

nine years ago. I hope the ^{above} mentioned offer will at last bring to his Council

I am interested in what you tell me about the publication of Carlyle's letters to Lady A. John Austin told me a wild romance about that business of which I did not believe any word. Lady A. liked the devotion of the more remarkable men of the age and Carlyle liked to pay her homage. - Mr C. resented it & that was all. You do not tell me who is bringing out this correspondence

I suppose as the only remaining explanation

I ought to have been consulted. - but they can do as they please

I am faithfully

J. A. Roade

Woodstock

Salisbury

Kingscliff

May 28

My dear Sir Beldrye

Your letter has made a death wound in heart of me

I have left London for good and my regular home is now Oxford. There for good as before. I now officiate as a Performer. ... My terms work bring on I came away three days ago and am now settled for the summer down on the sea.

Olidossa Kdúzel TT&TTd
Tá 2VOpúTTw Káka

I hope Olidossa will work away with the rest the death of humanity lectures

I am then unable to name any times or means for seeing you unless you could be tempted to come down to us here. In going away from London I seem to have parted with every survivor of my old friends. now at last getting travelling fast. If you will not or cannot come into Devonshire perhaps some day you will give us a Saturday or Sunday at Oxford

Sir George Grey paid me a short visit last week, he is a very remarkable old man & his perceptibly altered since I staid with him at Kawan