My dear Pinker

Here is this silly little tale which I wrote for the Northern Newspaper Syndicate. It is just under the 3000 words they asked for. If when they see it they vomit it back (as I can imagine their doing) perhaps you could plant it elsewhere? It is money I want! I'm sorry to have been so long with it, but I can't do these things easily — the novel is now comfortably started, and if air-raids will kindly become infrequent I ought to make good progress.

I wish you would let me know if you are able to dispose of the story. I shall try to write some short stories, but with more guts in them.

Lawrence has come to town, I see. We shant get 'Look, etc' out before the 15th. I've told him so, as he asked.

Yours ever
F. J. [Signature]
