

My dear Sir, Pray return my best thanks to your father for his little volume. It is like all of his I have seen, spry, good humored, and redolent of the wit & humour of a century ago. He should have lived with Gay & his set.
The Chefsid is so clever that I relish'd it in spite of my total ignorance of the game. I have it not before me, but I remember a capital simile of the Charwoman letting in her Watchman husband, which is better than Butler's lobster turned to Red. Hazard is a grand Character, Jove in his Chair. When you are disposed to leave your own room for my six, Goldbrook is where it was, and my sister begs me to add that as she is disappointed of meeting your sister your way, we shall be most happy to see her our way when you have an even's to spare. Do not stand on ceremonies & introductions

Mr. Wilson

113 Cheapside

113 Cheapside

13520 but come at once. I need not say that if you can induce your father to join the party, it will be so much the pleasanter. Can you name an evening next week?

give you long credit.

Meanwhile am as usual

Yours Truly

Yours Truly

11 Jan 25

Yours Truly

When I ^{saw} the Utopian advertised by C. D. the Younger, I hoped it might be yours. What title is left for you -

Charles Seddon the Younger, Junior.

O. S., you are Timothy