

Tisdall

LONDON-ENG.
12
-SP 17.
74

W. Harrison Amworth Esq.

Little Rockley.

Hurstpierpoint Sussex

Tisdall

of the work. which was highly encouraging. I would its close I gave a severe & well deserved castigation to the religious(?) puffing of the present day.

Wishing to hear from you occasionally when you have leisure to write for though we be strangers. You are an old friend of mine through your works. with which I am very familiar.

I remain

Dear Mr Amisworth.

Very faithfully yours

Charles Edward Keble DD
Chancellor of Christ Ch. Cathedral
Dublin

22 Herbert Place.

Dublin.

Merrion Square

Sept. the 12th

1874.

Dear Mr Amisworth.

I am greatly obliged to you for your very kind & prompt answer please with my requests. It was very good of you to take all the trouble of copying into the extract from your "Tower of London": & the translations - Your paper is fastened into the second volume of my choice collection of autographs. On the opposite page is one of the sheets of a novel in the handwriting of the late Capt. Maryatt, given me when I was in London this year by his talented daughter Mrs.

Pope Church. —

Allow me, in some measure, to pay you "in kind" by sending you some lines which I wrote on four or rather ago in a circumstance which was recorded in a Liverpool Paper about Barry Sullivan. (Charles Matthews to whom I read them, when I met him at the dinner given to look at Willis' rooms in July last, enjoyed them greatly. & said they were good. I should like your opinion. Of course Barry Sullivan has not seen them, nor could I wish them ever to come under his eye.

Some, some years ago, an Essay on "Modern Puffing": which I believe is out of print, but I shall try to get you a copy, from some friend who has it. Poor Charles Dickens, whom I knew well the the latter years of his life, wrote me his opinion