unless certain steps are taken immediately that a collapse of the world was inevitable. Ehrlich commented that unless changes take place in the next few years that people might as well drink through the disaster.

Ehrlich Presents Grim Forecast For the Earth

Dr. Paul Ehrlich, ecologist and author of "The Population Bomb," spoke at UK last night and forecast a grim future for the world in the coming century due to overpopulation and misuse of natural resources.

Dr. Ehrlich, a Stanford professor, dispensed an overwhelming array of statistics to back up his argument that the world's growth rate is too high, that it has a built-in inertia to keep it growing for at least another 60 years even if zero population were started now, and that the world is doing nothing to prepare for the expected doubling of its population in the next 50 years.

After telling the horrors he sees as facing the world, Dr. Ehrlich discussed his solutions to them. He emphasized that overpopulation and ecology must be dealt with simultaneously. To fight one without fighting the other would be self-defeating, he said.

Ehrlich told the large audience in Memorial Coliseum that the national economy is geared to turning natural resources into rubbish. To improve this, he suggested manufacturing cars with a life of 30 years. Then whatever is left could be recycled.

Ehrlich felt politics can be the solution to the problems he presented. Believing strongly in the U.S. political system, Ehrlich stated that if enough people would take an avid interest, it would be workable.

Ehrlich concluded his talk by answering audience questions and further explaining his main points.

Three Gain Immunity in Kidnapping Conspiracy Hearings

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Two women and a man were granted immunity and directed Wednesday to testify before a federal grand jury probing an alleged bomb-kidnap plot involving three Roman Catholic priests and a nun.

A Jesuit priest, however, balked at testifying, saying he was duty bound not to disclose information given him in confidence.

Two of the three granted immunity testified before the jury and said they had answered all questions. The third agreed to testify.

The Jesuit, the Rev. J. William Michelman of Baltimore, vice principal of a school for black youths, also said he was being harassed because he was a character witness at a bail hearing last week for three of the six defendants in the bomb-kidnap plot.

The six, including pro-peace priest Philip Berrigan, are accused of conspiring to kidnap presidential adviser Henry Kissinger and blow up the heating systems in five Washington, D.C., buildings on Feb. 22. Father Michelman asked U.S.

District Judge R. Dixon Herman to quash the subpoena, and to direct the grand jury to limit the scope of its inquiry.

"No priest of any regularly established church or religious organization who, while in the course of his duties has acquired information from any person secretly and in confidence, shall be compelled or allowed without consent of such person to disclose that information in any legal proceedings before any grand jury," the priest said in a petition.

Herman set a hearing on the request for Thursday morning. Indicted in the case are three Roman Catholic priests, one former priest now married to an ex-nun, a Pakistani graduate student, and a nun.

All are free on bail except Father Berrigan, who is serving a prison term for destroying draft board records. The government contends he masterminded the plot while in the Lewisburg Penitentiary near here.

Sister Jogues Egan, 52, of New York City, one of seven persons named as co-conspirators but not charged, earlier this week refused to testify before the grand jury despite a grant of immunity and was found guilty of contempt of court. She was ordered jailed until she agreed to testify or for the life of the grand jury which could last another 16 months.

Jack Levine, attorney for Sister Jogues, said he would ask the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia to set aside the contempt citation and free the nun.

Granted immunity Wednesday after a brief legal argument were Patricia Rom, 27, and Zoia Horn, 52, both librarians at Bucknell University in Lewisburg, and Joseph M. Jojnt, 35, Silver Springs, Md., an elevator engineer who works for the General Services Administration in Washington.

Miss Rom was the first to go before the jury after the judge promised they wouldn't be endangering their constitutional protection under the Fifth Amendment. Jojnt testified later.

"Their testimony is necessary to the public interest of the United States," Herman ruled. "They are protected as long as this court sits."

Father Michelman, in making a legal fight against testifying, said he was being harassed because he was one of 12 character witnesses for three defendants freed in $25,000 bail each in the custody of Lawrence Cardinal Shehan, archbishop of Baltimore.

They are two priests, the Rev. Joseph Wenderoth, 35, and the Rev. Neil McLaughlin, 30, and a former priest, Anthony Scoblick, 30, now married to an ex-nun. All are from Baltimore.

SG Book Exchange Termed 'Success'

The Student Government Book Exchange has been deemed a "very satisfactory success" by its director, Stephen LaBreche.

About 700 students sold their books to the SG Exchange in its first semester of operation. Sales amounted to about $4,400. This figure exceeded the costs of paying back the students and other miscellaneous expenses, so the surprising outcome was profit.

Free University, which supplied the labor for the Book Exchange, will receive $297 of the profit from sales. Additional money will be used to finance the supplement to the Student Directory.

Using an experimental process, the Book Exchange was the first large-scale student co-op to be tried at UK. The co-op purpose was to increase the amount of money received by students who were selling books, and to decrease the amount paid by students buying them, by eliminating the "middle man."

LaBreche thought it was significant that students did come, both to sell and to buy. Recommendations for future book co-ops will be made to Student Government.

Some students, said LaBreche, haven't picked up their checks. Additionally, unsold books remain at the exchange. These are available in the Student Government office.

'Will': An Example of Propaganda at Work

By DANIEL E. GOSSETT
 "The Triumph of Will" will be shown Sunday and Monday nights in the Student Center Theatre.
 In order for the National Socialist Workers (Nazi) Party of Germany to grow and thrive, it had to spread the doctrine among the masses. Although the Nazi doctrine was exactly what the German people wanted to hear in the late Twenties and early Thirties, the job was still immense. The Nazis had to convince the people that Germany could regain their greatness as a nation under the leadership of Adolf Hitler and his associates.

To accomplish what amounted to the most ambitious public relations job in history, Hitler relied on Joseph Goebbels. Not only did Goebbels sell Hitler and National Socialism to the German people, he also made an art out of propaganda and persuasion.

Never one to lag behind the times, Goebbels took full advantage of the newest of the mass media, sound motion pictures. He hired an actress, Leni Riefenstahl, who had become famous in motion pictures and on the stage, to make his propaganda films.

Her general charge was to advertise the strength and promise of a "Duetschland" united behind the banner of Hitler and the Nazis. Taking into account the state of the art of cinematography in 1934, she accomplished her task with a great deal of skill and artistry.

In 1934, Leni Riefenstahl made her greatest film, "The Triumph of the Will." As the title suggests, the film was designed to tell the people that the promise of German greatness lie in the strength of Nazi leadership and that the strength of Nazi leadership grew out of determination and unity of purpose.

Riefenstahl did this in several ways. First she did thumbnail portraits of the second level administrators, the guts of the Nazi organization, emphasizing their charisma, leadership and technical expertise. An example is Tozi, who built the Autobahn, and Striker, the mayor of Nuremberg, which was the site of the most enthusiastic of the Nazi rallies.

Next, she emphasized the God-like devotion that Hitler claimed from his faithful followers. Foot after foot of film show thousands of frenzied Germans shouting "Seig Heil," "Heil Hitler," "Seig Heil."

The greatest bulk of footage, however, was dedicated to the exhibition of German military might. Parades were the order of the day with representatives from all branches of the military strutting past in sword-rattling array.

Perhaps the most insidious part of the film was the scenes showing the Youth movement in action. These were indeed the cream of German manhood. Blond, slender, strong, happy in their work and training, even an over weight WASP gets the impression that maybe this was the "master race."

Mines Bureau May Seek Penalties

WASHINGTON (AP)—The federal government report on the Hyden, Ky., mine disaster may call for civil and criminal penalties against the operators of the plant where 38 died, the Associated Press has learned.

Administration sources said, however, that strong federal steps against operators are so rare that the U.S. Bureau of Mines must get clearance from two higher Interior Fred J. Russell and the White House.

Mines Bureau Director Elbert F. Osborn already has conferred with Russell. Sources said representatives of the Interior Department were planning a meeting with the Office of Management and Budget, a key White House satellite.

The explosion occurred last month in twin mines opened in March by two brothers, Charles and Stanley Finley.

Federal inspectors cited the mines for dozens of health and safety violations during nine months of operation.

After the accident, a Bureau of Mines hearing produced testimony indicating that primer cord—a forbidden type of fuse — may have been used inside the Hyden mines, igniting coal dust.

A preliminary state probe reported that primer cord was used but blamed this on some of the blast victims and not the Finleys.

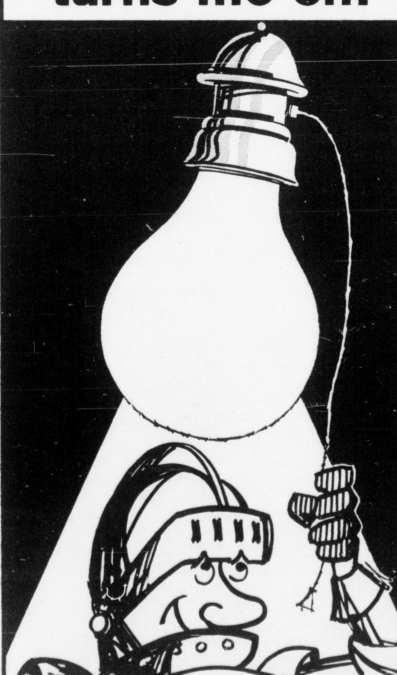

The mines have been shut down but employees on the second and third shifts signed a petition expressing confidence in the owners and expressing their willingness to work for them again.

Charles Finley said the question was being given to making a new opening in the same mountain.

The bureau's report on its findings is expected Friday.

Mine safety violations could bring large fines, but it was learned officials also were contemplating criminal charges, possibly based on conflicting testimony given at the hearing.

Architect To Fill Post Of Architect

WASHINGTON (AP) — George M. White has cracked the century-old tradition of hiring anybody but a real architect to be the U.S. Capitol architect.

The 30-year-old Cleveland, described as fun-loving and brilliant by his friends, will be the first practicing architect to hold the job since the Civil War when bricklayer-architect Thomas Ustick Walter had charge of the 131-acre complex.

White, whose appointment was announced Wednesday by President Nixon, steps into a honeycomb of dispute over what should be done with the Capitol's 150-year-old sandstone walls on the West Front.

J. George Stewart, an engineer who served as Capitol architect until he died last May, had argued that the West Front—which faces toward the White House—was so deteriorated that it might collapse with the passing of a jetplane overhead.

He promoted a West Front extension-including tourist restaurants and restrooms—that would cost an estimated $50 million or more.

But a New York architectural firm reported that the West Front could be restored to its 18th century condition for about $14 million.

Withdrawal vs Oil

Vietnam has always been a mystery to Americans.

At first we could not understand the "Eastern mind." We debated whether the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution gave President Johnson the latitude to send hundreds of thousands of troops to fight there and, later on, whether the North Vietnamese, in fact, ever did fire on U.S. ships in the Gulf of Tonkin. We wonder why anti-American feeling is so intense among the people we "protect" that some units of the South Vietnamese Army now promise to fire on American troops if they pass through villages under ARVN control, as was documented recently by CBS News.

But the biggest mystery has been why we have remained in Vietnam when nearly everyone admits we never should have been there in the first place. If the answer is "to protect our interests in that part of the world," then what are our interests?

Perhaps the answer to that is oil. American oil companies have long had an interest in this oil rich region. Right after President Sukarno's overthrow in Indonesia, the way was paved for oil companies to lease off-shore drilling sights around that country to the extent that American oil interests now lease sights all around the Indonesian islands and up into the Gulf of Siam.

Now the "Wall Street Journal" reports that the Thieu-Ky government will award 17 highly sought after leases to drill for oil off the coast of Vietnam in February to international petroleum companies, most of which are American.

Although President Nixon is pulling troops out of Vietnam, there will still be over 200,000 military personnel there after the 1972 elections.

All this leads us to question what sort of a timetable President Nixon is using to determine his "phased withdrawal" and, even more importantly, the extent to which American military activities in Southeast Asia are determined by the will to stabilize the political regimes of the region in order to insure the safety of American oil investments and interests.

Kernel Forum: the readers write

Tell It To Uncle Sam

To the Editor of the Kernel:

After reading the letter from the "Tell-it-to-Hanoi" Committee, I am severely disappointed at the lack of understanding by these people of the P.O.W. situation.

We cannot expect Hanoi to exchange prisoners until our involvement in the war ends. First, Hanoi claims no responsibility for her captured troops. If a North Vietnamese soldier is captured, he might as well have been slain, as far as Hanoi is concerned. How can we expect Hanoi to return our troops, when she shows so little concern for her own?

Secondly, to exchange prisoners would be militarily disadvantageous to Hanoi. His equipment and machinery make the American soldier much more valuable than his North Vietnamese counterpart. Why should we expect the enemy to play into our hands?

Finally, Hanoi realizes that, by holding the prisoners until the U.S. makes agreements for withdrawal, she increases the likelihood of an earlier end to U.S. involvement. She understands that, while many Americans will tolerate a prolonged foreign war that does not affect them directly, very few will be content with the continued imprisonment of relatives and friends. Why should Hanoi come to the terms of our leaders when she holds the pawns?

We must realize that the present campaign against Hanoi in behalf of our prisoners of war will accomplish nothing in terms of freeing them or obtaining better treatment. Prison camp raids and bombing threats have not been successful in the past, and there is no reason to believe they ever will be. In fact, tactics like these may well produce a reaction from Hanoi directed against the prisoners, resulting in even worse conditions for them. Writing letters only strengthens Hanoi's belief that prisoners are important enough to Americans to be used as a bargaining tool in peace negotiations and makes release before settlements even more improbable.

However, there is a campaign which may work. Write the one man who has the power to bring back the prisoners by ending our involvement in Vietnam—the President of the United States. Speak out as the concerned relative, friend, or fellow citizen of the prisoners of war being victimized by continued involvement. Let him hear from someone besides the get-tough generals and chiefs of staffs and the business leaders who are making a killing as the result of the war. He cares about the opinions of the American people, or at least he should care, because they elect him.

I sincerely believe that millions of letters directed at Washington would accomplish much more than "telling Hanoi."

A Thesis on Memorization

By WILLIE GATES III
A&S Senior

Perhaps some articulation of the important mental faculty of memorization may clarify this fundamental faculty of the human mind. Memorization is that faculty which allows the college student to satisfactorily progress toward his degree by the continuing storage of academic material into a mental silo, an anatomical structure securely protected at the anterior section of these same students. What we will be concerned with is the dynamic process whereby these silos are filled.

We can learn much from that famous Russian scientist Pavlov who did preliminary work with dogs. The relationships, nevertheless, that he found will still apply. Pavlov's dogs were shown a piece of meat, a bell was rung, and the dogs salivated. Then, after a certain number of similar trials, only the bell was rung. The dogs continued to salivate, still indicating a preference for the meat. The dogs were most likely hungry by this time.

Analyzing this experimental set-up, we see that there was a stimulus (the meat and the bell) and a response (salivation, not to be confused with salvation). This is the famous stimulus-response theory and before long people saw the advantage of this methodology in the academic realm. So, little pieces of meat were hung from classroom ceilings, bells were rung, students entered the class and salivated (or whatever else those early professors wanted).

Those who salivated best got the best grade of meat, while those whose performance was less than optimal got lesser grades of meat (more fat, etc.). Our academic perspective had taken root.

Today's academic institutions have undoubtedly become more sophisticated. Grades of meat have been replaced simply by the former; meat today would be considered a bribe—grades are simply motivations to achievement. But the same process is at work. The professor feeds out the material and the student burps (one theory uses the word regurgitate instead). All have a fabulous time in the process or theoretically should.

A thesis on this topic would not be complete without the following afternote. Just as some of Pavlov's dogs did not catch the significance of the ringing bells, some students today are in the same predicament. There seems to be no documentation on how many dogs went hungry in those early experiments (much less died, since such data would have been suppressed perhaps by the scientist, but surely by the state), but I think a case could be made that some of the dogs did experience some sort of hunger.

Perhaps the dogs should be blamed? At any rate, the next time you go into a class, the bell rings, and the professor yells chow time, tell him you've already eaten.

All letters to the editor should be typed, double-spaced and not exceed 250 words. Writers are asked to include name, classification, major, telephone number and address.

Admiral Defends Use of Airpower in Cambodia

WASHINGTON (AP)—Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, says a curb on use of American airpower in Cambodia would cause a stretchout in disengaging U.S. forces from South Vietnam.

"The use of our airpower in Cambodia, Laos and South Vietnam is the best way to achieve our objectives in Southeast Asia with minimum casualties," Moorer said in an interview.

"Those objectives are to prevent the North Vietnamese from re-establishing their supply lines, re-establishing their sanctuaries, and to prevent them from placing themselves in the position where they can again mount a major threat against allied forces in South Vietnam."

The JCS chairman said that if the U.S. air effort were limited in Cambodia, the "net effect would be to stretch out the time required for the South Vietnamese and Cambodians to develop full scale defenses."

Therefore, the nation's top military man added, "that would mean stretching out the time required for the United States to achieve the Vietnamization program and disengage U.S. forces."

Moorer spoke in an interview at a time when Senate doves have said they will revive efforts to limit the U.S. military role in Cambodia.

Some of these senators have contended the use of American airpower, which has widened in recent weeks, goes beyond the intent of Congress.

Moorer made it clear he does not want to argue with members of Congress, but he said, "There has not been a large escalation in Cambodia.

"There has been no widening of the war—no sudden great surge—that is not the case."

The JCS chairman contended that, over-all, U.S. air operations in Southeast Asia have decreased markedly.

He said, "we have very scrupulously" stayed within the intent of Congress as expressed in legislation barring use of American ground-combat troops in Cambodia, and "We have not had any advisers or any ground-combat troops in Cambodia."

Some peace leaders on Capitol Hill have again proposed legislation to require withdrawal of all U.S. troops from Indochina by the end of this year.

Moorer avoided any direct comment on this proposal, but implied his opposition to any such relatively early pullout when he said:

"We've got to consider the safety of the troops. Withdrawal must be made in an orderly manner."

Discussing the military intentions of the North Vietnamese, Moorer said their major effort right now is to re-establish their supply and logistics system which he contends was badly crippled as the result of the allied invasion of enemy sanctuaries along the South Vietnam-Cambodia border last spring.

Magazine Surveys Opinions of Youth

The Associated Press
The top social concerns troubling American youths are the war in Vietnam, environmental pollution, drug abuse and racial injustice, according to a survey released Wednesday by Seventeen magazine.

The poll said young people's choice for president in 1972 would be Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., with 20 percent of those interviewed, followed by President Nixon and former Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, D-Wis.

Interviews with 2,000 boys and girls aged 14 to 22 reported that most describe themselves as "happy" and "active," and consider personal freedom to be the nation's top asset. But three out of four believe there is really something basically wrong with American society.

Almost all said the government was not spending enough to curb pollution; most fault the government for lack of funds to help combat poverty, urban problems and educational needs. More than half feel "somewhat hopeful" about the nation's future. Nearly eight out of 10 interviewed do not agree that "violence may be the only way to achieve needed changes in society."

On other issues, the high school and college-age youth opted for more liberal abortion laws, stricter gun control legislation, lowering the voting age to 18 and establishing an all-volunteer army. They opposed the legalization of marijuana and most said they did not think the Black Panthers were being persecuted in this country.

Doctor Program Approved

The Board of Trustees has approved the request of the College of Medicine to initiate a new training program for doctors wishing to become general practitioners.

Dr. Lemon said that the program will not be initiated before July, 1979.

Mail Deluges Relatives of POWs

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The wife and mother of two prisoners of war who called for an end to the U.S. presence in Vietnam during a televised interview are being deluged with mail and telephone calls—most of it sympathetic.

"The hate mail is 10 to 1 in the minority," said Mrs. Fred Schweitzer of Oreland, Pa.

Her son, Navy Cmdr. Robert J. Schweitzer, and Cmdr. Walter F. Wilber of Columbia Crossroads, Pa., were interviewed Dec. 27 by a Canadian newsman. The interview as a prison camp near Hanoi was carried on American television.

In the interview, Schweitzer and Wilber said the war was "bad" and the United States should end it. They said they were treated well.

The interviewer said the questions were approved in advance by the North Vietnamese and part of the answers were censored. A Defense Department spokesman called it "a censored, edited enemy propaganda film."

"I need a private secretary," Mrs. Schweitzer said in a telephone interview. "I try to answer each letter and thank the writer, even the hate letters."

"We've gotten lots of letters," Mrs. Wilber said, "They were all understanding."

"Most of the letters tell us how wonderful it is that we've seen our son, and that they hope the war is over soon," Mrs. Schweitzer said. "They tell us not to worry what he said. They realize that he had to say it and it was propaganda."

Mrs. Wilber said her four children, Bruce, 17, Thomas, 15, Mark, 10, and Susan, 8, had not suffered any repercussions.

"All of their friends understand and are real nice about it," she said.

"This was the first time I've seen him on film. I had a letter last Christmas," Mrs. Wilber said. "He looked good, but I still want him to come home."

Witness Refuses to Testify

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A U.S. District Court judge heard a key witness refuse to testify against Clay L. Shaw

Wednesday, then issued a preliminary injunction against Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison, temporarily halting his efforts to get a perjury conviction against the New Orleans businessman.

Perry Raymond Russo, the star government witness in Shaw's 1969 trial on charges of conspiring to assassinate President John F. Kennedy, refused at the federal court hearing to repeat his earlier testimony that he had seen Shaw in the company of Lee Harvey Oswald.

Shaw was acquitted of the earlier charge, but Garrison then accused him of perjury because he denied he knew Oswald. Shaw has asked for a federal court order restraining Garrison from continuing the present case.

TRIUMPH OF THE WILL

Direction and artistic supervision by Leni Riefenstahl; chief cameraman, Sepp Algeier; music composed by Herbert Windt; editing by Leni Riefenstahl. German dialog with English subtitles.

The film is a technically brilliant masterpiece and the crowning achievement of Nazi propaganda, and it was immediately christened the official propaganda film of the Party. From the opening title the audience is caught up in the creation of a myth: "20 years after the outbreak of the world war; 16 years after Germany's crucifixion; 19 months after the beginning of the German renaissance; Adolph Hitler flew to Nuremberg again; to review the columns of his faithful adherents." Hitler descends from the clouds, his plane casting its shadow on Nuremberg like the Nazis' black eagle. The new Messiah makes his way through streets transformed by banners, amid scenes of quasi-religious adoration in which even a cat, an old statue and children are worshippers. The parallel with Christ could not be more explicit.

"... a two hour expression of the Nazis' fanatical devotion to Hitler and their determination to win Germany... a rhythm that becomes more and more hypnotic... recommended to serious students of the film medium, and to all thoughtful movie-goers as a top — perhaps supreme — example of what genius in this medium can accomplish."—S. F. Chronicle

Since 1941 TRIUMPH OF THE WILL has been under U.S. Department of Justice. A recent revision in the Alien Property Law, and special arrangement with Leni Riefenstahl, now makes it available for first time.

Black Caucus Organized in House

WASHINGTON (AP)—Their ranks growing and infused with a new spirit of activism, the 12 black members of the House have organized their own committee to represent the nation's 25 million blacks.

They call it the Black Caucus, and they hope by concerted action to make heard the voices of their constituents in the ghettos of Watts, Harlem, Bedford-Stuyvesant, Chicago, Detroit, St. Louis, Cleveland and Philadelphia.

"We're all dealing with the same problems," says Rep. Augustus F. Hawkins, D-Calif., "and we can do a better job if we work as a group rather than as individuals."

Hawkins was named vice chairman at the caucus organizing session Wednesday. Rep. Charles C. Diggs Jr., D-Mich., a 16-year veteran of the House, was named chairman, and Rep. Charles B. Rangel, D-N.Y., a freshman, was elected secretary.

The other caucus members are Reps. Robert N. C. Nix, D-Pa.; John Conyers, D-Mich.; Shirley Chisholm, D-N.Y.; Louis Stokes, D-Ohio; William Clay, D-Mo.; George Collins, D-Ill.; Ralph H. Metcalfe, D-Ill.; Ronald V. Dellums, D-Calif.; and Parren J. Mitchell, D-Md.

The new militancy among the blacks actually began in the last Congress with arrival of Clay and Stokes. They stirred up the older blacks, who had generally operated alone, and the caucus was organized on an informal basis.

With the seating of five more black members in the Congress last week, there was a need for a more effective organization and one was established Wednesday, complete with rules, subcommittees and a weekly meeting date.

The caucus staked out areas of concern to blacks, such as civil rights and law enforcement, housing, education and job training, and assigned each member to explore one of them and report to the caucus any action that might be taken.

The caucus also decided to require a two-thirds vote for it to a position or a course of action, a step made necessary by the wide range of activism among the members.

Caucus actions to date have included a boycott of President Nixon's State of the Union address and demand for free television time for an address of their own on the grounds Nixon ignored problems of blacks.

It was also a caucus decision to seek a seat on the House Appropriations Committee for Stokes, an assignment he got Wednesday, making him the first black to serve on that important panel.

With 12 votes the caucus is not yet strong enough to become a factor in voting on the House floor, but its members feel that will come with time. They expect to gain three or more seats in the 1972 elections and look forward to steady increases until there are 35 or 40 black members in the House.

"A lot of them should be from the South," said Hawkins, "and that should really turn things around."

Democratic Leaders Seek Nunn's Backing

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — All five House Democratic leaders formally called on Gov. Louie B. Nunn Wednesday to recommend a plan for redrawing the lines of state legislative districts to make them equal.

In a letter to Nunn, released to newsmen at a press conference, the five Democrats declared that "The people of Kentucky expect the governor and the General Assembly to work in a cooperative spirit concerning matters so vital for our common good as legislative reapportionment."

Legislature Incapable
House majority leader Terry McBrayer of Greenup said in response to a question that they were not suggesting the Legislature could not do the job itself.

"But we can do a far better job with the governor's cooperation," he declared. "The people are entitled to equal cooperation."

House speaker Julian Carroll of Paducah, replying to another question, said the only reason for the letter to Nunn was uncertainty over whether Nunn would veto a reapportionment plan adopted without his recommendation.

In that event, the $10,000 spent for each day the Legislature was in session "would be for naught," said Carroll, a Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor on a slate headed by former Gov. Bert T. Combs.

Inform In Advance
When asked if no harm would in fact result if Nunn did not veto the Legislature's reapportionment plan, Carroll repeated that the General Assembly should know in advance and avoid the uncertainty.

Carroll said he was "anxiously awaiting" Nunn's reply to the letter, which he said had been delivered to the governor's office an hour before the news conference.

While Nunn offered no comment on the letter Wednesday, he has said in the past that he would not veto any legislative reapportionment plan unless it were manifestly unfair or inequitable.

'Vast Resources'
The Democrats told Nunn that he had "the vast resources of a computer system along with scores of technical and statistical advisors which give only the necessary mechanics to produce legislation which will more likely meet the requirements set out by the federal courts."

"Even if you were to make these resources available to the General Assembly," the letter continued, "we still would not have the vital element of your personal recommendation as governor."

Nunn's press secretary, Larry Van Hoose, said Nunn had offered the LRC the use of the state computer system two weeks ago to help in the reapportionment task. And in fact some such work already has begun, he added.

No Political Connotations
Carroll also said he hoped that Nunn, in his reply to the legislators, would not attach political connotations to their letter nor "use the old theory of legislative independence."

In the past, Nunn has said legislative reapportionment was strictly a matter for the General Assembly and he did not feel his office should interfere.

Soderberg Airs Views on UK

McCowan Returns

By MIKE TIERNEY
Kernel Sports Editor

Mark Soderberg has left the University of Kentucky, and his memories, which are quite harsh, have remained with him.

Soderberg was recruited from Huntington Beach, Cal., three years ago with the hope of adding his name to the privileged list of UK basketball greats.

His association with the basketball team, however, was unhappy and, after leaving for a week last year, Mark exited for good after the Mississippi road trip this season.

"I couldn't take it any longer," Mark said Wednesday from the University of Utah in Salt Lake City, where he is currently enrolled.

Last Year

Soderberg says that he left school near the end of last semester because Coach Rupp, in order to better the chances of Dan Isel making the All-American team, played Isel so that he could maintain his high scoring average.

"I feel that I got shafted," said Mark, "but they wanted to make the guy an All-American."

"I want to clear up the stories that said my father brought me back. He just rode back to Lexington with me to give me some company. But it wasn't he that convinced me to give it another try."

"Coach Rupp said, 'You'll play.' So I decided to sit on the bench that year and work that summer. I listened to him (Rupp)."

Soderberg knew he was needed at UK in case Isel was injured or was in foul trouble. But Mark felt that he was good enough to play more, just like the other substitutes.

"Take Tom Parker, for example," he said. "He sat on the bench until Larry Steele broke his hand, then came in and averaged 20 points."

Gets His Chance

Soderberg finally got his chance when Isel fouled out with 10 minutes remaining against Jacksonville in the Midwest Regional final. He played brilliantly against All-American Artis Gilmore and almost singlehandedly brought UK back to victory.

"I did my job at Jacksonville," he recalled. "I don't think I played great because, since I sat on the bench all year, I wasn't in shape. But I proved, or so I thought, that I could play."

Mark passed up a summer job in order to improve his game. In California, he practiced day and night against stars like Sidney Wicks.

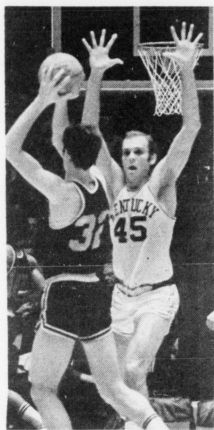

"Nobody there (UK) knows this, but I looked at Colleges all over the country, even the northeast, this summer," he said.

Instead Mark decided to give UK another chance.

"OK, this year his (Rupp's) philosophy is supposed to change," Mark continued. "I come back and he doesn't even know who to start. Everybody said I'll start because he'll go with the older fellow. That's ridiculous."

"I broke my hand—that hurt my chances. But there wasn't anybody on that squad that worked harder on his game than I."

Mark felt that this year's team had the potential for greatness.

MARK SODERBERG

Mark, Payne, Andrews "You got a bunch of guys who could win the whole thing," he said. "First Randy Noll, who I thought was going to be great, quit school."

"So I figured the starting lineup would be (Tom) Payne, me and (Tom) Parker on the front-line. Mike Casey, of course, and Larry Steele should be the guards. Nobody can stay with Steele one-on-one."

Eventually, Mark began a ferocious struggle with sophomores Payne and Jim Andrews for the center position. Andrews was switched to forward and Payne, the first Negro basketball player at UK, won the battle.

When Mark quit school, he had played an average of 14 minutes per game. His records show an average of 7.1 points and 5.9 rebounds.

Mark Discusses Rupp Soderberg's memories of Coach Rupp are a strange mixture of respect and scorn.

"Coach Rupp was the greatest coach. But other coaches are passing him up now."

"Nevertheless, I really respect that man."

"Rupp always says, 'Well, my boys come in to talk to me all of the time.' That's a joke."

"There isn't even any room for asking questions. There's such a barrier between Rupp and his players."

"Since Payne is the first Negro here, Rupp tried to bend over backwards to let everybody know he wasn't prejudiced. There's no question. He gave Payne more leeway than the others. There's a double standard."

"The assistant coaches don't have any support. If they try to talk to us, Rupp will get upset and say they're trying to steal his job."

"While he remains there, I really feel sorry for the players."

Mark Criticizes Program

"There is turmoil in the basketball program, but the fans don't know about it," Mark said. How can you argue with success?

"But there's no jelling between the coaches and players, and the coaches themselves."

"There's something missing on the club. Nobody got along on the whole program. All they're worried about is winning the NCAA."

"It was like I was some kind of radical, coming from that state (California). They even fussed about my hair and I don't have that much at all."

"They take a defensive attitude that you're trying to pull something over on them."

"And Claude Vaughan—he trailed us everywhere. When Rupp goes, he knows he'll go."

"I was really let down. They really stabbed me in the back."

"They've got a lot of problems. The people that are running the show—they'll hush 'em down. But the problems are there."

Not All Disappointments

Despite all the disappointments Mark underwent at UK, he still cherishes some good memories.

"The people of Kentucky are great supporters of the program. That's the big drawing card they have," he said.

"That freshman team we had—they were Number One in the nation."

"The people is the main reason I hate leaving. They make you feel at home when you're 2,000 miles away."

Mark then went a little deeper and analyzed his reasons for coming to UK.

"I wanted to contribute to what I thought was going to be a great team. Also I wanted to contribute to my personal development."

"When I left, I wasn't doing either."

"I began to think, 'Maybe it's myself. Maybe basketball isn't that important. Maybe I should just be a benchwarmer and worry about getting a good education.'"

"But I decided that I wanna play. I'll do anything they tell me to improve my game."

Enjoys Utah

Soderberg seems relieved that he now lives in the less tense atmosphere that exists at Utah.

"There's no hassle between the coaches and players. No place is perfect, but they have a great program here. And the sports facilities have to be the best anywhere."

"I've been working out with the team. I know I'm gonna play, since their starting center is graduating."

There is no doubt that Mark misses UK. He often spoke in the present tense, as if he were still a student here.

But he has found his place at the University of Utah.

"All I want to do is to get a chance to prove myself."

By CARL FAHRINGER
Kernel Staff Writer

Last fall, Bob McCowan was the main attraction in the fraternity football competition. His quarterbacking abilities were important to Sigma Alpha Epsilon, but McCowan wasn't quite satisfied.

A year ago, Bob was a basketball star at the intercollegiate level. He was forced to take up intramurals when Adolph Rupp dropped him from the varsity squad for training violations.

Now, McCowan has repented, and Rupp has agreed to give the hero of last year's UKIT another chance.

"After sitting out and watching them (the UK team)," McCowan said, "I decided that I really made a bad mistake."

McCowan has one remaining season of varsity eligibility, and does not want to leave the University. He decided to ask for reinstatement for one more year. The Baron's reaction was, according to McCowan, "Favorable but cautious."

"He was concerned about me," Bob said, "and about (the other) players' reaction." Another factor was Rupp's reputation as a disciplinarian.

BOB MCCOWAN

"He knows that any more trouble would mean bad publicity for him," McCowan pointed out.

McCowan's situation is unusual in that he was on probation for a rules violation when he and Randy Poole were involved in a second incident while on a road trip to Mississippi and Mississippi State last year. However, Rupp has taken McCowan in, and the sharpshooting guard is on scholarship this semester. He started working out with the team yesterday. "My father passed away," Bob said, "and I just got back last Thursday. Then they had that road trip (to LSU and Alabama), so today (Wednesday) was my first day of practice."

Next year, McCowan will use his last year of eligibility, hopefully adding some experience at the guard position, which will be needed after the graduation of Mike Casey. This semester, he hopes to "help the team in practice."

"It's similar to being redshirted," Bob said, "and about (the other) players' reaction."

Bob already knows that he does not have a starting job sewn up. He will definitely get stiff competition from Ronnie Lyons and Ray Edelman who are on this year's freshman team. In addition, Bob points out, "(Kent) Hollenback and (Stan) Key will be back, too."

"We'll be strong at guard next year," he said. "We'll just practice and see who gets it (the starting position)."

"It'll be a lot of work—whoever makes it will deserve it."

Penalty Trial Begins Today for Manson

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The penalty trial of Charles Manson and three women followers convicted in the Sharon Tate murders starts today with a black musician reportedly ready to testify that Manson shot him with a gun similar to one used in the killings.

Bernard Crowe, 28, of Hollywood has said he has a bullet lodged in his back from the alleged shooting incident at his apartment on Aug. 1, 1969, eight days before the Tate killings.

A witness at the Tate trial said he went to the Crowe apartment with Manson and saw him enter carrying a long barreled revolver.

Crowe was the first scheduled witness of 10 the prosecution said it would call in trying to persuade the jury to sentence the four defendants to death in the gas chamber.

They were convicted Monday of murder—conspiracy in the slayings of Miss Tate and six others.

Chief defense attorney Paul Fitzgerald is to present a motion alleging that the death penalty and the penalty trial required by California law are unconstitutional. He will ask that the defendants automatically be sentenced to life imprisonment.

Fitzgerald said Wednesday the penalty trial rules offered the jury no guidelines upon which to base their crucial decision between life and death.

In his motion, Fitzgerald said, "If a civilized society cannot say why one man should be executed and another not, it does not rationally, logically, take a life. Indeed, it grossly denies due process of law in inflicting death upon the basis of a trial that is capricious, discriminatory and guess-infested." He also alleged the death penalty is cruel and unusual punishment which is barred by the U.S. Constitution.

Fitzgerald said he did not expect his client, Patricia Krenwinkel, 23, to take the stand during the penalty phase. Nor was Leslie Van Houten, 21, expected to testify.

Apollo 14 Makes Final Adjustments

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—The launch team makes final adjustments today to the two Apollo 14 spaceships, certifying them for flight to the moon Sunday.

Throughout the day, the crew, working at the 320-foot level of the launch support tower, planned to remove test equipment, replace panels and check systems to make certain the command ship Kitty Hawk and the lunar module Antares are flight ready.

This operation, known as a mechanical buildup, followed two days in which propellants and pressurization gases were loaded aboard the two vehicles.

Included was installation of a conical fiberglass cover to protect the command ship during the Saturn 5 rocket's upward thrust through the atmosphere. It is discarded early in flight.

Before replacing panels around the base of Antares, workmen loaded aboard a two-wheel cart, folded to fit in a small space.

Astronauts Alan B. Shepard Jr. and Edgar D. Mitchell are to pull this rickshaw-like cart about as they explore the lunar surface. The moon buggy has containers for everything from cameras and film magazines to shovel, scoop and core tubes and 35 numbered bags into which samples are to be placed.

While astronaut Stuart A. Roosa orbits alone in Kitty Hawk, Shepard and Mitchell are to spend 33½ hours on the moon, exploring the ancient Fra Mauro highlands in a search for rocks that might hold clues to the origin of the moon.

The mechanical buildup of the spaceships was part of the countdown, which continued to progress smoothly toward the planned liftoff at 3:23 p.m., E.S.T. Sunday.

Shepard, Mitchell and Roosa planned several hours practice today in the command and lunar module simulators.
