Dear Mr. Monkhouse

I fear I may not be at home when you kindly call, for if it does not rain I have to drive out at 5.

But I have looked carefully thru' the proof, & have suggested a few trifling changes in pencil - which I trust may not puzzle you. I think I may certainly say that the Gaston de Voix is not in the National Gallery, but in the possession of Mrs Bolekow (who lent it to the Manchester Exhibition) & I do believe I am right in saying that the large Napoleon picture (with several figures) belongs to Lord Decon.

I should like to have seen you - but perhaps you may have time to give me a visit at some other time.

I must add that I like your paper very much & feel for kind references to myself.

Yours very truly

Elizabeth
