LITTLE THEATER SCORES IN 'SHERRIFF'S JOURNEY'S END'

Despite Difficulties, Performance Shows Almost Professional Touch

CAST OF CHARACTERS Captain Bares - Paul Williams Lieutenant Osborne - L. Cass Robinson Private Mason - J. B. Wells Lieutenant Raleigh - James Willoughby Captain Stanhope - Frank Foster Lieutenant Trotter - Newton Combs, Jr. Private Broughton - Homer Wright Lieutenant Hibbert - James Riley Sergeant-Major Watson - George Farris Colonel Davis - Conna Blum

Tonight and Saturday night, with the presentation of R. C. Sherriff's "Journey's End," Gignoul will continue the current offering of the fifth little theater season.

An appreciative audience gasped audibly when the curtain rose on the first act last Monday night. Stage settings excellently reproducing a dugout in the trenches near Ypres in 1918 brought back memories of actual war time experiences or recalled for the younger generation those twice-told tales of the late catastrophe.

The story, if the episode of "Journey's End" can be dignified with that name, depicts the nerve-racking, tortuous days spent in the allied front line.

Jack Williams, as Lieutenant Raleigh, is the third of the principal players in this production. Comments of uneasiness, Williams settles down satisfactorily to enacting the role of a sergeant.

Private Mason, played by J. B. Willoughby, as Captain Raleigh, provides the audience with ample comedy. Paul Williams, as Captain Hardy, is a regular veteran of the stage.

GIRLS TO BE SHOWN IN TABLEAU SETTING

Out-of-Town Judges Suggested By Faculty Will Select Winners

Photographs of the 23 entrants of the Kentucky beauty contest will be made Friday in order that the pictures may be furnished to the judges who will select the winners at the annual Kentuckian dance on 9 p. m. until 12 p. m., Saturday, December 10, in the Alumni gymnasium.

A list of the girls who were nominated for the honor of the beauty contest is as follows: Edna Gamma Delta-Anita Marston, Ruth Wood, Lillian Holmes, Edna Evans, Frances Hoilman, Delta Delta Delta-Anita Marston, Ester Briggs, Margaret Bohren, Betty Roberts.

It is rumored that the teams will use no ball in order to allow the faculty to employ the coaches say to deploy their deceptive attack.

According to present plans the dance will start with a series of tableaux featuring the beauty contestants costumed to represent the periods of the University before the present date.

The basis of selection of the winners will be the personal appearance during the tableau and her cabinet photograph which will be furnished to the judges.

In connection with the beauty contest, a sales campaign has been started by the University business department of the 1923 Kentuckian. Each personality and girls' dormitory was solicited for the campaign.

The student finance drive of the Y. M. C. A. was held Tuesday night, November 29, when pledges and donations amounting to $197.87 were made by less than 200 boys visited. The campaign began with a dinner in the University commons for 44 boys who took part in the drive.

Two groups were formed, the backfield and the line. These were used to see which could get the greater number of contributions.

The Y. M. program, including speakers who come to the University, the members of the two teams went out and visited boys in dormitories, fraternity and rooming houses.

Under present conditions, the Y. M. C. A. is in need of more funds than ever before. All students are urged to make contributions.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS CLUB

An extensive informative program of study for the next four months has been arranged by the International Relations Club. Its first subject will deal with the Chinese-Japanese situation.

The club gives members unusual opportunity to receive information and to exchange opinions on current event subjects dealing with international topics.

The activity of the club is to be commended. There are many similar organizations on the campus which operate in name only.

YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

Each semester, 50 cents of every student's tuition fee is allotted to the university dispensary.

During any given year, two-thirds of the students in the university receive medical attention at the dispensary. Nearly all students at the dispensary sometime during their four years in college.

With no fees to pay, students feel free to seek advice from the dispensary. Because of this early attention, illnesses can be prevented, or checked before they assume serious proportions.

The dispensary has become an institution on the campus. Its values greatly exceed the initial fee which students pay.

THE ENGLISH CLUB

There are many worthwhile clubs on the campus which carry on study and entertainment in the form of extra-curricular activities.

The English club, like many other kindred campus organizations, has a worthy purpose. It affords those interested in the study of English an opportunity of research outside the classroom.

There is no red tape or discriminating lines limiting membership in the English club. The only credential a student must have is an interest in English.

campus-wide interest in this extra-curricular activity. The English club is a worthwhile campus stimulator for the finer things in the world of arts and letters.

ATHLETIC INVESTIGATION

In an effort to bring the athletic council and the athlete closer to the student body and to the university itself, The Kernel after a careful investigation of the situation, has determined to publish a series of constructive editorials.

It is with malice toward no certain individual or group that this action and investigation is being conducted. However, the impetus behind the inquiry may bring forth startling facts concerning the disassociation and lack of personal touch between athletics and the student body.

In perfect candor The Kernel wishes its position clearly understood. As the organ of the student body, it has the privilege of conducting such an investigation and bringing to light any alleged alienation of athletics from the school.

The Kernel will play fairly and squarely. Watch for these editorials. The first will appear Tuesday.

Jest Among Us

The apparent reason for holding The Kernel over until today is that we had to wait until the staff returned from Knoxville.

Some guys remind us of prunes—always getting stewed!

How about some intra-fraternity football games? We'd like to see one winning team around here this season.

Past famous last words—"Yeah, but look at the conditions under which I had to play."

Someone said that wildcats were growing extinct in Kentucky anyhow.

Thanksgiving hunting casualties were met to meet this year—game is more plentiful.

We wonder if that "Nutbrown Maide" could have been Haase!

Some persons had too much turkey Thanksgiving day. Kentucky had too much Tennessee.

Football season on aftermath: "Well, we can't win all of them."

Dormitory girls like this—handing a bottle of perfume, one said to the other, "There's my last cent."

ANOTHER POINT OF VIEW (By the Editor of The Kernel) Dear Sir:

I should like to offer a word in criticism of J. Wesley Littlefield's review of Chas. Morgan's novel The Fountain which was printed in a recent issue of The Kernel.

I shall mention only one point. Like that other fine philosophical novel, Thomas Mann's The Magic Mountain, The Fountain is a novel with a thesis. The Magic Mountain is a study half realistic, half symbolic of two conflicting points of view: the Goethean and the Tolstoyan.

One thing more. Mr. Littlefield remarks that he can discover in The Fountain no "Platonic love" and goes on, approvingly, to tell us the true nature of this sort of love. Now Mr. Littlefield ignores the fact that the author of the foolish and inconsequential book which he cites in support of his contention is a varnisher here with all the eminent Platonic scholars.

and repudiates the view that J. J. Chapman attributes to him. Yours truly, (Signed) JOSEPH C. BURK, Lexington, Nov. 16, 1932.

Required reading for Mr. Burke: The Fountain by Charles Morgan; the quotation from the "Symposium" used by Mr. Morgan; "Lysis" by Plato; Lucian, Platon, and Greek Morale by J. J. Chapman; the works of Lucian; "The Crown" by D. H. Lawrence; distinguishing definitions of "pederasty" and "uranism"; any book dealing with these.

DOTES AND ANTI-DOTES

By LAWRENCE HERRON

As the infant gormandizer, sitting on my right, groined after the late Thanksgiving feast. "You know, when a cow eats too much grass, they hit him in the side with an axe. That's the way I feel!"

Probably by now the new University Directory has lost the novelty it possessed at first, but there are still several interesting things to be noticed. For instance, there are only two Vices in the entire school.

After the Thanksgiving game in Knoxville, the Wildcats all went to room 809 to get their belongings, and were unable to get in.

Independence Brudie (Sunar King) Cunningham calls a certain girl in town and proceeds to talk himself up with her. Conversation consists of his good looks and wealth, together with a list of advantages in her knowing him.

Kays Claude Barnett and Glenn Burch have found that there is a night club on top of the Brown Hotel in Louisville. They did not know it when they were lured up there by a Kappa and a Chio, who merely suggested that they "go up on top."

the gallery of favorites. As the new Clara Bow, replete with winsomeness, charm, and poise, flashes across the screen of the Kentucky theater Saturday in "Call Her Savage," Paramount presents to the public the ravishing and sophisticated heroine it demands.

John Barrymore as the star of the RKO's "A Bill of Divorcement," opening Saturday at the Strand theater, is cast in the role of a broken wreath of a shell-shocked soldier returning from the Great War to strive desperately, vainly, to adapt himself to the changed conditions of his home.

Joe E. Brown is coming to town. Coming to the Ben All theater next Sunday in the First National picture "You Said a Mouthful." Joe, in the character of an artless boob who is both afraid of the water and another fish story, is mistaken for champion swimmer and is entered in a marathon race.

Shelby-Milward The marriage of Miss Rebecca Hart Shelby, Danville, to Mr. W. Emmet Milward, of Lexington, was solemnized at 8 o'clock Saturday evening in the Second Presbyterian church in Danville.

The altar was elaborately banked with ferns and had two tall floor vases on each side filled with immense white chrysanthemums. Seven-branched candelsticks with white candles were placed throughout the background of foliage and candelabra, nested in plumosa and holding white candles, were arranged in every window.

The wedding music was played by Miss Ruby Moss at the organ, assisted by Mrs. Hughes Jackson, song soloist. To the music of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin the wedding party entered the church, the bride coming with her mother, Mrs. Dana Shelby Diehl, of Danville, who gave her in marriage, preceded by the groomsmen, who had also acted as ushers: Messrs. The White lineup was Sale, center; DeMoisey and Tucker, forwards; and Bill Davis and Jackson, guards. These ten men gave spectators an exciting half hour, with the White team finally nosing out the Blue by a small margin; the advantage was gained from an almost perfect scoring of foul shots on the part of the White squad. Whosur Hoosis?

Because she's deaf and dumb. —JOHNNIE CRADDOCK

By Judy Chadwick

Co-edition is your chance! Have you wondered why you are tongue-tied at 'open house'... 'go one full of pep with tripping step the ed you desire? Well, here are some answers by university men to the question: 'What characteristics does an ideal co-ed have?' Joe Reister: My ideal co-ed would be at least 5 feet 6 inches tall, brunette with brown eyes, agreeable disposition, have lots of pep. She must like all sports, be a good dancer, have a winning personality, and be at least slightly intelligent. She must be a good conversationalist. H. S. Money: A brilliant mind would be divine, but a sweet smile is more worth while... in a co-ed. One full of pep with tripping step is too desired to be required by me... 'nuf sed. Carroll Ball: I married mine. Marvin Wachs: There ain't no such animal. An ideal co-ed has any characteristics; if she were an ideal she wouldn't be a co-ed; if she were a co-ed she couldn't be anyone's ideal—and anyway, don't get conceited and think you pick the woman—she does the choosing and makes you like it. Coleman Smith: My ideal co-ed would be a good sport and not expect boys to spend too much money on her. She would refrain from smoking and chewing gum in public. Delmar Adams: My ideal co-ed would be a good mixer and not only associate with members of her own sex but with men also. She would try to amass a great number of pins or break every one's heart. She would be pals with everyone. Gil Robinson: Height 5 feet 2 inches, decidedly brunette, brown eyes, exceedingly thin, an excellent line, home economics major, dress style preferred, fair dater and an excellent 'sitter out'. She must 'keep kissable', have that 'school-girl complexion', know that 'it is smart to be thrifty', 'reach for a coke instead of a sweet.' She must remember that 'Nature in the sex is seldom mild.' And forget that 'such popularity (as hers) must be deserved.' Nick Chepeleff: I had an ideal before I came to the university. Park Smith: My ideal co-ed would be neat, well-dressed, nice family, not snobbish, lots of open dates for me only. Oh, well, who wants to be an ideal anyhow!

Plummer has turned down several offers to play with such outstanding teams as the Green Bay Packers and the mouth Spartans but would much rather play for dear old Podunk.
