

December 7, 1923.

My dear and very kind friend: -

The lectures have ended and if I do not look back upon them with any sense of complacency at least they would not be accounted a failure. They must have brought to some of God's people, here or there, a fresh sense of the great providential course of human history and a readjustment of the values to attach to that particular phase of it. At any rate the course ended with "a good word for Jesus Christ," and that is ever a safe climax.

Now, I write to thank you. You insisted, when I was doubtful, and I am glad you did, and glad that I accepted, even though I had so many misgivings.

Gratefully & cordially yours,
Robert W. Rogart
