

41
London Middlesex March 15. 1791.

Mr Bentham presents his Compliments to Mr Nepean, and in consequence of his obliging promise, takes the liberty of sending another parcel for Ireland. If it were not giving too much trouble he would wish much to know by what conveyance and by what time the parcels are likely to go, his conjecture being that they will go by the return of the Messenger who brought the money-bills, and by whom Mr Bentham has received a packet from Mr Secretary Cook, as he supposes by favour of Mr Nepean.

He incloses another letter from the Countess Chapman who he perceives has reap'd the benefit of Mr Nepean's humane attention.
