the Kentucky Alumnus

Fall 1974

Each autumn the Alumni Association publishes a report to its membership. This year we cover some basic information about government of the Association which we urge you to read. We also have included the constitution and by-laws and a directory of UK Alumni clubs in addition to statistics on finances and membership.

Our general features are in keeping with a report theme, too. One answers the question of what it costs to go to UK today, and the other, how the ex-GI of today is faring on the GI bill.—L.H.D.

Just what does it cost to send your son or daughter to UK today? Plenty, and yet, you still get a bargain.

---

In-state tuition is holding at $240 per semester while out-of-state students are paying $605.

Freshmen can count on room and board ranging from $1,046 for the breakfast-dinner plan and $1,086 for any two meals daily, to $1,184 for three meals a day.

Linen and towel service accounts for another $53 per year.

A health service fee of $10 per year provides the student with access to out-patient medical and mental health services through the Student Health Service and the Medical Center. A student group insurance plan provides a single student with coverage on campus, at home and while traveling for approximately $50 per year.

These items add up to a basic annual cost of $1,774 for in-state; $2,504 for out-of-state.

Additional expenses vary with the individual's classroom load, extracurricular activities and propensity for spending money.

Books and supplies generally run from $40 to $50 per semester. Students in the band or ROTC units have a $10 uniform deposit. Also, some courses, geology and chemistry, for example, require additional deposits.

Laundry, dry cleaning and sundries are likely to cost $72 a year while money for dates, entertainment and snacks might run from $225 for a woman to $450 for a man.

Fraternity or sorority dues and the one-time initiation fee average a total of $485 the first year. In subsequent years a Greek can expect to pay an average of $365 in dues.

Thus, a year at UK is likely to cost parents from $2,500 to $3,300 per child in most cases.

Even though $3,000 a year seems a considerable charge for knowledge, tuition and fees cover only 10.3 percent of the cost of operating the University. State tax funds contribute 49 percent, federal funds 5.5 percent, and county funds 0.8 percent of total expenses. Gifts and grants from alumni, friends and businesses contribute another 10.8 percent.

Other income sources are invested funds and endowments, revenue from auxiliary agriculture, business and government services and sales, and the hospital and housing revenues which are reinvested in these programs.

Elbert Ockerman, dean of admissions, recently pointed out that UK, like other schools across the nation, is experiencing declining enrollments. Coupled with two other trends—the higher “average age” of current students and an increase in the number of part-time students—this can cause increased budgetary and program problems.

Ockerman is quick to add, however, that the picture at UK is not glum. He expects the rate of first-time freshmen to stabilize at the 2,500 mark this year. An open policy of admissions introduced at UK has been nationally recognized and is being copied in other states. Under this system any high school senior who indicates UK as his or her first choice on the ACT (American College Test) is automatically admitted, eliminating volumes of paperwork.

UK President Otis A. Singletary in the May '74 commencement address reaffirmed his position that quality education should be available at a reasonably low cost to the student. The University seems to be accomplishing both these goals as tuition held the line again this year despite national and world economic trends to the contrary. As for quality, students entering UK are bringing better academic records with them. The high school grade-point average of entering freshmen continued to rise from 2.92 in 1972 to 2.97 in 1973 to slightly over 3.0 this fall. Transfer students likewise are bringing better academic records to UK with their prior grade-point average rising from 2.7 last year to 2.87 this fall.

While attending UK, their numerous accomplishments are bringing added luster to the University in many new fields of endeavor.

GI Bill Goes to School

By Mark T. Watson

Ed. Note: A Senate bill to raise the veteran's educational allowance from $220 to $270 per month was ordered out of committee in May for consideration and was passed in June. A similar measure was passed in the House of Representatives. At press time, a compromise of the two versions of the bill was being made by a joint committee.

Without an additional income source it is extremely difficult for veterans attending the University of Kentucky, or any university, under the GI Bill to make ends meet. The director of the Veteran's Affairs Office, Linda Anderson, reveals that over 90 percent of UK's veterans hold full or part-time jobs to supplement benefits received from the GI Bill. "Let's be realistic," Anderson says, "the benefits won't cover both school and living expenses.....there should be more benefits available to the veteran."

Unmarried veterans receive $220 per month, while married vets receive $261 when they attend school on a full-time basis. A married veteran with one child receives $298 per month and an extra $18 is allowed for each additional child. Payments for less than full time is broken down into three-fourths time, one-half time and less than one-half time with entitlements reduced accordingly.

The monthly entitlement is all the veteran receives. From this amount, the veteran must pay tuition, books, rent, and food as well as other expenses incurred during the semester.

James Wyatt, a two-year Army veteran, is a graduate assistant in the English Department. Like many other veterans, Wyatt feels the payments from the GI Bill are inadequate in meeting today's school expenses. "I simply couldn't make it through school if I didn't work.....it's just not enough at all!"

Under Public Law 346 of the 78th Congress, Title II, 1943, veterans were first authorized educational benefits from the government. This initial grant was provided because Congress felt persons in the military had their education or training delayed or interrupted when they entered the service.

The benefits the World War II era veterans received were tuition, laboratory, library, health, infirmary and other similar fees as well as books, supplies, equipment, and other necessary expenses. Above these costs there was a subsistence allowance. The single veteran received $50 per month and a married veteran received $75.

The Viet Nam era veteran does receive more than his World War II counterpart in a sense, but he must pay for all his expenses incurred during each semester.

Asked the frequency of veteran dropouts due to financial problems, Linda Anderson remarks, "UK doesn't go along with the national trend, we don't have a great many that do. A number of vets tell me how rough it is financially, but most vets get a job or have wives working to supplement their income." Anderson also pointed out that the national average for veterans dropping out of school was rising, and that money was the chief cause.

The VAO provides many services to the veteran. "We try to take up where the Veterans Administration leaves off in terms of disseminating information to veterans and providing assistance when and where we can. This information dissemination is not restricted to students, but to new veterans who are not enrolled in school as well. You'd be surprised at the number of veterans that don't know of their right to educational benefits. Many think there are hidden catches or other nonsense; thus preventing them from taking advantage of their benefits."

"No matter what the problem might be, we urge all veterans to come and see us. In most cases we'll be able to help them," promises Anderson.

New programs recently inaugurated provide veterans with additional aid. VA now allows an additional $50 per month to defray tutoring costs. If a veteran is having difficulty in a particular course he can receive the $50 to pay a tutor.

Another new program provides payment for any existing breaks between the spring and summer semesters. Previously, when a veteran finished the spring semester his benefits would end, even though he might begin summer classes in two or three days.

As an example, the spring semester for 1974 ended May 11. At the beginning of May the veteran received a check for the eleven days left in the spring semester. He then waited until the first of June to receive the payment for attending school from May 13, when the summer intersession began. The check would only include the time until June 11 when the intersession ended, though the next day classes would begin for the eight week summer classes. The veteran then would wait until the first of July to receive payment for classes attended from June 12 until the end of June. The July check would have the payment for the entire month of July. The new program will do away with this system of payments.

The new program for continuous pay applies only to veterans attending at least as a one-half time student in the spring semester and at least a one-half time student in the summer sessions.

Veterans are not paid for the break between the end of the eight-week summer term and fall classes. Enrollments can only be submitted for an academic year which includes fall, spring, and summer.

Sons and daughters of veterans who have died or who are permanently and totally disabled as the result of a service-connected injury also can receive GI benefits. Widows of those veterans who received a service connected disability while on active duty and die of such injury receive complete benefits.

Kentucky is one of the few states providing a Tuition Waiver program for dependents of veterans who have either died or have a total disability rating resulting from injuries sustained on active duty. Persons whose fathers were killed while serving in the armed forces or died as a result of service connected disability do not have to pay tuition fees to state supported institutions of higher education provided the father was a resident of Kentucky when entering the service and was killed while serving in a declared war or other hostile actions engaged by the U.S. military forces.

With the tuition paid by the state, many dependents find the additional monthly benefits adequate since the initial costs of beginning each semester are not paid for out of GI Bill entitlements.

Joseph L. Rosenbaum, an Air Force veteran, finds he must borrow money at the beginning of each semester to cover tuition and book costs. "I'm not working and I'm barely getting by on the VA checks," says Rosenbaum. "Of course, I don't pay rent for the house I live in.....If I had to pay rent, there'd be no way, just no way to make it through the semester. I'm not quarreling with VA yet, since they haven't screwed my checks up, but a number of vets I know have had to wait for their checks for two, three and even four months.

"As for increasing benefits, I say there needs to be a cost of living clause attached to the payments that would enable automatic increases to take effect as an anti-inflation measure. They give raises to GIs, don't they?"

Many proposals are before Congress now advocating increases in the amount of money and the number of months the vet is allowed to receive such benefits. Anderson believes chances for benefits to increase are good.

"Larry Hopkins, representative from the 76th district (Lexington) is on the Education, Health and Welfare committee and he's sympathetic to our cause," she says. "Signs for increase are looking good, but I couldn't go on record as saying it's a definite thing.....you never can tell."

Should the benefits increase by 10 percent, it would mean roughly an additional six dollars per week for vets. Though this addition would not be turned down, it won't erase the problems plaguing the system now.

MAURICE STRIDER—Artist, Teacher

Maurice Strider earned his A.B. degree from Fisk University in Tennessee, and his M.A. degree in 1960 from the University of Kentucky. At present, he is an associate professor in art education at Morehead State University.

Art and education mean a lot to Maurice Strider. He enjoys them both as a vocation and an avocation.

"I love art education because it's such an inspiration to train students to teach and then to see them become successful teachers. And, of course, the Afro-American art gives me quite a bit of personal pride to be able to reveal many of the things in African Art which are not mentioned in text books."

Afro-American art is his special interest. "As I learned about the accomplishments of African Art and began to appreciate it more, I began to lean toward the African cubistic type of art. And now I get a load of appreciation out of combining some of the African motifs with realistic art."

Strider believes that an artist should express himself as he wishes. He pointed out that some artists express themselves in a political way, some in a sociological way, and some historically. For him the beauty of expression lies in the fact that we're all Americans.

Each of Strider's paintings, usually in acrylic-oil, make various statements of this fact. "Afro-American Fantasy" combines an African mask with a city skyline. "What I'm doing there is attempting to show the increasing appreciation of the African Art accomplishments on American life."

Mask art, Strider explained, is primarily a functional type of art that was done simply to explain and illustrate the spiritual side of African life. Some scholars have concluded that what we call abstract art was actually African art. "The way the masks were done and all of the contortions and stretching of the face helped develop cubism." According to Strider even Picasso's style was definitely influenced after a trip to Africa.

One of Strider's most dramatic statements is made in "One World," an acrylic painting of an arc of earth as it might be viewed from outer space. "I just feel that if we're going to survive, we're just going to have to get back to the one world, one race theory of the existence of man."

As for the general orientation of art, Strider predicts that even now it is swinging back to the romantic period typified by peace, tranquility and an absence of confusion.

"I believe art follows the many explosions and feelings of man. I believe we're at a sort of place now where there's only one way for things to go. And that is to sort of tone down to a sort of neutrality and not go too far to the left or to the right.

"I'm thinking especially of all of the movements, the radical movements, which seem now to have toned down.

"Some of them are looking for an end in more emphasis on religion and I think that art is going to do the same thing, because it seems to follow the cycle of man."

BOB GORHAM — Race Track Manager

Bob Gorham, a native of Wilmore, earned a B.A. degree from UK in 1956. Before assuming the position of resident manager at Churchill Downs, he was director of the PGA (Professional Golfers' Association) Press for two years and a sports writer for the Chattanooga (Tenn.) News Free Press.

At 6 a.m. on May 5 Bob Gorham '56 was out of bed, by 8:30 a.m. he was perusing his notes, assessing the success of the 100th Run for the Roses that had taken place just 16 hours earlier.

Gorham is resident manager of Churchill Downs. It is he who carried the burden of coordinating the inordinate details of this momentous occasion. When it was over he felt a lot of relief that it went off well, that there were only a minimum of problems compared to what could have happened. But now it was time to work on the 101st Derby.

A record crowd indeed was on hand in 1974, a record Gorham thinks will stand for awhile. The infield was packed with 98,000 paid admissions and hundreds of employees, policemen and band members for the 1974 race. In 1973, there were 77,000.

There was the usual rowdiness, a small percentage of streakers, a need for more restrooms and stronger fences in the infield. Already the Downs directors are considering limiting the size of future infield crowds. Gorham has made plans for strengthening the fences and providing additional entries to facilitate the flow of pedestrian traffic next year.

True excitement exudes from Gorham as he talks about the race itself. "The mystery and intrigue of the race," he says, "is in watching how the horses are being conditioned, wondering if each will peak out for the race."

He finds himself in the same position as other race fans. He bets (and only occasionally) on his own interpretation of the horse's past performance, his preference for jockey, trainer, owner, horse's name or intuition as the case may be.

There have been a lot of celebrities on hand for this famed race. In the spring of '69 — Gorham's first Derby — President Nixon and a group of Republican Governors were guests of former Governor Louis B. Nunn.

"We built a special section, Section 0, with 256 seats. Then there were additional security arrangements to include body guards, to secure the area and the President's movement from the fifth floor, where the accommodations for him were built, to the third floor where Governor Nunn was seated.

In comparison, Princess Margaret's visit was simple. "She had 14 people which we needed to accommodate and she was only at the Downs for four hours. Part of that time she was involved with greeting people and probably saw about four races."

Does planning for the Derby ever get boring? "Never! Everyone is unique from start to finish. We've started our conditioning for 1975 and hope to peak perfectly on the first Saturday in May."

In Memoriam

Joe Creason
Class of 1940

For Joe Creason '40 the admonition of a popular song, "You Can't Be a Beacon If Your Light Don't Shine," doesn't apply. Joe, who died suddenly last month, was a beacon of the brightest light. In thought, word and deed he always set the finest example of a human being. We, at the University Alumni Association, are thankful to have fallen in his circle of warmth, good humor and loving pride.

Joe Cross Creason was graduated from UK in 1940. As a student he was sports editor for both the Kentuckian and Kernel, was president of Delta Sigma Chi and Alpha Tau Omega (two years), vice president of Lances, and the Kentuckian's choice as "Most Popular Man" on campus. He began his newspaper career as editor of his hometown newspaper, The Benton Tribune-Democrat, moved to the Murray Ledger & Times, and then to the Courier-Journal where he was a sports writer, Sunday magazine writer and then daily columnist writing "Joe Creason's Kentucky." As an alumnus he served on the executive committee of the Jefferson County-UK Alumni Club, was a member of the Board of Directors for 10 years and was president of the Association for one and a half years. He was honored with the Alumni Service Award in 1971.

Annual Report to the Membership Government of the Association

By Jay Brumfield
Director, Alumni Affairs

I am extremely pleased to have this opportunity to report to the active membership of the association. The fiscal year 1973-74 was a very productive year for the staff and I trust that some of the services rendered were beneficial to the membership at large. You may read in the following pages about (1) operating budgets, (2) how your dues money was used, (3) the increase in the number of memberships, and (4) a listing of active clubs and their current leadership.

One of the facets of our operation which is little known is the way by which the association is governed. I would like to take a few moments to summarize this important facet so that each member may better understand the process.

For many years the association was governed by a rather small group of men and women, sincerely dedicated to the task of building a greater UK Alumni Association. That body was called the Executive Committee of the Association. Beginning in 1964 the by-laws of the association were changed, which called for a representative Board of Directors as a replacement for the executive committee. The board was initially comprised of 36 "active" alumni elected by their peers from certain geographic districts throughout the country. Thirty of the 36 board members were elected from districts within the state of Kentucky while the remaining six were elected from districts comprising those several states immediately north and south of Kentucky.

The constitution and by-laws have undergone many changes in the past six years and one of the more significant occurred in June 1971 when the board was enlarged and made more representative than ever before. From that date, and continuing today, the board is comprised of 57 persons elected from 16 geographic districts. Fourteen of these districts, containing approximately the same number of UK alumni, elect one representative each year to serve for three-year terms.

Because Jefferson and Fayette counties in Kentucky have many more alumni than other regions, these two counties were made separate districts and assigned more representatives. Jefferson County (District 3) elects two representatives each year for a total of six while Fayette County (District 5) elects three representatives per year for a total of nine.

As of this date, elected representatives to the Board of Directors reside in 16 different states (from California to Massachusetts) and 24 counties within Kentucky. To assure continuity of leadership, yet a wider representation, the by-laws further state that an elected representative having served two consecutive three-year terms may not be renominated or appointed for at least one year.

In January 1973 a resolution was approved by the board which established a Past Presidents Advisory Council. The council is composed of all living past presidents of the national association who choose to participate. It serves the board and the association by reviewing current programs and making recommendations on other important matters. The past presidents, 18 in number, were also made honorary life members of the board and as such may vote on all business matters considered by the board. In addition to the elected representatives and honorary life members, there are three ex officio members of the board representing the University administration and the association. Three alumni may be appointed to the board by the president of the national association to serve for one calendar year.

Again by-law changes, this time in January 1974, not only make it possible but encourage the establishment of constituent alumni groups representing the so-called professional graduates of the University. Invitations have been issued to the Colleges of Agriculture, Allied Health, Architecture, Dentistry, Engineering, Home Economics, Law, Library Science, Medicine, Nursing, Pharmacy and Social Professions to consider the establishment of alumni groups as integral parts of the national association.

By design, the board meets in January, May, September and November of each year. In addition, a special two-day workshop is held each June. Presidents or chairmen of local alumni clubs are not neglected in this process and are invited to a special club presidents' workshop held annually for the purpose of orientation, exchanging ideas and recommendations for improved programming.

A question often arises as to how interdependent the association is upon the University of Kentucky. Briefly stated, the association is just that, "inter-dependent." The 13 staff members of the Alumni Association are all University of Kentucky employees and are entitled to all benefits extended to the UK staff. The salaries of 10 of the 13 staff members are paid by the university directly from General Fund appropriations. Salaries for the other three staff members come from funds made possible by alumni paying annual dues or joining as life members. All of the programs approved by the Board of Directors are supported entirely by dues and life membership payments. Publications such as this magazine, travel and support of alumni clubs, other printed materials and the necessary postage for mailing, telephone service, office supplies and equipment, et cetera, are all paid by alumni dues—not tax money! The University of Kentucky assumes responsibility for the physical maintenance of the Helen G. King Alumni House. It should be remembered, however, that this lovely facility was made possible by gifts from alumni and friends. In fact, those members of the Century Club contributed over $308,200 towards the building and furnishing of the Alumni House.

All of this has been said and printed with the hope that rank and file may have a somewhat better understanding of the organization and governance of this association. It is hoped that you, the dues payer, will take greater pride in the association, but more importantly, will become more concerned with the day to day work and programs which your dollars make possible.

Officers

Officers of the national UK Alumni Association are chosen by the elected members of the board of directors with the exception of the secretary. According to the by-laws, the director of alumni affairs serves as permanent secretary to the board.

Finances

By Ordie Davis
Associate Director

The UK Alumni Association finds itself on sound financial ground at the end of its third year of operation as a dues-funded organization. A campaign emphasizing the life membership dues payment plan resulted in a significant number of new life memberships. The revenue, generally invested in the stock market, was redirected into U.S. Treasury Bills, Federal intermediate banks and banks for cooperatives. An actuarial study is being conducted which will give the Alumni Association a financial profile of its membership services.

A merchandising program was established so that BIG BLUE paraphernalia will always be available to alumni. This is a joint project with the University Bookstore. Aimed primarily at generating UK spirit, 10 percent of the proceeds will come to the Alumni Association.

The Association entered into an agreement with Franklin Mint of Philadelphia to design and sell a limited number of engraved sterling plates of UK's Memorial Hall. Over 500 were sold by the June 10 deadline.

Another project is the sale of limited edition prints of the Administration Building which is being painted by C. G. Morehead, Kentucky's artist of property and former UK student. If all prints are sold, the Association will realize as much as $50,000 for undergraduate scholarships.

Printing costs continue to claim the major portion of the budget. Despite inflationary trends in the printing business, the Kentucky Alumnus (circulation 15,000) has reduced its cost from 29 cents per copy in 1971-72 to 25 cents per copy in 1973-74. The Open Door (circulation 50,000), which changed to a newspaper format in 1974, reduced its cost to 2.6 cents per copy. At the same time, editorial space was increased 600 percent.

The alumni awards program was expanded to include two more alumni professorships. Alumni professors receive $5,000 a year in recognition of outstanding teaching and research abilities. Current alumni professors are Dr. Charles P. Roland, history; William L. Matthews Jr., law; and Dr. Stephen Diachun, plant pathology.

Capturing a Camp

By David Holt

Change has followed change in the red-brick building. Today only the solid brick walls of the Administration Building remain the same — the brick walls and the familiar old Spanish cannon in front that points across the lush green lawn.

Before any more changes take place, the Alumni Association is having the 92-year-old building recorded on canvass.

C. G. Morehead has been commissioned to paint the historical building to raise money for student scholarships as part of the Kentucky Bicentennial celebration.

Morehead, of Owensboro, is now hard at work painting the imposing three-story brick building, which remains one of the few physical links for older alumni who visit the ever-changing Lexington campus.

The 5,000 limited edition prints from the original painting are being offered first to active alumni association members and should be ready for distribution in late fall or early winter.

Morehead, who will personally sign each print, has agreed to allow alumni association purchasers to request a second signature of someone connected with UK who is held in particular esteem by the purchasers.

The Administration Building is tailor-made for artistic treatment by Morehead, whose past prints of old and historic structures in Kentucky and elsewhere have earned for him the title of Kentucky Artist of Property.

Morehead recently spent valuable time in Lexington researching the building and gathering anecdotes and stories to be able to get a "feeling" for his subject.

He commented at that time: "From what I've learned, this old building has some real fine stories to tell." Morehead himself is no stranger to the Administration Building, having entered it in the early 1940s to register as a UK student.

"So you can see there's a personal tie-in with me...sort of like a homecoming I guess you'd say," the artist explained.

Actually, the building probably has a personal tie-in with nearly every person who has attended UK.

In 1882, when the institution was known as the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Kentucky, the structure housed all of the college classrooms, offices and laboratories. Even the armory and a weather bureau were located there.

The building, whose bricks were made of soil from the very land upon which it stands, is the only one still standing from the three original UK buildings dedicated in 1882.

Perched on top of a hill along South Limestone, the building in its early days was beside the college lake, a romantic spot for students in the spring and summer and a skater's haven in the winter. The lake was located where the alumni gymnasium and the Student Center now stand.

Before the turn of the century, the building had an ornate clock tower rising 157 feet above the ground and surmounted by a "captain's walk." By 1898 the top section of the tower had been taken off, and later the entire tower was removed.

At one time, the entire student body and staff could be seated comfortably for daily chapel exercises in what was the second floor auditorium. The building, at various times, also housed the library and a natural history museum.

In 1948, for the first time since it was built, the structure became solely the Administration Building. With the transfer of Ancient Languages to nearby Frazee Hall, the last of the academic departments were removed from what had been known simply as the "main building."

Morehead acknowledged recently that the cannon would be an important part of his painting just as it has become an old and established element of the campus.

Named Federalista, this ancient war relic has been at UK since 1903 when it was presented to the University by the City of Lexington. The cannon, which is actually 179 years old and was captured at Santiago, Cuba, during the Spanish-American War in 1898, quickly became the backdrop for picture-taking and campus hazing activities.

The Administration Building is the 20th in Morehead's regular series of limited edition prints.

In addition to Kentucky structures, the Owensboro artist has painted the original Grand Ole Opry building in Nashville, the President's Office at the White House, the LBJ Schoolhouse in Texas and No. 10 Downing Street in London, England, the residence of British Prime Ministers.

Most of these limited editions have already sold out and some prints which originally sold for $15 are now selling for up to $155.

The prints of the Administration Building will sell for $20 each, plus $1 sales tax for Kentucky residents. There will be a $2 handling fee for mailing prints. They also can be picked up at the Helen G. King Alumni House in Lexington.

Campus Landmark

Salute to Service

Alumni Service Awards are presented annually to persons who have lent outstanding support to the UKAA.

Receiving the honors in 1974 were John R. Crockett, Louisville; James S. Hudnall, Tyler, Texas; Marie Lewis, Syracuse, N.Y.; and Frank D. Peterson, Lexington.

Crockett '49 has served both the alumni and the University in many ways. Among his recent activities have been chairmanship of the committee to reorganize the Jefferson County Alumni club with potential membership of 5,444, chairmanship of the 1971 alumni fund drive, and presidency of the National Association in 1972. He currently is a member of the alumni board of directors, the development council, and the University board of trustees. He is vice president and manager of First National Bank in Louisville.

Lewis '48 is recognized for her untiring enthusiasm and active interest in out-of-state alumni organization. For 14 years she has been instrumental in organizing and maintaining the effective alumni club in Syracuse. She has been its president three different times, Derby party chairman eight times, and also serves on the alumni board of directors. In Syracuse, she is vice president of J. W. Willard Associates and active in numerous professional and civic groups.

Hudnall '21 is a fortunate alumnus who has rendered service by both volunteering his time and energy and giving of his finances out of a true concern for his University. A member of the development council, it was his $100,000 challenge that enabled the Annual-Giving Program at UK to set a record high last year. Hudnall who graduated in 1921 heads the firm of Hudnall and Hudnall.

Peterson, a former UK vice president for business administration, was recognized for the property acquisitions made during his tenure which include Spindletop Hall, the faculty alumni club, Carnahan House and part of the land on which the present Helen G. King Alumni House stands. He also served as the first president of Carnahan and Spindletop clubs from May 1958 until August 1963.

Escape from Custody

By Robert Straus

Professor of medical sociology at the University of Kentucky Medical Center

If you have passed through skid row in any town you probably have wondered about the inner life of the drifting, nomadic men who litter the doorways and passages. Frank Moore was such a derelict. But a derelict with a difference, an individual who, motivated at age 40 by the interest of sociologist Robert Straus, began to write an account of his life, and in letters to Dr. Straus, to keep an ongoing record from 1945 until his death in 1972. Titled "Escape from Custody: A Study of Alcoholism and Institutional Dependency as Reflected in the Life Record of a Homeless Man," by Robert Straus, the book will be published by Harper & Row on March 27.

Frank Moore, whose formal education ended in the ninth grade, was trained as a medical corpsman in the Navy, read widely and intensively, and in his more than 300 letters to Dr. Straus commented with a degree of candor, perception, humor and literary analogy on prisons, the medical treatment given to alcoholics, landlords, jailhouses, welfare workers—the system. Recurring throughout his correspondence are themes of rejection, custodial dependency, and his life-long feud with his mother who, after his father's suicide when Frank was an infant, abandoned him to be brought up by his grandfather.

Frank Moore wrote of his addiction to alcohol by saying, "From booze, I became footloose, ostracized, exiled, starved, broiled and frozen..." and summarized his life by a quote from Dante, "I did not die, yet nothing of life remained."

Aged, alone and sick, with only a small pension to sustain him, in his last days he found a home with a large family, who nursed him, talked with him and loved him. Of this experience Frank Moore wrote that he had found "a haven, in the real sense of the word ...Everything has been made wonderful here for me. This is what I desire (and how many men can say that?). Young people live on the same floor with me, and ask me if there is anything that I need at the store. I enjoy the greatest measure of personal freedom with a minimal dependence on others.

"I have not achieved these things without difficulty." Published by Harper & Row, New York, N.Y. — $9.95.

The Second Coming of the Church

By John Killinger '54, '57

Professor of preaching at Vanderbilt University Divinity School

Is the church hopelessly moribund? Can the church which has talked of salvation so many centuries now hope to be saved? This book is Dr. Killinger's attempt to say that it can. But it cannot dictate its own terms of surrender. It must be open to whatever future is assigned it. It must become a glad beggar again, a servant whose only joy is in serving.

"All of which is to say that if the church as we know it is to live and thrive in the days ahead it may not be the church as we know it. It may be utterly different. Its shape, its form, its ministry, its modes of self-perception may have undergone such changes that it may not even appear to be the same institution."

Taking the future as his theme, Dr. Killinger does some dreaming and some fantasizing about what the second coming of the church might be like. Woven into this dream is the future seminary with all the new training and educational methods. He also discusses in unconventional terms what the new saint of the future may be like. He concludes with a parable of a statue that suggests the new incarnation of Christ.

Other chapters concern future ways of educating the young by adding suggestions for renewed interest in the church school. Published by Abingdon Press, Nashville, Tenn. - $3.95.

Roundup at the Double Diamond
The American Cowboy Today

By Bill Surface
Freelance writer

The American cowboy has always figured large in this country's history and tradition. Although the days of the open range and skirmishes with the Indians are long gone, he remains a symbol of masculine independence and continues to lead a working life that keeps him in touch with the elements of nature in the raw.

To depict the real cowboy, Bill Surface interviewed dozens of cowhands, ranging from the legendary drifter to the men chasing cattle rustlers. Then, in the spring and fall of a single year, Surface followed a crew of cowboys as they camped at an immense ranch, called the Double Diamond, locked deep in the cattle country of mountainous West Texas. Drawing upon first-hand observation, Surface has written a dramatic account of the events of one roundup season. The focus of the book is Odell, the foreman of the Double Diamond, and his crew of permanent hands. A description of their rough, physical existence brings to life the process of searching for cattle, the treatment of diseased animals, the techniques of breeding and branding, the breaking and training of cow ponies, and the habits of vultures and coyotes on the range.

Surface also provides important and surprising details on systematic rustling, the detection of stolen cattle, the shipment of cattle to market, and the doings of the "rodeo cowboy"

Bill Surface
Novelist and UK alumnus

who is not considered a cowboy at all by working hands. Writing with the eye and ear of a novelist, he captures the relationship of the men to each other, their attitude toward women, their pungent, down-to-earth philosophy.

Roundup at the Double Diamond is a vivid and realistic contemporary report on one of America's traditional and too often conventionalized heroes. Published by Houghton-Mifflin Company, Boston, Mass. — $6.95

Vestige of Valor

By Gene Marvin Jr. '56
Columnist and manager of the
Ashland Daily Independent

Simon Bowen is a Kentucky mountain-boy of the 20th century whose violent life is chronicled in this big novel. The violence begins early for him with the shooting of his father, Big Earl, a coal miner whose independence got him in wrong with the "big bosses" of the mines. Readers will follow the elaborate twists and turns through which this event dominates the son's whole life.

Author Gene Marvin Jr. shows a complete familiarity with the story he presents. His ear for the dialogue of the mountaineers or hill folk is a good one, and he records their speech authentically. It is interesting to note the development in Simon's own speech-patterns as his experience and education grow.

The novel is packed with action, passion, booze, and sex, as Simon lurches ahead from one major physical challenge to the next. Reminiscences of World Wars I and II are merged with the continuous battling in the coal fields. The book culminates in Simon's war experience during the Korean conflict, and then ultimately in his post-war undercover work as a hired assassin in the guise of a Kentucky sheriff. The climax is an assignment leading to the most daring political assassination of the 20th century, a date with destiny which the Kentuckian could not keep. Published by Vantage Press, Inc., New York, N.Y. — $6.50.

Clubs

By Leigh Fleming
Assistant Director for Programs

This year has been an active one for UK alumni clubs. There were more Derby parties than in the past, and several new clubs were formed. Two of the more successful ones are Detroit and Paducah.

The Detroit club, instigated by Walt Perkins and an enthusiastic nucleus of interested alumni, have accomplished much this year. They had an organizational meeting in January at which they elected officers and made tentative plans for their Derby Party. During football recruiting season, the club leadership worked with the Athletic Association and helped them win one of the finest new football players coming to UK this fall—Ted Peurach.

This spring the club had its first annual Derby Party at the home of Frank and Julie Goetz. The crowd partook of traditional mint juleps and enjoyed friendly banter over the winner of America's most prestigious race. Tears were glimpsed in several eyes as "My Old Kentucky Home" was played and sung at the 100th running of the Kentucky Derby.

This fall 38 dedicated football fans plan to make Oct. 26, UK-Georgia football weekend, Detroit night at the pre-game alumni buffet.

Another successful club is starting in Paducah. At their first meeting a crowd of 144 enjoyed a speech by Courier-Journal humorist, Joe Creason. This club is getting creative leadership from Betty and Ray Larson '70, Cindy and Burnham Jones '73, Mark Bryant '73, and Rick and Ginny Coltharp.

Plans in the future for this club are: a late summer reception for new UK students and parents in the Paducah area, a showing of football films from one of the Cats away games, and UK Day in Western Kentucky next fall. The last is a repetition of a successful program held in Hopkinsville this spring.

See directory of all clubs on the inside back cover.

Use of the Alumni House

The Alumni House was built to be used for regular alumni business and by the alumni whenever possible. Generally it can be used for meetings and small get-togethers during regular working hours at no charge. Charges at other times are based on labor, type of function and the extent to which the facilities are used. Active members of the Alumni Association are granted reduced rates. Kitchen facilities are available so that refreshments, dinners or buffets can be served. Guest suites are assigned on a first come-first served basis throughout the year. All reservations can be made by writing the Alumni House or calling 258-8900.
