

"Examination of the handling of submarine crews during World War II showed that all the European participants hit on a common solution to the dangers of intragroup conflict within the confined space of the submarine- continuous access to food."

Mead