

L. Neville and a Ky. State Salesman's Nurse at the County jail in Bell Co., Ky., August 15 1915. The little boy reckoned by the County Health Officer to weigh between sixty and seventy pounds and to be about four feet in height, aged eleven, I found locked behind two sets of iron bars, in cells with eleven white men from seventeen years up. Some of these men were confined on bad charges.
The child was held ^{in jail} on a charge of housebreaking, ^{this} contrary to Juvenile Court law. A description will show this card. L. Neville, Lexington, Ky.
