILDING

19 January 1987

TO: Members, University Senate

FROM: Senate Council Office

RE: AGENDA ITEM: University Senate Meeting, Monday, February 9, 1987. Proposed addition to University Senate Rules, Section VII - 6.0, Faculty Code.

Proposed Addition:

- VII 6.0
- a. In all proceedings under this Code, a complainant has the right:
 - 1. to be heard as to her or his complaint;
 - 2. to receive a copy of any responses from the accused to the complainant's charges;
 - 3. not to be penalized academically or professionally for filing or processing a complaint in good faith under this code.
 - b. With regard to all proceedings of the Committee, the complainant has the right:
 - 1. to receive a copy of all rules and procedures governing the actions of the Committee in sufficient time to familiarize herself or himself with them;
 - 2. to have counsel or other advisor present, to question the witness(es) of the accused, and to present evidence and/or witness(es) in her or his own behalf in all Committee processes;
 - 3. to challenge the impartiality of anyone sitting on the Committee and to have up to two of the members of the Committee replaced.

Rationale:

In a recent case of alleged sexual harassment, it was discovered that the Faculty Code section of the Senate Rules does not extend to a complainant the same rights allowed the accused faculty member. Because the complainant in this case was denied the counsel privilege granted to the accused, the serious, well-founded charges against the faculty member were almost dropped. Changes in the rules, however, are needed in cases other than those involving sexual harassment. In our present litigious atmosphere, the University regulations and policies should equally protect all parties involved in a complaint and an appeal. Otherwise, serious infractions may go unreported because the complainant feels isolated and vulnerable to reprisals or legal action.

Although these changes would guarantee the complainant the privilege of counsel during the proceedings, they would not obligate the University to provide legal counsel or other advisor for the complainant. They merely extend to the person making the complaint or accusation the same procedural and substantive rights presently guaranteed the accused.
