Commission will examine mine disaster

By GEORGE W. HACKETT
Associated Press Writer

LOUISVILLE — Willard Stanley knows about the gales that so often come to coal mining families. He lost five relatives deep beneath the earth, and escaped death once himself.

But his 42 years in the coal fields haven't given the state commissioner of mines and miners any clues to tragedies like the two that claimed the lives of nine Kentucky miners last week.

"I'm baffled and appalled," Stanley said. "God knows I'm searching for the answers."

So is Gov. John Y. Brown Jr., who appointed a special commission Saturday to examine every aspect of

Miners' strike continues

Small group pickets for two years

By MARK R. CHELLGREN
Associated Press Writer

GRAND RIVERS — Larry Rowland seemed almost dazed by the activity. David Fox, too, appeared detached from the scene. Herbert Howell just leaned up against a building and chewed his tobacco.

The three men are beginning to feel a sense of futility. They still boast of togetherness and a sense of purpose, but the expressions are almost rote, coming more from habit than a feeling of inner strength.

Two years on a picket line can do that to a man.

It was Jan. 22, 1980 when Rowland, Fox, Howell and the other seven employees struck the Badgett Coal Terminal Co., a barge-loading dock which sits in a cove off Kentucky Lake in Livingston County. They had voted to join the United Mine Workers despite threats by owner C.W. Badger that he would never recognize a union. They all felt that the strike would be a short one. After all, they were only 10 men. They felt that a union contract would not cost Badger that much money.

But Badger stuck to his word. And the strikers pitched a tent on top of the hill near the entrance to the dock. After a few months, a small white shack — a more permanent structure — took its place.

And each day, each shift, one of the men walked the picket lines. A forlorn figure fighting a battle that he increasingly felt was useless, but necessary.

On Friday, Jan. 22, 1982, all 10 men gathered for the second anniversary of the walkout. Lee Roy Patterson, District 23 president of the UMW was there to pledge his support for the men and to promise action toward resolving the dispute. A gaggle of reporters recorded the event.

Rowland shrugged it off. So many rumors about settlements had come out and gone. So many rumors of the sale of the dock had passed him by. So many lonely days and nights on the picket lines had left him resigned to his fate, almost shell shocked.

None of the men, including Patterson, are even sure who owns the dock anymore. Patterson told the men that AMCA Resources, a Canadian company with mine holdings in Hopkins and Muhlenberg counties had leased the facility. At least he thinks so.

The last tentative contract talks with that enterprise were held in March 1981.

Fox, especially, is disillusioned with the whole affair. Now 60, he started working at the dock 31 years ago. He had never been in a union in his life. Friends say he voted union just to go along with his co-workers.

These days, he takes the $100 a month from the union. The money, which doesn't go far, sticks in his throat. He has worked for a living for five decades. He takes odd jobs and serves papers as a part-time deputy for the sheriff's office.

"Sometimes, I can make as much with about two-thirds capacity of the state they should have."

Stanley said Saturday the UMW will have three members on the newly created commission, which also will include non-union miners and coal operators.

He said he doesn't think the rash of accidents is just coincidence, nor is he ready to find fault with the state's mine inspection programs.

"Our office conducted 7,659 inspections last year, a 13 percent increase over the previous year," Stanley said. "The governor has assured me that if the federal government cuts back on its program, he will take up the slack. We've never had any cutbacks in our budget."

Stanley said he tried to contact Church on Saturday to tell him about the commission but was unsuccessful. The UMW leader has called for the

New program will try to solve state's medical problems

By JANET FAHRAR
Staff Writer

About a third of Kentucky's counties are experiencing critical shortages of medical professionals, and the UK and University of Louisville medical centers have inaugurated a program intended to help solve the problem.

The six-week program, financed by the 1980 General Assembly, is available to high school seniors from over 60 rural counties interested in studying medicine and dentistry. It is intended to attract students from rural areas to the UK and UL medical and dental schools in an effort to improve the state's geographic distribution of doctors and dentists.

"These students will come from counties all over the state," said Jack Wiggs, director of the summer program. "It is available to students in almost all of the counties in the southeastern part of the state, and in the many counties west of Fayette County that are short of medical care.

"This is a vital program," Emmett Burnam, director of Health Careers Opportunities, said. "We hope to encourage more students from rural counties, and more minority students, to get involved in health careers. We feel they are more likely to go back to the rural areas that are so desperately in need of medical care."

The students will have an opportunity to experience course work in both medicine and dentistry, and will receive help in making the transition to college life.

"The students will receive instruction in biology, math, English, and writing. They will be able, also, to enhance their writing skills, learning skills, and their ability to deal with standardized tests," Burnam said.

"We want to give these students an idea of what type of course load they'll be dealing with, and we want them to be competitive," Wiggs said. "Our success will be if they enter college, do well, go on to become doctors and go back to their rural counties.

"The students will be able to rotate studies in dentistry, pharmacy, and medicine," Burnam said. "They will be able to work at Cardinal Hill Hospital and at other private facilities, and at the Central Kentucky Blood Center. They will also be able to do emergency room duty, and will take various field trips to various health agencies."

"This program is absolutely free for the students," Burnam said. "In fact, they will receive a stipend for their participation, and will be living in University housing."

"Twenty-five students will be selected to participate in the session at UK, which will last from June 10 to July 23. Twenty-five others will be chosen for a session at UL from July 6 to August 10."

The regional staff of the Council on Higher Education will visit public and private high schools in eligible counties during February to discuss the program with interested students.

Open records laws to see little change for students

By JOHN LITTLE
Assistant Managing Editor

Despite President Ronald Reagan's proposals to alter many open-record laws, Albert Ockerman, dean of admissions and registrar, said those governing student records will probably remain unchanged.

"I haven't seen anything come across (professional circles)" which would indicate any changes, said Ockerman, a member of the board of directors of the American Council on Education.

John Shattuck, national legislative director of the American Civil Liberties Union, agreed it is unlikely Reagan will attempt to change the Family Education Rights and Privacy Act of 1974, the present law governing open records for students. "I haven't heard anything pending."

The controversial act, better known as the "Buckley Amendment," originally prohibited distribution of federal funds to any educational institution denying students and their parents the right to inspect and review any and all official records, files and data directly related to the student.

It also restricted the release of records to third parties without consent of a student or parent.

School officials at the time argued the amendment would allow public viewing of letters of recommendation and other confidential documents. The law was later changed, permitting only students to view their records.

The amendment was inspired by reports of abuses in elementary and secondary schools. In one such case, "homosexual tendencies" was allegedly written in the permanent record of a 9-year-old who hugged a classmate.

Shattuck said the ACLU "strongly supported" the Buckley Amendment.

George Dexter, associate registrar for records and registration, said he also supports the amendment.

Dexter said UK keeps records on such things as the Buckley Amendment transcripts, American Collegiate Test and Scholastic Achievement Test scores, applications for admission, final class rolls, grade transcripts and medical records.

Before the Buckley Amendment was enacted, University policy determined whether or not these records would be released. Dexter said the laws "take away from us a value judgement. It makes it easier for us."

"In a minute, I think people have a right to get into a record themselves and have a right to control them to a certain extent," said Shattuck. "The records) may determine what their careers and life will be like." Dexter said approximately 15,000 requests for student records are made annually, and the vast majority are for transcripts. He also said the number of requests has remained unchanged throughout the years, despite the changes made by the amendment.

James Alcorn, director of the UK Placement Service, said students usually request grade transcripts to show to potential employers.

"When an employer is talking to a student, he might want their transcript," said Alcorn. "The student will sign a form at the placement service. We will then take it to the registrar's office and get a reproduction of the transcript."

Dexter said students can also obtain transcripts directly from the registrar's office at a cost of $1 per copy, noting that service usually takes no more than a day.

Ockerman said the only public information contained in a student transcript, said Alcorn. "The student will sign a form at the placement service. We will then take it to the registrar's office and get a reproduction of the transcript."

Ockerman said records may be made if there is a "possible threat or imminent damage to the public, but even in such cases 'it is gone through on a careful basis.'"

STUDENT ONLY

The health service also keeps records on the number of visits students make to health services and any drugs prescribed.

Records are given out "strictly at the students' request," said Cox. "We all feel that if there is a breach of confidence the students won't trust us."

Students' records are sometimes circulated among physicians within the service, Cox said, adding this "would happen in any group practice."

If a student wants to see his or her medical record, "what we try to do is ask the student to sit down with a physician," said Cox. "Sometimes they read our record and misinterpret a note in the chart."

She said students most often request medical records for use as evidence in court cases stemming from accidents.

Cox said medical records may also be given out if subpoenaed (in which case the student concerned is notified) or if a student is likely to cause injury to himself or others, in which case pertinent information will be made available if it will reduce the danger.

San Fran, Montana

Joe Cool beats Cincy, leaves his city in a state of ecstasy

By BRUCE WOLFE
AP Sports Writer

PONTIAC, Mich. — Joe Montana, displaying the guile and flair of a riverboat gambler, engineered two long touchdown drives after San Francisco's youthful secondary swiped the ball from the Cincinnati Bengals, and the 49ers rolled to a 26-21 victory yesterday in Super Bowl XVI.

Montana, executing Coach Bill Walsh's innovative offense with electrifying ease, and a spate of turnovers which kept Cincinnati off the scoreboard, helped the 49ers roll to a record 20-point halftime lead.

The Bengals roared to life behind quarterback Ken Anderson in the second half, scoring on his 5-yard run and two passes to tight end Dan Ross.

But the difference was a goal-line stand of epic proportions in the third period by the San Francisco defense — the third time Cincinnati had been denied so much as a point within 10 yards of the 49ers' end zone.

Ultimately, it was that defense, a heady mix of grizzled veterans and kids just a year off campus, that carried the 49ers to one of the most remarkable turnarounds in National Football League history. The team, which just two years ago had staggered through its second consecutive 2-14 season, reached the pinnacle this time — its first Super Bowl championship.

Montana, in only his third year in the NFL, outplayed Anderson, his veteran counterpart on the Bengals, in the first half. He scored the 49ers' first touchdown on a 1-yard dive, then passed 11 yards to fullback Earl Cooper for a second score.

Each was set up by a Cincinnati turnover deep in San Francisco territory. Free safety Dwight Hicks, the only veteran in the 49ers' secondary, intercepted an Anderson pass at the 5-yard line and ran it out of danger to the 32. In 11 plays, one of them a flea-flicker pass good for 14 yards, Montana put the 49ers on the scoreboard with 5:52 remaining in the opening period.

And 2½ minutes into the second quarter, after Anderson had drilled a pass to Cris Collinsworth at the 49ers' 20-yard line, Eric Wright stripped the ball from the Cincinnati wide receiver and fellow rookie cornerback Lynn Thomas pounced on the fumble.

Twelve plays later, Montana's flare pass to Cooper, who bowled over two Bengals at the goal line, climaxed the 92-yard scoring drive, the longest in Super Bowl history. It surpassed by 3 yards one by Dallas in Super Bowl XIII.

Having broken one Super Bowl record, the 49ers proceeded to shatter another, scoring on two Ray Wersching field goals just 13 seconds apart in the final minute of the first half.

The first, a 26-yarder, came 15 seconds short of halftime. Then, on the kickoff, Cincinnati's Archie Griffin fumbled the ball, and so did his brother Ray. Mill McColl fell on it for the 49ers, and after an illegal procedure penalty pushed them back 5 yards to the 10, Wersching kicked a 22-yarder with two seconds left on the clock.

Pittsburgh had scored twice in 19 seconds apart against Dallas in Super Bowl XIII.

The two field goals gave the 49ers a 20-0 lead, the most lopsided halftime score in Super Bowl history.

The Bengals' second-half charge cut the 49ers lead to 20-14 with 10:06 to play, and San Francisco's situation was suddenly very precarious. But the 49ers' offense, which had turned sluggish and conservative, woke up behind Montana's 22-yard pass to Mike Wilson and Ricky Patton's key runs to set up Wersching's third field goal, a 40-yard boomer with 5:25 to play. That opened a 25-14 margin.

Then Wright, the rookie right cornerback, nailed the spike in the Bengals' coffin, intercepting Anderson near midfield with 5:07 to go and racing 25 yards to the Cincinnati 22-yard line.

From then on, it was just a matter of time, and the 49ers ate it up. They stayed on the ground as the seconds ticked away, punching slowly, steadily toward the end zone.

Finally, with 1:57 to go, they put away this first Snow Belt Super Bowl as Wersching kicked his fourth field goal, a 23-yarder.

Anderson drove the Bengals to one more score, a 3-yard pass to Ross in the middle of the end zone as the 49ers' defense laid back during the entire march, looking to avoid the bomb.

It came, though, with just 16 seconds to go. And when Dwight Clark, the hero of San Francisco's a National Conference championship victory over Dallas, made another decisive catch — on the inside kick — the victory was secure.

Even before the final gun, Walsh was lifted on his players' shoulders, and young Eddie DeBartolo Jr., the team's owner, kissed his father as they stood on the sidelines. Meanwhile, Montana cradled one final snap at midfield, and the 49ers charged off the field in triumph.

While 20 mph winds and 15-degree temperatures chilled those outside, 81,270 paying customers watched the game in the fiberglass-domed stadium's controlled 68-degree temperature.

Montana rates performance average

PONTIAC, Mich. — Quarterback Joe Montana, the Most Valuable Player in Super Bowl XVI, gave himself a passing grade but not a high one for his performance in San Francisco's 26-21 victory over the Cincinnati Bengals yesterday.

Asked what he thought his mark should be after completing 14 of 22 passes for 157 yards, Montana grinned. "Oh, B-minus, maybe C," he said.

Why that low?

"There were times I should have gotten out of there on the blitz, times I could have done better."

Montana said he felt that the 49ers' Super Bowl victory was a vindication of a team which was underrated all year.

"People around the country still didn't believe in us," he said, "even after we beat Dallas, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and the others."

Montana was asked if he ever thought that winning the Super Bowl could be this easy.

"Who said it was easy?" he replied.

Bengals blame Super Bowl jitters for loss

By JOE KAY
AP Sports Writer

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The Cincinnati Bengals think they were done in by a case of Super Bowl jitters.

Bengals tight end Dan Ross said the team was awestruck when it took the field yesterday and promptly gave up 20 first-half points to the San Francisco 49ers, going on to lose Super Bowl XVI 26-21.

"It was just like stage fright. It got it out of us to get used to it and get it out of our system," said Ross, who said a Super Bowl record with 11 catches, two of them for touchdowns.

"I was in awe of everything. When we first came out I was hyperventilating. I couldn't breathe. I think when we walked on the field it finally hit me where we were — in the Super Bowl."

The big difference is that they played loose and we didn't. They didn't let it get to them," Ross said.

Bengals Coach Forrest Gregg, who had been through the rigors of three Super Bowls as a player, said the week-long hoopla caught up with his team from the start. The Bengals recovered a 49ers' fumble on the kickoff, but failed to convert the turnover into points as quarterback Ken Anderson was intercepted deep in 49ers' territory.

"These guys were not tight all week long, not at all. But I think that when we got that first opportunity and didn't take advantage, they started thinking about what could have been instead of what was happening," Gregg said. "I know we didn't play well in the first half. I think we were afraid of making mistakes."

The 49ers drubbed the Bengals 21-3 in their regular-season meeting Dec. 6, when the Bengals turned the ball over six times. Wide receiver Cris Collinsworth said the 49ers simply outplayed the Bengals in both games.

Collinsworth pointed to a dramatic goal-line stand in the third quarter, when the 49er defense held the Bengals on four straight plays from inside the 2-yard line.

"We've been able to score from inside the 5-yard line all year long," Collinsworth said. "They not only stopped us this time, they stopped us the last time we played. You have to give them credit. They won 15 of their last 16 ball games."

Several of the Bengals sat stoned on stools in front of their lockers in the crowded Cincinnati dressing room.

Gregg said he told them that they had nothing to be ashamed of.

"Nobody expected us to be here," Gregg said. "They are going to feel bad for a while, but not for very long."

Collinsworth added: "We made it to the Super Bowl. That's the first step. I'd like to think of this as the beginning of an era rather than the end of a year."

Only Missouri, Texas still undefeated

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

You can toss another undefeated Top Twenty team into the basket.

With eighth-ranked Idaho's 83-51 loss to Montana Saturday night, only two undefeated teams were left in Division I college basketball — No. 2 Missouri and No. 7 Texas.

"If anybody had to beat Idaho, I'm glad it was us," said Montana Coach Mike Montgomery after halting the Vandals' 16-game winning streak.

"It's fitting that Montana got to be the one after the great games these teams have played in the past few years."

Montana had lost its three previous meetings with Idaho — including the final contest in the conference playoffs last year that determined which team advanced to the NCAA tournament.

"It's about time we got a break," said Montgomery. "We had lost a couple of two-point games this year when we missed last-second shots."

Montana guard Doug Selvig hit a four-foot followup shot with one second left to key the Grizzlies' victory in the Big Sky Conference showdown.

Idaho Coach Don Monson said he didn't want to take anything away from Montana, but he complained that his team had to play successive games on the road on consecutive nights. The Vandals beat Montana State 49-38 Friday night in Bozeman — 200 miles from Missoula.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Center Ralph Sampson keyed a 10-3 spurt at the beginning of the second half that sparked No. 3 Virginia to a 74-56 victory over No. 17 Louisville in a nationally televised college basketball game yesterday.

It was the second defeat to a Virginia team in two days for the Cardinals, who lost 78-76 to Virginia Tech Saturday.

The Cavaliers, 18-1, were leading only 38-35 at the half, but Sampson dropped in eight points and Jeff Jones hit a jumper to move out to a 48-38 advantage at 15:25.

Three minutes into the Lady Kats game Saturday against Michigan, Lady Wolverine coach Gloria Soluk could be heard yelling at her team, "Be patient, settle down."

Unfortunately for Soluk, her team was anything but patient in a 98-71 loss to the Kats at Memorial Coliseum. Michigan took 82 shots from the field, making only 30, for a poor 36.5 shooting percentage. The Lady Kats fared much better, hitting 42 of 75 shots for 56 percent, including a red-hot 65.0 percent in the second half.

"We rushed things entirely too much," Soluk said afterward. "Kentucky plays a running game and we just couldn't keep up with them."

The Lady Kats took control of the game midway through the first half in the contest, using their height advantage to spark several uncontested layups off the fast break and to gain a 37-18 rebounding advantage in the first 20 minutes of play.

Lady Kat coach Terry Hall, however, wasn't pleased with her team's play in the first half — even though it held a comfortable 45-32 lead.

"We play the way our opponents play," Hall said. "We found out early that we could do what we wanted and still win."

That was the main problem, according to Hall. "I told them at halftime they were content just to win," she said. "They weren't playing with any pride at all."

Pride or not, the Lady Kats continually beat the overmatched Michigan squad down the court for easy baskets. "After the first five minutes we were able to beat them down the court every time," Hall said. "Everything that we tried worked."

The fast tempo didn't slow any in the second half as Michigan continued its suicidal running tactics, digging itself into a deep hole it couldn't crawl out of.

Lack of quickness wasn't the only problem for Michigan in the final period, as poor shooting and rebounding continued to hamper the Wolverines.

"Michigan didn't do anything to stop us in the second half," Hall said. "They didn't press or play man-to-man at all. I was surprised."

Kentucky, which placed six players in double figures, was led by Valerie Still's 27 points. Still was tied for game scoring honors with Michigan freshman Peg Harte, who hit on 11 of 24 shots.

The game also marked the return of Lady Kat forward Tayna Fogle. Fogle, who injured her eye in a fall last week, played 32 minutes, scored 14 points (on 7-of-11 shooting) and pulled down 10 rebounds.

"She appeared to have a lot better vision today," Hall said. "Against Old Dominion we had to play her on the left side only because of her eye. She played really well today."

The win lifts Kentucky's record to 13-4 while Michigan falls to 10-5. Kentucky will travel to Nashville for a game with Vanderbilt Tuesday and then move on to Knoxville for a game with arch-rival Tennessee on Thursday. The Lady Kats' next home game is set for Jan. 31 against Memphis State.

Virginia, Sampson rip Louisville, 74-56

Louisville managed to trim the lead to 56-50 with 5:04 left when Jerry Eaves hit a 16-footer following a Virginia turnover.

The Cardinals, however, went cold from the outside and were outscored 18-6 the rest of the way.

Montana

The 49ers' quarterback said his team's poor field position through much of the second half dictated a more conservative play selection than San Francisco had used in building a 20-halftime lead.

"We did exactly what (Coach) Bill (Walsh) told us not to," he said. "At halftime, we said we can't get big penalties and let the momentum switch. But the first four plays, there were three penalties in the second half."

Sampson, a 7-foot-4 junior, finished the game with 26 points and 10 rebounds. Jones and his running mate at guard, Othell Wilson, contributed 17 points each.

Louisville, 11-6, was led in scoring by Eaves with 21 points and Derek Smith with 17.

"After that, we had bad field position and they dictated what we could do."

Montana said that the Super Bowl victory was not something the 49ers had thought about at the beginning of the year.

"It was tough to think Super Bowl," he said. "We wanted to improve our record, that's all. We had three rookies starting in the defensive backfield and me starting for the first time."
