

EVERSLEY,
WOPPLE ROAD, EPSOM.

Sept 24. 95.

Dear Henry,

I hope, I think, believe that I shall be able to get down to Romney next Saturday - if that be quite agreeable to you. I shall have to be done, for several reasons. One of them is that the Youth has just got over a severe cold, & I fear the risk of travelling with him. He goes to school now, & another cold would probably keep him at home for a fortnight.

There is a fine train leaving Charing Cross at 11, which reaches ^{near} Romney

EVERETT WORLD ROAD
ESSEX

at 1.50. Of course I can find my way to the library. Unfortunately,
I must needs get back on the Monday, but this will leave us time enough to talk over the matter's ill.

Always yours,
George S. [Signature]

GISSING, George (1857-1903).
Author, Epsom.

A.L.S. to Dr. Harry Hick.
24 Sept. 1895. 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ p. (double sheet, octavo.) with embossed address of Eversley, Epsom.

Gissing arranges to spend a weekend with his good friend, Dr. Hick. He will not bring his son, who has just gotten over a cold.

Eversley,
Worple Road,
Epsom.
Sept. 24th, '95.

Dear Harry.

I hope, and think, and believe that I shall be able to get down to Romney next Saturday - if that be quite agreeable to you. I shall have to be alone, for several reasons. One of them is that the Youth has just got over a severe cold, and I fear the risk of travelling with him. He goes to school now, and another cold would probably keep him at home for a fortnight.

There is a fine train leaving Charing Cross at 11, which reaches New Romney at 1.50. Of course I can find my way to the Priory. Unfortunately, I must needs go back on the Monday, but this will leave us time enough to talk and laugh over the world's ills.

Always yours,

GEORGE GISSING